Dutch Fliers 2d In Race; Turner Is Forced Down

Parmentier, Moll Finish at Melbourne; Rivals Land on Last Lap.

U. S. Entry Balked By Faulty Motor

Melbourner, Australia (Wednesday) Oct. 24 (AP).—An American (Douglas) airliner flying the Dutch flag flashed past the pylons at Flemington race course at 10:52 a. m. today (7:52 p. m., Tuesday, Eastern standard time) to capture second place in the England-to-Australia Air Derby.

In front of wildly cheering crowds, K. D. Parmentier and J. J. Moll set down their big plane at the airport in an exciting finish to the world's greatest air race a few hundred miles ahead of Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, who were forced down by motor trouble on the last lap to Melbourne.

18 Hours Behind Winners.

Carrying three passengers, the Dutch fliers had completed the 11,300-mile journey from Mildenhall airport in 3 days 16 hours and 43 minutes, approximately 18 hours behind the winners, C. W. A. Scott and Campbell Black, of England.

Just as the Americans seemed to have every chance of getting second prize money of $7,500, the Dutchmen, with the assistance of almost the entire town, got their plane out of the mud at Albury, 160 miles from here, where they had been forced down during the night. They flew to Melbourne in three minutes less than an hour.

Turner Forced to Land.

Turner and Pangborn left Bourke at 10:20 a. m. (7:20 p. m. Tuesday, Eastern standard time), just before Parmentier reached Melbourne. They were reported later over Cobar, flying slowly, and then landed.

All that is left for Turner is the $2,500 third prize in the speed race, the smallest of five prizes at stake. The Americans were not entered in the handicap race and therefore were not eligible for two larger prizes in that event.

Engine trouble appeared to have dogged Turner and Pangborn all the way across Australia. They thought they had their oil line fixed when they left Charleville after a slow flight from Port Darwin, but further trouble developed.

Dutch Crew Still Fresh.

The Dutch crew and their passengers presented a striking contrast to Scott and Black, who raced into Melbourne yesterday for the $50,000 first prize and a $2,500 gold cup.

All the occupants of Parmentier's big "flying hotel" were well groomed and apparently as fresh as when they left London. Scott and Black had been unshaven, dishevelled and badly in need of sleep.

2 Australians Hop to Naselai

Suva, Fiji, Oct. 24 (Wednesday) (AP).—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, famous Australian flier, and Capt. P. G. Taylor, navigator, hopped today from Albert Park for Naselai Beach, 20 miles, preparatory to taking off for Honolulu in continuance of their flight of 7,365 miles from Brisbane, Australia, to Oakland, Calif.

At Naselai Beach they planned to take aboard a full load of fuel on the Lady Southern Cross, and leave within a few hours for Honolulu, 3,197 miles over the South Pacific, sparsely dotted with coral and volcanic islands.

Sir Charles hoped to reach Honolulu in 22 hours, but if he encounters difficulty he may land at Fanning Island, a coral atoll about 2,000 miles from Fiji. Gasoline has been stored there for such contingency.

Provision has been made for a landing at Wheeler Field of the United States Army, near Honolulu, and if all goes well, the Australians expect to take flight for Oakland, 2,408 miles, the day after their arrival in Hawaii.

Bronx Quadruplets Die Soon After Birth

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Quadruplets born to Mrs. Cecelia Mulligan, 25, of the Bronx, died today in Lincoln Hospital, after living only a few hours.

Mrs. Mulligan, the mother of three other children, was reported recovering.

Piccards Soar 10 Miles Into Stratosphere

Cadiz, Ohio, Oct. 23 (AP).—The stratosphere flight of the Jean Piccards came to an end in a treetop late today. The bag of their balloon was badly torn, but the gondola and valuable instruments were undamaged and the Piccards themselves were unhurt.

The Piccards, saying they believed the purpose of their flight had been accomplished, brought the huge bag down after a flight that started from Detroit and carried them an estimated 10 miles int the air.

"The flight was a success," said Mrs. Piccard soon after she climbed from the gondola, which settled amid trees near an old logging road on the John Fulton farm, 4¼ miles southwest of here.

The landing come shortly before 3 p. m., about eight hours after the Piccards soared just over the treetops at Detroit at 6:58 a. m.

The American flag the Piccards carried on their flight was left fly-

Japan Insists On 'Ratio' End, British Learn

Total Tonnage Asked as Basis of Navy Limit; U. S. in Talk Today.

London, Oct. 23 (AP).—Japan today told Great Britain she wants navies henceforth limited on the basis of their total tonnage and demands the word "ratio" be left out of future treaties.

Those were the proposals Ambassador Tsuneo Matsudaira and Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto submitted at today's Anglo-Japanese meeting formally opening conversations here among Japan, Great Britain and the United States in preparation for the 1935 naval conference.

Observers Puzzled.

The Japanese further insisted that Britain and America recognize "the principle" of equality in defensive armaments—Nippon's plan would classify ships of war as offensive and defensive weapons—and thus get rid of the "ratio" plan, which Japan maintains keeps her on an inferior footing.

Tokyo's scheme, especially as it concerned the equality principle, tonight apparently had the British perplexed. Observers were puzzled how the proposal could be inserted into an agreement.

Following the Anglo-Japanese conversation the cabinet gave the proposal long consideration.

It was indicated, however, that no decision will be reached until Japan's plans are revealed to the American delegates, Norman H. Davis and Admiral William H. Standley, at their talk tomorrow.

The British, headed by Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, probably will confer with the Americans Thursday. This will give the two powers, standing together for keeping the substance of the present treaties which Japan proposes to re-

Gandhi Won't Lead All-India Congress

Bombay, India, Oct. 23 (AP).—The Mahatma Gandhi announced today he had definitely decided to retire from leadership of the All-India Nationalist Congress. Gandhi described himself as deadweight on the congress, stunting the party's growth.

Despite repeated appeals from hundreds of members of the congress to open its meeting he insisted upon leaving—to develop powers of nonviolence, he explained.

Miami Cheers Giant Parade Of the Legion

Miami, Fla., Oct. 23 (AP).—The American Legion marched today.

For five hours these men and women, made comrades by the Great War, beat a rhythmic tramp past the reviewing stand.

From 11:30 a. m. until far into the afternoon they filled Biscayne boulevard in a seemingly never-ending procession.

Marching behind the parade marshal, Maj. Gen. Albert H. Blanding, strode infantrymen, Marines and sailors.

Band after band, drum corps after drum corps passed as cheers echoed along the blocks of grandstands and bleachers on either side of the avenue.

Virtually all of Miami's stores and business offices were closed, and public employes were given a

New Deal Aid Offers Reforms in Bank Act

Crowley's Program Lists Definite Premium to Limit Liability on Deposit Insurance as Roosevelt Prepares Speech.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Criticism of the New Deal subsided yesterday at the American Bankers Association convention as a movement for closer cooperation between the Government and private business gained momentum.

Much of the new spirit of optimism was inspired when Leo T. Crowley, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation chairman, proposed fixing a definite premium to be paid to the insurance fund annually by banks.

In behalf of the bankers, Francis M. Law, association president, pledged cooperation in a broad recovery program based on "liberal business doctrine and rational humanitarianism." He warned the Nation would not tolerate a do-nothing attitude on the part of its financiers.

Understanding Advocated.

The speeches of Crowley and Law contrasted sharply with earlier outbursts of oratory, in which President Roosevelt and his policies were openly assailed. Outstanding figures among the bankers appeared determined to promote a better understanding between the Administration and private interests.

With the bankers, in effect, proffering an olive branch to the Government, general sentiment was it would not be knocked out of their hands by Mr. Roosevelt when he addresses them tonight in Constitution Hall.

No intimation of what the President might say came from the White House. He scanned a report on business conditions submitted by Secretary Roper and conferred with George L. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, before supplying the finishing touches to his speech.

Urges Aid of Bankers.

Crowley emphasized "the Government is here to aid, not to run your business," and counseled the bankers to place their "great experience" and "great resources" at the service of the country in a fuller degree.

"The main responsibility for sound and constructive banking,

Ellen M'Adoo's Romance Hits A Racial Snag

Riverside, Calif., Oct. 23 (AP).—The question of blood and racial origin thrust itself today into the romance of Ellen Wilson McAdoo, 19-year-old granddaughter of Woodrow Wilson, and Rafael Lopez de Onate, an actor twice her age.

County Clerk D. G. Clayton, at whose office the couple filed notice yesterday of their intention to take out a license, announced he would require De Onate to "establish proof that there is no Filipino or Malay blood in his veins before I issue the license."

The daughter of Senator William G. McAdoo and De Onate registered from Hollywood when they appeared at the license bureau.

State Senator L. J. Difani appeared suddenly at the bureau today and asked Clayton to show him the application. He said he had been "retained to investigate the case."

"'A native of the Philippines,'" Difani read from the application.

The prince was well known in the United States. He studied mining at Columbia University, New York, then worked as an ordinary miner at Bunker Hill, Idaho. Later he was the consulting engineer of San Francisco. During the war he was an engineer in the Italian army and later was Mayor of Rome.

He became Ambassador to Washington in November, 1922, immediately after the advent of Fascism, resigning his post in 1924.

Poderjay Indicted On Bigamy Charge

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Ivan Poderjay, whose wife, Agnes C. Tufverson, corporation lawyer of New York and Detroit, disappeared shortly after he married her last December, was indicted today for bigamy.

Assistant District Attorney Harold W. Hastings at once notified Governor Lehman, of New York, of the action so that he may arrange with the State Department for the extradition of Poderjay, now being held in Vienna.

Poderjay, Jugoslavic soldier of fortune, is charged with having married Miss Tufverson while already married to Marguerite Suzanne Ferrand.

Italy's 'Crazy Boy' Sets Record Of 437 M. P. H. in a Seaplane

Desenzano, Italy, Oct. 23 (AP).—The "crazy boy" of Italian aviation, 32-year-old Lieut. Francesco Agello, zoomed through space today faster than ever man has flown before.

Agello set the old mark of 682.078 kilometers (423.832 miles) an hour April 10, 1933.

The ship was the same one Agello used in setting his last record, but it had undergone secret alterations. A new Fiat A S 6-V type motor, developing 3,500 horsepower, drove it in today's flight.

Agello—5 feet 4 inches tall and weighing 140 pounds—has emerged as Italy's foremost speed flier in recent years.

He has had several crashes, from each of which he emerged unscathed. He boasts that he has never been ill.

Official timekeepers were on hand, but it was indicated that the exact speed might not be forthcoming until late tonight or tomorrow.

A new timing devise known as the photochronometer was employed, which involved the use of film which must be developed.

Rome dispatches Tuesday said Premier Mussolini, as minister of aviation, and Guido Jung, minister of finance, had introduced legislation in the Chamber of Deputies authorizing expenditure of 1,200,000,000 lire ($100,000,000) for the "complete renewal of airplanes and accessory material."

Murder by Gang Arouses Capital To Crime Drive

Gang's Ambush Kills Innocent Man in Takoma

Two men were being questioned by police last night in the killing of Allen B. Wilson. One is John Dunn, arrested yesterday as a member of the tri-State gang. The other is a man with a criminal record. Police say they have evidence that both may have had motives for shooting "Mickey" McDonald.

A deadly hail of lead, fired by ambushed gunmen who apparently intended to slay "Mickey" McDonald, reputed "big shot" gambler, early yesterday killed a newspaper route man as he was about to deliver a morning paper at McDonald's home on the outskirts of Takoma Park, Md.

The bullet from a .32-caliber pistol smashed through the rear window of the automobile of the carrier, Allen B. Wilson, 32, of Ridge road, Silver Spring, Md., and buried itself in the base of his skull.

As an investigation was pushed forward last night, State's Attorney

Maurice Otterback, 79, chairman of the board of the Anacostia Bank and one of Anacostia's most prominent citizens, lost his life yesterday while rescuing a 23-year-old girl from the path of an automobile.

Mr. Otterback died at Sibley Hospital less than an hour after he had shoved Miss Elizabeth Whelan, 23, of 153 Park place northeast, to safety as the automobile bore down upon her at Nichols avenue and U street southeast.

Mr. Otterback and Miss Whelan were passengers on a street car which stopped at the intersection. Mr. Otterback was on his way to his desk at the bank, of which he had been an executive for more than 25 years.

Pushes Girl to Safety.

Miss Whelan alighted first from the car, and then Mr. Otterback. As they started to cross the street, Mr. Otterback saw the automobile driven, police say, by Roy Reynolds, 43, of the 900 block of Twelfth street northwest, bearing down upon them.

With a sweep of his arm he pushed Miss Whelan out of the automobile's way. The effort caused him to lose his balance, and he was struck by the vehicle, and hurled to the street.

Mr. Otterback was given first aid by Dr. Vincent Gould, of the 2000 block of Nichols avenue.

At Sibley Hospital, where, incidentally, he was a member of the board of trustees, Mr. Otterback was found to be suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries. He died shortly after his arrival.

A native of Washington, Mr. Otterback was a member of the Society of Oldest Inhabitants, and a former president of that organiza-

3 Accused of Plotting Against Caffery Held

Havana, Oct. 23 (AP).—Naval intelligence officers tonight said they believed they had balked still another plot against the life of United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery with the arrest of three in an automobile armed with sawed-off shotguns.

The men, whose names were not made public, but whom the authorities identified as members of the ABC radical revolutionary society, had been under surveillance for several days.

Church Protest of Gain in Law Violations Is Circulated.

Stiffer Penalties Called Necessary

Police Heads to Confer Today With Justice Department Men.

Aroused by an increase in gangster activities in the District, culminating in the shooting of an innocent man, officials yesterday planned drastic law enforcement action.

The shooting followed closely a formal protest by the civic affairs committee of the Federation of Churches against the increase in law violations. The protest was sent to District Commissioners, judges and law enforcement officials.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who controls the police department, announced he would confer with officials of the Department of Justice and with Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, today. He described crime conditions as "very bad."

Maj. Brown, while denying there had been an appreciable increase in crime this year as compared with last, indicated that before much progress can be made the police force must be increased.

Seeks Sentence Changes.

United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett blamed some of the crime situation on the indeterminate sentence laws. He said he would ask for legislation to bring about abandonment of the system.

The alleged inadequancy of sentences for major crimes was complained of in the letter sent by the church committee. The committee declared "big shot" gamblers are operating in the city, and that "wholesale gambling operations are still going on." The committee also pointed out arrests for intoxication were almost double those of a year ago.

In condemning the indeterminate sentence law, Garnett pointed out that a judge may sentence a man for manslaughter only to 3 to 15 years, with the probability that he will be released in three years, although the court may know a heavier sentence is deserved.

Taking up the church charges item by item, Garnett pointed out that recent activities of authorities had caused havoc among the gamblers.

Garnett said there was no law here which could be used successfully to halt the widespread "numbers racket." The numbers operators, he said, do not maintain a "premises," and can not, therefore, be charged with setting up a gaming table or with permitting gaming. The only charge possible against them is a misdemeanor, that of accepting a bet.

Housebreakings Fought.

Housebreakings, which led to 1,900 arrests last year, are being vigorously prosecuted and will meet with stern measures, he said.

Asked what he intended to do about the situation, Commissioner Hazen said:

"We are going to use every effort we can to run these gamblers and small time gangsters and thugs out of Washington. They don't belong here anyway.

"We are going to put our very best men on the job and we are going to keep after them until we have put a stop to this sort of thing.

"For one thing we are very badly handicapped by an inadequate police force. We've asked for increases in the personnel but our regoing to continue to do that.

"The police department now is doing everything in its power to apprehend these criminals and it is going to continu to do that.

"I am inclined to the belief that our police might do a little shooting if criminals continue to pull guns on the officers. An officer is not required to take his life in his hands in such a manner when dealing with known gunmen and gangsters."

Commissioner Allen said:

"I'm not sufficiently familiar with crime statistics in the District to make any sound comment at this time.

"The Commissioners and other law enforcement agencies of the Nine Colorado Coeds Slugged On Campus by Night Prowler

Boulder, Colo., Oct. 23 (AP).—Nine coeds at the University of Colorado have been slugged, apparently by a madman, as they strolled about the campus during the past few days, it was disclosed today.

Chief of Police R. C. Prater said he withheld news of the attacks in an effort to trap the slugger.

"None of the girls has been seriously hurt," Chief Prater said. "The slugger, except for striking them with his fist or a blackjack, has not assaulted them and no attempt at robbery has been made. The girls in several instances were left unconscious on the sidewalk."

Chief Prater said several policemen dressed as women had walked about the campus late at night but were not molested.

The first slugging was reported last Friday night. Nearly every night since then some girl of the university has been waylaid.

University officials said they have issued orders for all women students to remain in their homes or at sorority houses after dark unless accompanied by a man or unless they walk in groups.

Chief Prater said the slugger may be the same one reported in Greeley and in Denver during the spring and summer. Several women in those cities were beaten. At Denver Miss Virginia Lerch was so seriously injured she was unconscious for weeks. She has partially recovered, but never completely regained her memory.

Tumulty Holds Upton Sinclair Menaces Party

Call for Defeat Widens Democratic Rift Over Aspirant.

The rift in Democratic ranks over nomination of Upton Sinclair for Governor of California broadened last night as a new broadside was fired at the Sinclair candidacy.

Defeat of the one-time Socialist "would be a victory for the Democracy of the Nation," Joseph P. Tumulty, conservative Democrat, and secretary to President Woodrow Wilson, said in a prepared statement.

The Tumulty blast followed a White House call by George Creel, Sinclair's Democratic opposition in the California primaries. After a conference with the President, Creel announced a preliminary survey by the National Resources Board of a $170,000,000 irrigation and power project in California's central valley.

It was the second time in 48 hours Mr. Roosevelt had authorized a State survey of natural resources by the board, and Republican spokesmen at once seized on the announcement to charge the President with "dangling of bait for the voter."

Creel Qualifies Vote.

Creel insisted California politics were not discussed at the White House, but told newspapermen he will vote for Sinclair "if he is standing on the Democratic platform." He emphasized, however, that most of the EPIC (End Poverty in California) program of Sinclair had been "carefully excluded" from the State Democratic platform at a convention following the primaries.

Another Californian was in town yesterday—Culbert L. Olson, chairman of the Democratic State committee—but he failed to see the President. Departing by airplane for California, he denied charges that Sinclair is "slipping," citing 50,000 new Democratic registrations in California, as against 9,900 Republicans.

At the same time, he charged the Republican attorney general of California with "an effort to disfranchise over 100,000 registered voters" of that State. On application of the State attorney general, he said, a court order has been issued under which 100,000 voters of the poorer class must prove innocence of illegal registration.

The Tumulty statement circulated last night referred to Sinclair as a "political masquerader * * * wearing the thin disguise of a false prophet" who is attempting to "turn to his use the Democratic party as an instrumentality for selfish gain."

"In the long range, it would be better for the Democrats of California to suffer the stings and arrows of defeat rather than by electing this man, approve the hateful philosophy that underlies the fantastic program which he espouses," President Wilson's former adviser said.

'Poison in Triumph.'

"Indeed, his triumph might easily supply the poison that would destroy all the fine objectives of the President and the Democratic party. No man seeking high office can build a lasting polity upon the husks of class hatred, religious intolerance and an abhorrence of Christianity. * * *."

He charged attacks by Sinclair on the Catholic and Protestant Churches alike, and said "the great Jewish Churches also are made to feel the lash of his scorn."

Meanwhile, the White House continued noncommittal on the Sinclair candidacy, and such figures in the Administration as Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins and Secretary of the Interior Ickes steered clear of California speaking engagements. Senator McAdoo, of California, devoted himself to campaign speeches in other parts of the country.

President Roosevelt's authorization of the Creel announcement that his National Resources Board will survey California power and irrigation projects followed a similar announcement affecting Pennsylvania power, coal and rural electrification studies, given out at the White House Monday by Joseph H. Guffey and George H. Earle 3d, Democratic candidates for Senator and Governor in the Keystone State.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware, cochairman of the Republican Senatorial-Congressional committee, charged the President gave Guffey and Earle his presidential "blessing" while sending them home with the prospect of a $57,000,000 project that already had been surveyed by congressional authorization.

Hastings Charge.

"This is either a direct bid of $57,000,000 of the taxpayers' money for the voters of Pennsylvania or it is another fake, comparable to the Passamaquoddy project in Maine, designed solely to influence votes by a promise which there is not the slightest intention of keeping," Hastings said.

"The White House itself has now become the country's political sounding board. Never before has it been subjected to this sort of politics."

Creel's announcement of the President's intention to survey the central valley area of California, affecting 21 counties in the vicinity of Sacramento with a lowered water table, involves the possible construction of two dams, one at Kennatt and one at Friant, costing an estimated $170,000,000.

Asked if he will vote for Sinclair, the former California State director for the President's National Emergency council, hedged slightly.

"I am a Democrat and I am going to vote for anybody who upholds the program," Creel said. "If Sinclair is standing on the program, I will vote for him."

Olson, the California State Democratic chairman, who unsuccessfully sought a White House appointment yesterday, was strong in his indorsement of the Sinclair candidacy.

He scoffed at reports that Communists in California are supporting the nominee, and insisted there has been "no lack of sympathy and cooperation from the Democratic National committee."

Between You and Me

PWA Surveys Are Called Political "Fodder" Despite White House Aloofness.

By Raymond Clapper

MR. ROOSEVELT is in a fortunate position. He does not have to play small politics to maintain his power.

His Administration is not in jeopardy at the polls. The country, by all advance indications, is waiting for November 6 to offer him a fresh mandate. Republicans concede he will control the next Congress. His thumping majorities in both houses may be increased. The Democratic party seems entirely able to take care of itself. It needs no help from the White House.

If ever a President was free of the curse of having to play foxy local politics to keep on top of the heap, it is Mr. Roosevelt. He can escape from the degrading bondage which harasses a President faced with the danger of repudiation by the voters. Thus released from gnawing anxiety, Mr. Roosevelt has exceptional opportunity to concentrate his energies on improving the welfare of the Nation as a whole.

Yet, what do we find going on day after day? Yesterday George Creel, defeated Democratic candidate for Governor of California, called at the White House and left with Mr. Roosevelt's promise, which will be duly relayed to California voters before they go to the polls, to have the National Resources Board send engineers into the State to make a survey of a $170,000,000 water-power project on the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers.

"California, with characteristic modesty," Creel says with a wise grin, "will be content to get the project piecemeal."

Certainly. Mr. Roosevelt merely has told his engineers to look into the project. That is enough for California political purposes at the moment.

What happened Monday? The Hon. Joseph F. Guffey, Pennsylvania Democratic candidate for Senator, and his fellow candidate for Governor, "George the Third" Earle, were at the White House for luncheon and came back for dinner and listened to the concert later. Between times they issued a statement from the White House lobby that Mr. Roosevelt had ordered the National Resources Board to make several surveys of water power and steam electrification in the State.

Now it develops that the modest Guffey earlier had insisted upon President Roosevelt going into Pennsylvania to make a speech for him. That was a little too much for Mr. Roosevelt and he refused. But in lieu of such a speaking appearance, it was arranged that Guffey should enjoy exceptional White House hospitality so that he could go back to Pennsylvania and present himself as a New Dealer who had received the full presidential blessing.

Another thing. Guffey and Earle took with them to the White House for luncheon, Morrison L. Cooke, of the National Resources Board, so that he would understand just what was wanted in the way of a PWA survey. Mr. Cooke, it happens, was director of the Giant Power Survey Board of Pennsylvania, appointed by Gov. Pinchot in his first term. In 1925 Director Cooke delivered a report an inch thick to Gov. Pinchot. This survey covered electrification, mine-mouth power, farm electrification, water storage and many more subjects besides those which Guffey announced that the National Resources Board under Mr. Cooke would go into at the President's suggestion. In fact, a copy of this report was in Mr. Cooke's office when he went to the White House with Guffey.

For the sake of impressing gullible Pennsylvania voters, they took the old stuff and dressed it up in New Deal garments, using for the purpose the National Resources Board, which presumably is a scientific body established to make technical inquiries for the guidance of the Administration, but which is now receiving daily assignments at the behest of ambitious politicians intent on converting PWA money, or vague intimations of it, into votes.

A similar thing happened on the eve of the Maine election, when the hoary-whiskered proposal to harness the tides in the Bay of Fundy was revived by the ordering of a PWA "survey."

These political surveys don't cost a great deal although they usually do arouse a lust for PWA money that must be satisfied sooner or later by forking over the cash—as happened with Grand Coulee Dam when it was forced through by political pressure in face of the best judgment of PWA experts.

Ordering of these surveys is going on almost daily. This has become standardized political technique to entice the grab-bag vote.

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's admirers regret to see such things happen though they are glad that things have not yet gone to the extent depicted on the Washington stage this week in the satire, "Bring on the Girls," in which the RFC finances a farm on a New York penthouse terrace which has a live Jersey cow, a turkey with a diamond necklace and one real tomato bush.

One souring former New Dealer, who has been wandering about town this week, shook his head sadly as he viewed the scene and observed "They've got a whole lot of money to spend and they're running around looking for gigolos."

Secretary of Commerce Roper went to the White House yesterday to give Mr. Roosevelt a sheaf of business memoranda for use in the address to the bankers' convention tonight.

"Is the President going to give 'em hell?" Roper was asked.

"Oh, I don't think he will go much further than purgatory," he answered.

Richmond Yawns at Election

Contested Congressional Balloting Two Weeks Hence Called Tamest on Record in Dominion's Capital.

Richmond, Oct. 23 (Spl.).—Two weeks from today the electorate will go to the polls and vote in the tamest contested Congressional election on record in Richmond.

So far the candidates of the major parties have been kept carefully under blankets. Not even the expense of "your vote and influence solicited" has been necessary and so far in the campaign the portraits of the rival candidates have been noticeably absent from the newspapers.

Neither party has held public meetings, but the Democratic city committee last week did hold a session in which speakers sought to spur others to action. The Republican aspirant has spoken only to his own group.

The candidates are Andrew Jackson Montague, Democratic incumbent, and Roy C. Parks, Republican aspirant. The former is represented at his campaign headquarters by his private secretary and the latter is holding down his own fort.

Clayton nodded.

Recently the Legislature passed an amendment to the mixed-marriage laws prohibiting unions between persons of Caucasian blood and persons of Filipino or Malay blood.

Difani then discussed with the county clerk the California statutes governing inter-racial marriages.

"Yes, Senator," said the county clerk. "When Mr. De Onate comes back here Friday, I will require him to establish proof that there is no Filipino or Malay blood in his veins before I issue the license to wed."

In Washington, Senator McAdoo, recently divorced from the girl's mother, said:

"It is a family matter and there is no occasion for any statement."

In Hollywood, at the home of Mrs. McAdoo, a houseboy said everyone was away.

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 23 (AP).—Rafael Lopez de Onate, movie actor, who, with Ellen Wilson McAdoo, filed notice of intention to obtain a marriage license yesterday in Riverside, was incensed today at reports from Riverside his right to obtain the license may be questioned.

"My parents were born in the Basque country of Spain," he said, commenting on reports he would have to prove there is no Filipino or Malay blood in his veins before a marriage license would be issued.

"Any intimation that I am not legally entitled to a marriage license shows a gross ignorance of the facts.

"How about the children of Army men stationed in the Philippines? Are they Filipinos? It's absurd to believe that because a person is born in the Philippines he is a native Filipino.

"My parents are natives of Spain. When I became of age I was given the choice of being an American or a subject of the King of Spain and I chose the former.

"I was educated in the United States and consider myself an American citizen.

"During the war I was sent by the State Department to Spain as the secretary to an executive of the Board of Trade and remained in that post for the duration of the war."

Anglo-Japanese conferences will be resumed Friday.

Japan's Main Points.

Tokyo's main points, growing out of her dissatisfaction with the ratio principle which allows Japan only three-fifths the naval power of Britain or the United States, were these:

1. The powers should agree that Japan may have equality, "in principle," in defensive armaments.

2. The ratio system should be abolished and defensive ships limited on a total tonnage basis, instead of by categories.

3. Each nation would drastically reduce "offensive" armaments, thus cutting down the chances of any war of aggression, while building whatever "defensive" ships within the tonnage limit agreed she feels she needs for security.

There was little optimism in naval circles over the outlook for an agreement.

Sinclair Denies He Has Backing Of Roosevelt

'Deliberate Distortion' of Views Laid to Foes by Californian.

San Francisco, Oct. 23 (AP).—A charge that his opponents were "deliberately distorting" his statements concerning the National Administration in an effort to put him in a false position was made today by Upton Sinclair, Democratic nominee for Governor, in a telegram to President Roosevelt.

Sinclair informed President Roosevelt he would seek an "immediate correction" of a newspaper article quoting him as saying the President shortly would "declare in his favor."

The incident added fuel to a seething political campaign marked by accusations that Sinclair was a "slanderer of churches," and charges that thousands of voters had registered illegally for the November election.

Merriam Raps Radicals.

The political battleground moved here with the arrival of acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam, Republican nominee, who issued a statement reiterating his intention "to oppose radical, communistic or capitalist efforts in California to destroy legitimate organized labor."

Sinclair, here to make a political speech, frowned as he read the newspaper article, then dispatched this message:

"President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Washington.

"Atrocious misquotation by newspaper here. They are deliberately distorting my statements concerning Administration seeking to put me in false position. Am endeavoring to obtain immediate retraction."

Sinclair charged the misquotation was another effort to discredit him with the Administration.

"I never made such an atrocious statement," he declared. "What I did say was that if President Roosevelt makes a statement on certain public policies, I feel certain I will be elected.

"I never said that he would issue a statement supporting me, Mr. Merriam or anyone else."

Sinclair said he still was expecting a Presidential statement on public policies.

Comments on Creel.

Commenting on Washington dispatches quoting George Creel, defeated candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. As saying he was leaving for California to find out if Sinclair is standing upon the State Democratic platform, Sinclair said:

"I sent a telegram to Mr. Creel, saying that I have publicly stated I am standing on the Democratic platform, and that I have never said anything to the contrary."

At the same time C. J. Collins, registrar of voters, began an inquiry into registrations, saying:

"There are 1,000,000 more registered voters in California today than in 1930. That speaks for itself. The population increase in four years apparently does not justify that increase."

Frank C. Jordan, veteran Secretary of State, issued a warning that California faces a rule by unemployed hosts from other States unless some quick correction of the State's registration laws is made.

holiday by proclamation of Gov. Sholtz.

The 1933 prize-winning organizations—Chicago Board of Trade Post Drum Corps. Herbert F. Akrod Post Band, of Marlboro, Mass., and the East Lynn, Mass., post drill company—occupied the honor positions.

They were followed by delegates representing the legion departments of France, Italy, Alaska, Guam, Panama, Hawaii and Cuba.

The 90-piece Des Moines Children's Band won applause. Their ambulance car followed them, but the juniors had no need of it.

A perspiring Santa Claus brought greetings from the city of that name in Indiana, and the Pontiac, Mich., "40 and 8" train—engine and box car—fired great numbers of soft rubber balls into the crowds from a miniature antiaircraft gun mounted atop the roof of the "freight" car.

Cooperation of the American Legion in the fight for the soldiers' bonus is urged in a telegram sent yesterday to Commander Edward A. Hayes of the Legion by James E. Van Zandt, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The message stated:

"News reports indicate American Legion will favor immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates. We will welcome cooperation from your organization to successfully conclude the fight we have been carrying on since 1925 relative to this legislation.

"We further express the hope that the American Legion will see fit to cooperate with other organizations by mandating their National commander to attend conference of all service organizations heads which we will call in the near future. My best wishes for a successful meeting."

Sears, Roebuck Head's Daughter in Elopement

Philadelphia, Oct. 23 (AP).—The marriage in Harrison, N. Y., of Helen A. Rosenwald, 18-year-old daughter of Lessing J. Rosenwald, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Harry H. Snellenburg, jr., 19, of suburban Wyncote, was announced today by the bride's mother.

The couple were married by a justice of the peace in an elopment last night, after motoring from the schools each attended in New England.

Hull Extends Trade Program To Switzerland

Gold Nation 12th on List for Negotiation of Reciprocal Pacts.

Undaunted by the difficulties and obstacles in the way of restoring the flow of international trade, Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday advanced his reciprocal trade program to include Switzerland, making 12 nations on his trade calendar.

The giving of notice of an intention to negotiate a reciprocal trade agreement with Switzerland was regarded as particularly significant, since Switzerland was represented at last week's meeting of the gold bloc nations held to devise means for promoting trade among themselves.

The gold bloc nations adjourned after pledging adherence to the yellow metal standard and naming committees to work out schemes whereby trade might be increased with each other. These committees are expected to have their plans ready in another month or two. The movement was interpreted here as a challenge to the dollar and sterling nations which have benefited in foreign trade due to their depreciated currencies.

Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade program is opposed to the aspirations of the gold bloc countries. He is opposed to bilateral agreements or understandings limited to a few nations and not open to the world. It is his view that such schemes only divert the flow of international trade, while the aim should be to increase the exchange of goods.

Backs Favored Nation Plan.

The Secretary of State is insistent that each reciprocal agreement entered into by this country be governed by the principle of most-favored-nation treatment—that whatever concessions each party to the pact agrees on will be given to all other nations of the world.

Consequently by bringing Switzerland into the orbit of his trade negotiations, Mr. Hull is weakening the gold bloc trade movement, because Switzerland can not enter into agreements with other gold countries, excluding the United States from similar concessions, and at the same time be a party to an agreement with this country.

Switzerland is the second gold-standard country on Secretary Hull's calendar of negotiations. The other is Belgium, the host of the trade meeting held at Brussels. Intention to negotiate with Belgium was given on September 4, before the Brussels meeting was arranged. An open hearing of those interested in trade with Belgium will be held next Monday by the Federal Tariff Commission preliminary to the drafting of an agreement.

Hearings Held on 8 Pacts.

Hearings have been completed on proposed trade agreement with Haiti, Colombia, Brazil, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Salvador. Hearings on proposed trade agreements with Sweden and Spain will be held November 5 and November 12, respectively.

Undersecretary of State William Phillips, speaking for Mr. Hull, announced that all information and views and applications for supplemental oral presentation of views regarding an agreement with Switzerland must be submitted to the chairman of the committee for reciprocity information not later than noon on December 10. The hearing will be held December 17.

The State Department pointed out Commerce Department statistics indicated that "trade in both directions between Switzerland and the United States has fallen off sharply in the last few years." These statistics showed that domestic exports to Switzerland had dropped from $12,251,319 in 1929, to $7,137,937 last year, while imports from Switzerland had decreased from $48,350,203 in 1929 to $14,550,933 last year.

Wallace Warns Cotton Exports Drop Impends

Increased Buying Power Abroad Is Vital to Market, He Says.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Secretary Wallace asserted yesterday that America must look to "increased purchasing power" rather than to lowered prices on cotton if it is to maintain markets abroad for its usual annual export of 8,000,000 bales.

"The rise of American cotton prices under the agricultural adjustment act," Wallace said, "is not the circumstance which has brought about the reduction of American cotton exports in recent months.

"The really important cause of this reduction is the inability of some nations to obtain dollar exchange. The only way other nations can get dollars with which to buy cotton is to sell goods or services to us. An increase in foreign purchasing power and in foreign ability to buy American cotton can be brought about if this country permits increased exchange of imports for our dollars.

Face Loss of Market.

"Otherwise we may temporarily—or permanently—lose a part of our cotton outlet, which has meant so much to the country as a whole."

The Secretary declared the "question before the South and the Nation as well, is: Shall we put 5,000,000 bales of cotton on the foreign market, or 8,000,000 bales?"

"But unless we augment foreign purchasing power there is no certainty that other countries will be able to buy satisfactory quantities of cotton, regardless of price. We may decide to wish to export the usual 8,000,000 bales and then learn that we can not do so.

"If we put only 5,000,000 bales annually on the export market," he said, "there will be fewer farm laborers and less business for ginners and cotton exporters. Displaced farmers will compete with city dwellers for jobs."

Study Cotton Program.

The Secretary and other AAA officials are now studying the voluntary cotton program for 1935. The immediate problem is how many acres should be planted next year. From a normal acreage of 41,000,000, the land planted to cotton this year was reduced to 27,000,000. This figure, however, will be raised for 1935.

"We have come to no decision," the Secretary said.

Disappointment that Southern leadership has not been able to lower tariff walls in the past was expressed by the Secretary. He said he felt that "the people of the South have not yet fully realized the extent of the decrease in foreign purchasing power for their cotton because of high duties."

The Administration's monetary policy, he said, has helped in giving foreign countries greater buying power so far as cotton is concerned, adding "that has furnished a splendid breathing spell."

"That relief," he continued, "is only for a short period. The time has come for the South to decide what it wishes to do and in my opinion to insist that goods and services be imported to the United States so that countries which want American cotton are able to pay for it. The foreign market for American cotton depends to a greater degree than before in history upon the revival of international trade."

National Capital should give prompt and effective consideration to the complaint contained in the letter from the civic committee of the Washington Federation of Churches. The Commissioners should take such steps as will put an end to the shootings which have disgraced Washington recently and only today cost the life of an innocent citizen."

Commissioner Sultan said:

"As a Commissioner I am deeply interested in such matters as these shootings and the complaints made by the Federation of Churches. The Commissioners already have taken steps to provide in the 1935 budget for an increased number of policemen.

"I won't admit conditions here are as bad as they are in most other cities. But there is always room for improvement. The situation is to be discussed with the Chief of Police today and with others, and all possible steps are to be taken to correct existing evil conditions."

Legislation Study.

Legislation which might be needed to strengthen law enforcement efforts will be discussed at his meeting with Maj. Brown today, Commissioner Hazen said. The whole crime question will be considered at the meeting of the Board of Commissioners Friday, he added.

Opinion of members of the judiciary, the District Attorney, Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman and others will be sought on desirable legislation, he said. Suggestions included broadening the character of evidence necessary to convict operators of gambling houses. Padlocking of premises where gambling rooms are maintained has been suggested. Making possession of gambling paraphernalia or records prima facie evidence also has been suggested.

Innocent Man Dies In Gang's Ambush

Stedman Prescott announced the Department of Justice had refused to aid in the case.

Wilson was a route man for the Washington Herald, and was making his rounds at 4:15 a. m. when the gangsters in the bushes fired charges of buckshot at his car. Only two of these hit the automobile, riddling the sides. A ricocheting piece of shot wounded Wilson in one arm, and he whirled his automobile around in a frantic effort to escape.

As he threw his car into gear and started down the highway, one of the gunmen fired the pistol, sending the bullet through the window that caused Wilson's death.

Wilson slumped over the wheel, and the automobile see-sawed across the highway crazily for a moment, then stopped at the top of an embankment.

Wilson, the father of three small children, was taken to Washington Sanitarium. He died at 8:30 a. m., never regaining consciousness.

Montgomery County police pointed out that the moon was full at the hour of the crime. In the early morning mists, the gunmen waited. Searchlights played across the lawn of McDonald's home. It was about the time McDonald usually came home in a taxi.

The gunmen apparently had been lying in wait for McDonald for some time.

Cigarette butts were found beneath a tree near the ambuscade. There also was a quantity of charred matches. Nearby, on the grass, were found the five shotgun shells.

Woman Sees Shooting.

The gunmen fired low at the car, believing McDonald might be crouched inside, Montgomery County police asserted. It was easy for them to watch for the approach of the car because of the lights which played over McDonald's lawn.

Mrs. McDonald was awakened by the firing and rushed to her window, on the second floor. Below, she told police, she saw a man run up the highway as Wilson was trying to speed away, and fire a pistol.

McDonald called Takoma Park, Silver Spring and Montgomery County police. He appeared highly nervous.

"Someone who was trying to get me—some mob—has shot another man," he said to officers.

According to State's Attorney Prescott, McDonald later refused to make any statement.

Believed Gang Warfare.

"Of course there's no doubt that this is gangster warfare," said Prescott.

"We have mighty few leads. The only thing we can do is to keep on working and try to crack the case."

Wilson is survived by his widow, and three small children—Patricia, 8; Allen, 4 and Richard, 1.

He also leaves his mother, Mrs. Mary Fortney, and his father, H. M. Wilson, and a brother, Shepherd Wilson. A sister, Miss Ruth Wilson, also survives. With the exception of his widow and children, his family lives in Washington.

Ritchie Admits State 'Machine' In Reply to Nice

Coal Program of Opponent "False Propaganda," Says Governor.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 23 (AP).—Governor Ritchie tonight answered the attack of Harry W. Nice, Republican nominee for the office to which Ritchie seeks reelection, on the "Ritchie machine," he frankly admitted the organization existed.

"My machine, the machine which they say has perpetuated me in office, is made up of voters of Maryland who are desirous of good government," said the Governor. "If Mr. Nice should happen to be elected—which I consider highly improbable—I can assure you that he, too, will have his organization."

Speaking in the coal mining town of Barton, this afternoon, Ritchie dubbed the Republican claim that if elected Nice would see Maryland bought nothing but Maryland coal, as "false political propaganda."

"Anyone conversant with the practices of the State administration knows that for the past several years virtually all coal used in public buildings has been Maryland mined," he said. "I am certain that this year not a pound of coal mined in any other State has been bought by the State of Maryland."

Mrs. Adeline E. Haas Dies in Silver Spring

In addition to her husband, Fred M. Haas, she is survived by a son, Fred Paul Haas, of Washington, and a daughter, Mrs. William J. Brannon, of Wynnewood Park.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. from her residence, 52 South Mansion Drive, the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, rector of Grace Church, Woodside, officiating. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Gloria's Aunt Calm On Witness Stand; Will Resume Today

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—After a full day of cross-examination, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, aunt of 10-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt, was still on the stand today at the recess of the court fight for custody of the child heiress.

Mrs. Whitney, center of the legal battle instituted by the child's mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, to regain custody of Gloria, will resume her testimony tomorrow, and Nathan Burkan, Mrs. Vanderbilt's attorney, said he expected to complete his questioning then.

The child's aunt appeared calm and poised as she left the hearing room. There was no intimation from the closed hearing as to the nature of the testimony.

Mrs. Lillian Lagier, former artists' model and Follies girl said at Los Angeles that she would come to New York to testify for Mrs. Vanderbilt.

"I knew Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney when I was a model," she said. "Mrs. Vanderbilt might be interested in my testimony."

Holdup Suspect Arrested Here

Sought for several weeks as a suspect in last December's mail robbery and shooting at Union Station, John Dunn, alias Slim Dunn, 34, was arrested yesterday by Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass.

Dunn, who said he came here from Richmond, Va., is under bond, police said, for alleged participation in the holdup of Heurich's Brewery last year. He had been sought for questioning since his release under bond and was recognized by Sergt. Brass on a downtown street yesterday.

Inspector Frank S. W. Burke, detective chief, said Dunn was the last of the so-called Tri-State gangsters wanted in connection with the Union Station job. He was a member of the gang for only a short time, Inspector Burke said.

Dunn, Burke indicated, also will be quizzed regarding the recent escape of William Davis, alias Legenza, and Robert Mais, Tri-State gang members, from Richmond City Jail.

Pinchot Offers To Aid Inquiry Of Reed Outlay

Governor May Seek Post If Senator Wins and Is Unseated.

By Robert C. Albright.

The adroit political hand of Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania yesterday was disclosed as giving a "cooperative lift to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee's investigation of election outlays by Senator David A. Reed, running for reelection on the Keystone Republican ticket.

Pinchot has tendered his aid to the investigating committee, Chairman James F. Byrnes announced here yesterday.

Insisting that investigators have uncovered a "bad situation" affecting Pennsylvania campaign expenditures, Senator Byrnes said he is urging other members of his committee to concur with him in ordering public hearings into Pennsylvania outlays "after the elections."

Pinchot's Offer.

"Governor Pinchot has advised me that he believes an investigation should be made, and he is willing to furnish the committee with information in his possession," Byrnes said.

Only a short time previously, the neatly groomed, white mustached Pennsylvania Governor announced his support of the Reed ticket, after it nipped in the bud his New Deal-Republican bid for the Senatorial nomination.

The Byrnes announcement gave rise to speculation on rumors already current in Pennsylvania political circles that Pinchot may seek appointment to the Senate to fill out Reed's term, if the latter is elected in November and later unseated by the Senate.

Such speculation involves too many "ifs," according to Washington friends of the Pennsylvania Senator. One of his close Capitol associates said Reed "is not even taking the Byrnes campaign charges seriously, but will lend every aid to his inquiry."

Byrnes, who revealed campaign investigators already are hard at work in three other States, Tennessee, New Mexico and Delaware, said one of the committee representatives consulted Pinchot shortly after he went into Pennsylvania ten days ago.

Since Pinchot actively came out in support of the Reed ticket, Senator Byrnes said he has received a letter from Pinchot striking a "sympathetic" note. Although the letter made mention of information the Governor is willing to tender, Byrnes declared Pinchot said nothing about excessive campaign expenditures by Joseph F. Guffey, Pennsylvania's Democratic candidate for Governor.

Byrnes' Announcement.

The Byrnes announcement came close on the heels of the President's entertainment of Guffey at the White House Monday, but the South Carolina committee chairman said he had conferred with neither Guffey nor the President.

To charges by Senator Daniel O. Hastings, Delaware Republican, that the Byrnes investigation was "political" and more than casually coincident to the approaching elections, Byrnes replied:

"I have not read them, and anyway I am not interested."

He said Guffey recently advised him he is willing to lay before the committee all information in his possession as to expenditures in his own campaign.

On the basis of preliminary reports of investigators, he said the committee is sending additional representatives into Pennsylvania to inquire into primary and general election outlays not only of Reed, but of all Senatorial candidates.

Federal Law in Case.

Under the law, the Federal Government has no jurisdiction over State primary contests, except as some "moral" issue is involved, and reflected in the cumulative total of election expenditures. Senator Reed already has reported to State authorities in Harrisburg that outlays in his behalf during the primary campaign approximated $75,000.

At the request of the Republican candidate for the Senate in Tennessee, John R. Neal, who was unsuccessful in the Democratic primary as a candidate against Senator McKellar, the committee recently has sent investigators into Tennessee, Byrnes said. Neal now is opposing the candidacy of Senator Bachman for reelection.

Neal's campaign manager, under oath, has charged that a large campaign fund is being raised to elect the two Democratic Senators and the Democratic Governor, according to Byrnes.

At the request of the chairman of the Republican State committee in New Mexico, Peter Ratkoch, Byrnes said the committee has directed New Mexico agents to investigate expenditures of the two Democratic candidates for the Senate in New Mexico, as well as outlays by Republican candidates.

Text of Survey on Crime

Gambling, Immorality, Drunkenness and Wave of Housebreaking Are Cited by Civic Committee of Church Federation.

Following is the text of a letter sent to District judges and other officials yesterday by the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches:

In view of crime conditions and immorality in the District of Columbia, the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches is addressing you for the purpose of enlisting your aid toward concerted action to improve conditions. It is our conviction that the situation is extremely serious and that it is little less than disgraceful in a city which is the Capital of the Nation. As we view the situation it is substantially as follows:

Gambling: So-called "big-shot" gamblers are and have been for some time operating in this city on a large scale. Two murders recently in the Houston Hotel directly resulted from their operations. In spite of commendable efforts by the Police Department, some of these prominent gamblers are still at large and wholesale gambling operations are still going on.

Numbers Racket Assailed.

Numbers Racket: This is an insidious form of gambling which takes money chiefly from the poorer classes. It is rampant throughout this city. The police have made very little headway against it, not so much so because of lack of activity on their part as because of defects in the present laws. Definite recommendations for strengthening the law were made by the District Attorney to the District Committee of the House months ago, but that committee took no action, and the racket continues to flourish.

Immoral Solicitation: A disgraceful situation exists on our streets at night, especially in the proximity of some of the leading hotels. The police can make little headway in combating this evil because the maximum fine of $25, with no provision for jail sentence, is not a sufficient deterrent. Efforts to increase the fine have not met with success, and the evil continues to grow. In one section of Washington there is the virtual equivalent of a "red-light" district.

Drunkenness on Rise.

Drunkenness: Arrests for alcoholic intoxication are almost double what they were two years ago. The number of arrests per day for drunkenness is now approximately 70. Drunken driving is on the increase in spite of a rather intensive safety campaign. The number of automobile fatalities for the month of September was 16, the largest number in the history of the District of Columbia. Such fatalities during the first eight months of this year were 88 per cent greater than in the same period last year

Housebreaking: During the last calendar year there were nearly 1,900 arrests for housebreaking in the District of Columbia It is hardly an exaggeration to say that no residence is quite safe under these conditions. The number of arrests is a credit to the police, but the danger is still present.

Motion Pictures: That motion pictures of the wrong type are an incentive to crime is beyond question. Under the splendid leadership of the Legion of Decency the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish groups in the District are cooperating to improve conditions, but with little if any cooperation from the motion-picture industry.

Sentences Held Inadequate.

Inadequate Sentences: Such study of the matter as your committee has been able to make indicates a doubt whether some of the sentences imposed for criminal offenses are adequate. This is not altogether the fault of the judges, because under the present parole law in the District the prisoner must be eligible for parole at the end of one-fifth of the statutory maximum term. This provision of the law interferes, in our judgment, with the effective administration of justice. The Federal laws, applicable outside of the District, provide for one-third of the maximum instead of one-fifth. Moreover in a large number of cases the judges impose minimum sentences much less than the statutory minimum. For example, even in the case of holdups with guns a minimum sentence of only one year is frequently imposed, although the statutory maximum is 15 years.

This letter is not written for the purpose of criticizing. It is written, rather, for the purpose of calling attention to what we consider a serious situation, and one that is endangering even the safety of citizens of the District. Our hope is that there may be concerted action, more effective than ever before, in tightening the laws and regulations and in their enforcement in the public interest. We venture the suggestion that a conference of the interested officials would be helpful.

Piccards Reach 10-Mile Height

ing at the top of the elm tree as farmers began helping the Piccards gather together the rest of the balloon.

As the first report of the landing was broadcast, by farmers who rushed from their homes and fields to the scene, it was said Dr. Piccard had taken to a parachute. This later was proved erroneous, farmers having mistaken a battery dropped in a bag as the balloon neared the ground, for a man.

Barograph Guarded.

The barograph was turned over to Deputy Sheriff Oscar Weinberg, who was instructed to guard it closely until it could be shipped to Washington to ascertain the exact height the Piccards reached.

The Piccards encountered poor visibility from the start, they said.

Two farmers, A. C. Porter and Dan Ross, who were among the first to reach the balloon after it landed, quoted the Piccards as saying the temperature inside the balloon never got below 58 degrees Fahrenheit, while outside a temperature of 48½ degrees minus, Centigrade, was registered.

Soon after they landed, the Piccards hurriedly ate the lunch they had carried with them. It consisted mainly of milk and sandwiches.

Hundreds Rush to Scene.

Hundreds of persons rushed to the scene soon after the balloon landed.

Mrs. Piccard and her husband donned football helmets just before the gondola struck the tree-tops. The helmets had been taken along for protection against just such an emergency.

Prof. Piccard's first thought was of the instruments upon which are recorded observations made during the flight, but Mrs. Piccard insisted upon finding Fleur De Lys, the tiny turtle that had been the mascot on the flight. It was found to have survived the bumpy landing.

"I was a little nervous at the take-off, for it was very bumpy," related Mrs. Piccard. "But when we got into the upper air it became so calm that we hardly seemed to be moving.

"As we got above the clouds, the sun expanded the gas and gave us altitude. I think we made some very valuable calibrations.

Too Busy for Fright.

"On the descent, we began to come down very rapidly after we broke through the clouds which the sun could not penetrate, and I was kept busy throwing off ballast to keep us from going down any faster.

"That kept me too busy to be nervous, but the whole thing was a mess."

The trouble, she explanied, was that after they dropped through the clouds and could inspect the terrain, she had not sufficient time to pick a landing place.

Prof. Piccard showed the greatest effects of fatigue. He curled up in a blanket while they waited for a truck to arrive.

Piccard refused to leave until his craft was loaded aboard the truck and started back to Cadiz. From there it will be shipped to Detroit.

Nor would Mrs. Piccard, tired by her exploration feat, desert the balloon. She said she would wait until her husband was ready to go into town, where they had planned to stay at a hotel all night.

While she waited she hauled out a vanity case and restored her complexion. Occasionally the pair conversed in French.

Juvenile Court Reorganization Joins Branches

Miss McGuire Appointed Director, 13 Others to Be Selected.

his officers will be selected by competitive examination, conditions for which will be available to applicants today. They must be college or university graduates, who also have completed one year of graduate work in a school of social studies or who hold a degree in social service administration. The supervisor must have completed at least three years of full-time paid work in a recognized social agency, and the subordinates at least one year.

Applicants for supervisor must be under 45 November 24, deadline for applications. Applicants for probation officer, however, must have reached their forty-fifth birthday by the same date, "except that this requirement will be waived in favor of persons now in the employ of the Juvenile Court," the announcement reads.

No Civil Service Status.

The announcement notes that:

"Positions in the Juvenile Court of the District of Columbia are not subject to the Civil Service law, and those who compete in this examination do not thereby acquire a Civil Service status."

The present personnel of the probation division was appointed without competitive examination. Some of its members, Judge Bentley said, already have resigned. The others may be eligible to compete for the new positions. The old jobs will be abolished when the new personnel is available.

Judge Bentley said she had the aid of a lay committee of eight members versed in social and Civil Service problems in drawing up the reorganization plans. The plan went through a number of offices, including the auditor's office, the District personnel board, and the Civil Service Commission; received White House approval, and at 3 p. m. yesterday, the judge received the final "O. K." from the auditor.

Prevention Emphasis.

The new organization, she said, would emphasize preventive work.

Court studies have shown that certain areas in the District breed juvenile delinquency, she declared. Miss McGuire, the new director of social work, will seek reports on conditions there from the local civic clubs, citizens' associations, churches and Community Chest organizations, and will coordinate these with the studies of the probation officers in an effort to correct the factors making for juvenile and adult delinquency.

Sometimes children congregate in stores, and come under bad influences there, Judge Bentley remarked. The new court officers, trained to look for such conditions, can determine their importance.

"In times like these there is no dearth of trained workers available for positions like these," Judge Bentley asserted. "We expect to be deluged with applications."

Miss McGuire was born in Wisconsin, was graduated from the University of Chicago Graduate School's division of social service administration, and is also an M. A. from the Catholic University of America

Social Agencies Chief.

During the war, Miss McGuire worked for the Red Cross in Poland. Afterward, she worked in Chicago as a social worker and as probation officer in the juvenile court. She has been a professor of social economics in the National Catholic School in Washington the last ten years, and is director of the Washington Council of Social Agencies. She has investigated the cases of 400 boys sent to reform institutions by the juvenile court of New York City, and last year conducted a survey of relief conditions in Baltimore.

Those who served on the lay committee which analyzed cases in the juvenile court and drew up the reorganization plan with Judge Bentley were:

Father John O'Grady, of Catholic University.

William Sabin, director of the Associated Charities.

Lewis Merriam, expert in Civil Service problems.

Miss Katherine Lenroot, acting chief of the Children's Bureau.

J. Thornett, of the District Personnel Board.

Joseph L. Spilman, assistant chief of the personnel classification division of the Civil Service Commission.

Maj. Campbell Johnson, representing colored citizens.

Clause Omitted From Resolution

The words "during school hours" were inadvertently omitted from a report published yesterday summarizing a resolution adopted Monday night by the North Capitol Citizens Association. The full text of the resolution actually was:

"Resolved, That operators of moving-picture theaters should be prohibited during school hours from selling tickets of admission to a motion-picture theater to any child under the age of 16 years, unless said child is accompanied by its parent or other person entrusted with the guardianship of said child."

The Washington Post regrets the error.

Books Received At White House

200 Volumes Presented to President to Bring Library Up to Date.

A committee of novelists and publishers yesterday presented to President Roosevelt, on behalf of the Nation's booksellers, 200 new books to bring the White House library up to date.

Members of the delegation, who were the luncheon guests of Mrs. Roosevelt, included Hervey Allen, author of "Anthony Adverse;" Mrs. Pearl Buck, "The Good Earth," and Frederick Lewis Allen, "Only Yesterday."

Others present were Frederic G. Melcher, editor of Publishers' Weekly; W. W. Norton, president of the National Association of Book Publishers, and E. S. McCawley, president of the American Booksellers Association.

The new books, specially selected by a committee of judges, cover the period from April, 1930, to last April. In 1930 the booksellers made their first presentation of 500 books to the White House when it was discovered the President and his family were provided with little to read for diversion.

Of the 200 new books, biographies head the nonfiction list, 33 having been chosen. There are 15 on history, 11 on travel and adventure, 24 of poetry, art and drama, 9 of science, 8 on economics, and 5 on miscellaneous subjects. Sixty-one novels and 23 children's books are included.

Morro Castle Probers Speed New Ship Laws

Three Major Reforms Will Be Proposed to Roper This Week.

(Associated Press.)

Three major maritime reforms were formulated yesterday in Government quarters to prevent recurrence of the Morro Castle disaster, which took 132 lives.

The Commerce Department's Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection was reported reliably to be nearing completion of its report to Secretary Roper. The report will recommend:

1. Fireproofing of all vessels.
2. Practical examinations for able-bodied seamen.
3. Revision of the law limiting liability of ship owners.

Secretary Roper will receive the report by the end of this week. He is expected to use it for the basis of new legislation.

Officers Face Trial.

A complete picture of the Morro Castle holocaust, the trapping of passengers on a flame-swept ship will be presented to Roper, but the report will not concern itself with charges of negligence against the ship's command.

Last week steamboat inspectors accused Capt. William F. Warms and four staff officers of negligence that increased the Morro Castle's death toll. They must appear next Monday at a hearing in New York to show cause why their licenses should not be suspended or revoked.

Commerce Department navigation and steamboat inspection officials believe that fireproofing of all passenger vessels would not entail a prohibitive cost. Freighters would not be affected.

Examination Proposed.

Figuring the cost, which they said would only be slightly higher than present building costs, these officials include the use of fire retardent furnishings throughout a ship as well as the use of steel bulkheads, fire doors and other preventatives.

Sailors can now become able-bodied seamen after three years' apprenticeship through the mere filing of an affidavit. The report to Roper will recommend that applicants for seamen's tickets be required to take a written, practical examination.

Claims for damages resulting from the disaster now total more than $1,000,000, but the Ward Line, owner of the Morro Castle, has filed suit to limit its liability to not more than the value of its interest in the vessel and cargo at the end of the voyage—$14,248.

Some officials believe the owners should be subject to unlimited liability. They contend this would spur owners into providing the safest type ships and the most efficient crews.

U. S. Now Owns 1 Out of 6 Cattle In Drought Area

AAA sources disclosed the result of the cattle-purchasing campaign yesterday, according to the Associated Press. More than 7,000,000 have been bought, out of a total of 45,598,050 in the 24 States. The Government has paid $90,379,155 out of $101,217,500 appropriated for the purpose. The average price was about $13.

Of the purchases about 1,100,000 were destroyed on the farm as unfit for food.

Texas leads in cattle purchased. There the Government has bought 1,388,702 of the estimated 6,602,702 in the State.

Cumberland Given Report on Projects

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 23 (Spl.).—A report by City Engineer Henry W. Schaidt, showing the progress of various projects read to the city council yesterday.

The report shows the Lindnerville sewer and Goethe street sewer projects are about 25 per cent completed. A total of $9,646.48 has been expended to date, with $48,000 remaining in the account. At the rate the work is progressing, the project will not be completed for about 18 months.

The Cumberland airport project is 75 per cent complete and will be finished about April 1, 1935. North Cumberland recreation field and playground is about 60 per cent complete.

Projects for which plans have been drawn include the Maple street and Oregon avenue sewers. Fairmont avenue grading, and Camden avenue grading. These last two projects, the report states, can be done with FERA labor at little cost to the city.

Queen Sends Message.

She recalled meeting Scott and Black at Mildenhall and expressed the hope they were "not unduly tired."

Scott replied, thanking the Queen and assuring her they were "fit and well."

Of the ten other entries still strung out in the wake of the Dutch and the Americans, two English planes alone were anywhere near Australia. No other ship had got beyond India.

Catchcart Jones and K. W. Waller, of England, were bringing their De Haviland Comet ship, like Scott's except for color, from Batavia, Java, to Darwin, while Squadron Leader Malcolm MacGregor and Henry Walker, of New Zealand, were en route to Batavia.

Americans Quit Bagdad.

The only other American team left in the race, John H. Wright and John Polando, piloted their little monocoupe away from Bagdad, after clearing from its engine salt accumulated during the Mediterranean crossing.

Wright expressed dissatisfaction with the way the engine performed on the hop from Aleppo, Syria, to Bagdad.

"The plane has only been averaging 160 miles an hour," he said.

Entries in the race straggled back as far as Athens, where H. L. Brook, of England, the tail-ender, awaited replacement of a broken propeller.

J. D. Hewett and C. E. Kay, of New Zealand, were at Allahabad, while Lieut. M. Hansen, of Denmark, was en route to that control point.

Squadron Leader D. E. Stodart and K. G. Stodart, of India, left Karachi, India, for Allahabad, while C. J. Melrose, of South Australia, prepared to take off from Karachi.

Thomas E. Ware, 46, cashier of the Bloomingdale Hospital, at White Plains, N. Y., was taken to Washington Sanitarium and Hospital, at Takoma Park, Md., yesterday with a slashed wrist. His condition was said to be serious although doctors believed he would recover.

Ware, who is a brother of former Town Councilman Irvine H. Ware, of Takoma Park, Md., arrived from his home in the Bronx, New York City, to visit his brother, who lives at 14 Hickory avenue, Monday night.

About 11:10 yesterday morning, the brother found the cashier on his bed in a second floor bedroom with his left wrist badly slashed. He was unconscious and weak from loss of blood. Given first aid by the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department rescue squad he was taken to the hospital.

Hauptmann's Trial May Wait Until Next Year

Long Delay Seems Certain After Arraignment in N. J. Today.

Flemington, N. J., Oct. 23 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, who will be arraigned tomorrow on the indictment charging him with the murder of the first-born son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, may not be brought to trial before the first of the year.

The possibility of delay was hinted at in official sources today, while arrangements were being completed for Hauptmann's brief appearance before Supreme Court Justice Thomas W. Trenchard at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

It was pointed out the trial date—which will be fixed following the arraignment—hinges on whether the State decides to acquiesce to the defense's request for a four or five week delay and upon a State law providing that a case must be completed during the same court term in which it starts.

If the defense request is granted the trial could not be opened before December 1. Because the Hunterdon County oyer and terminer court's September term expires December 11, it was pointed out it would not be possible to start at that time as the State, with about 70 witnesses to call, expects the case to take three weeks.

Physical evidence to be used in the trial was brought from the Bronx, where Hauptmann lived with his wife and infant son, by New Jersey State troopers.

Included were three suitcases, a small teakwood box made by Hauptmann, a case containing a shotgun, a panel with a penciled notation of the 1932 telephone number and address of Dr. John F. Condon, intermediary in the Lindbergh ransom negotiations, a tin can in which some of the ransom money was found, road maps and a German-English dictionary.

Eastman Tells Plans to Save Rails Millions

Alexandria Chamber Hears Coordination Will Cut Out Waste.

Proper coordination of railroad activities to eliminate unnecessary wastes of competition can save $35,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year, Joseph B. Eastman, Federal coordinator of transportation, estimated last night.

Outlining suggestions he will submit to Congress, he said he anticipated the creation of a scientific research bureau to help eliminate waste.

The possible use of aluminum and stainless steel freight cars, drawn by Diesel engines, is one method being studied, Eastman told 300 railroad and Government officials, Army officers and other guests at the quarterly dinner of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce in the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria.

Another possibility would be to load truck bodies on freight cars, hauling them to a point near their ultimate destination, and then transferring them to trucks for final delivery. Direct-drive cars, using the same means of propulsion as automobiles, also are being considered, Eastman observed.

Empty Car Waste.

One of the greatest railroad wastes lies in the extreme total of "empty car mileage," when empty freight cars are being returned to their home roads, he continued. He repeated his suggestion that such cars might be jointly owned.

In his list of suggestions to Congress, Eastman said, would be the creation of routine cost-finding systems, such as those used in other businesses, a clearing house for inter-company accounting transactions, and the setting up of purchase review boards and storekeepers' boards.

Labor objections and the objections of communities who believe themselves threatened economically if shops and yards are so coordinated are the chief obstacles at present, Eastman explained.

The Federal coordinator recalled that he had recommended regulation of all transportation facilities—ships, motor trucks, and airplanes, as well as railroads—by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and said he would do so again.

Eastman added that, in his present post, he was simply out on loan from the Interstate Commerce Commission, of which he had been a member many years, and disclaimed any membership in the brain trust, saying he was merely a "common or garden variety of Government official."

Railroad Decorations.

Red, white and blue railroad signal lanterns adorned the main dining room of the hotel, and the same color scheme was followed throughout the decorations. John U. Reardon, presiding, called the meeting to order by ringing a large engine bell. J. Randall Caton was toastmaster.

The Rev. Dr. William B. McIlwaine, jr., pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, gave the invocation, and solos were rendered by Senora Aurelia C. de Alfaro, wife of the attache of the Panamanian Legation, who was accompanied by Mrs. D. C. Book, and Lawrence E. Roland.

Among the guests were Mayor Emmett C. Davison, of Alexandria; Harry C. Butcher, general manager of the Columbia Broadcasting System; H. E. Ketner, commerce counsel of the Virginia Corporation Commission; W. C. Carrick, general manager of the R. F. & P. Railroad; Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commanding the Third Corps Area; Norman Call, president of the R. F. & P Railroad; Reperesentative Howard W. Smith, of Virginia; C. S. Krick, vice president, Pennsylvania Railroad; M. L. Sperry, president of the Washington Gas Light Co.; L. B. Wilson, president of the C. & P. Telephone Co. of Virginia; C. W. Van Horn, general manager of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad; W. C. Higginbottom, general manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad; W, J, Warthen, superintendent of motive power, R. F. & P. Railroad; Lieut. Col. J. G. Ord, commanding Fort Washington, Md.; H. Lester Hooker, chairman of the Virginia Corporation Commission; W. D. Duke, general manager of the R. F. & P. Railroad; Thomas Ozlin, member of the Virginia Corporation Commission, and C. H. Weber, general manager of the C. & P. Telephone Co.

Death of Judge Asked in Slaying

Georgia Jurist Contends Killing Was an Accident.

Thomasville, Ga., Oct. 23 (AP).—The State today demanded the death of Judge Roscoe Luke, a former member of the Georgia Court of Appeals, for the shotgun slaying of Oscar Groover, a business associate.

Scott Russell, special prosecuting attorney, told the jury he expected to prove Groover was slain to conceal the affairs of the Citizens Building and Loan Association of which he was secretary and Luke was the head. Russell said the cash journal of the loan company was missing.

Groover was shot to death as he sat in a truck. Luke said the shooting was an accident.

Mistrial Ordered In Murder Hearing

Jury Taken to Scene of Crime Without Authority.

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 23 (Spl.).—The second trial of Joe Washington, colored, charged with the murder of Harry M. Boyer, local garage owner, on August 26, was declared a mistrial here today, when Judge Philip Williams, of the Warren County Circuit Court, learned that two deputy sheriffs in charge of the jury took the 12 men to the scene of the crime this morning without the authority of the court and without the presence of the accused man and permitted them to discuss the case with a witness.

The visit was made while the court and counsel were considering instructions to the jury. The trial began yesterday morning and all testimony was in at 6:30 o'clock last evening.

The first trial was declared a mistrial when the jury failed to agree on the penalty as between death and life imprisonment in a first degree verdict. A third trial has been set for November 7.

Peril to World In Nationalism, Writer Warns

Sir Wimott Lewis nad Mrs. Roosevelt Heard by Bankwomen.

Extreme nationalism was denounced as a rancid poison, infecting the world, by Sir Wilmott H. Lewis, London Times correspondent, last night in addressing the Association of Bank Women's annual dinner at the Mayflower.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, in an informal talk, prescribed internationalism as a cure for the world's ills.

"Nationalism is a necessary and admirable force, but when there is too much if it there can be no order among the nations," Sir Wilmott said.

"International justice, expressed in the form of living institutions so firmly buttressed its laws will be obeyed, is the only possible substitute for war.

"How many of those who cry for peace are willing to see their Government divest itself of a single thread of unfettered sovereignty to get it?

"Everywhere armies and navies are growing and the bitter will to use them agian is excited by wars of tariffs and exclusions, the epileptic shaking of international exchanges, and the pressure within the nations of unemployment, poverty and disease."

The most important relationship, the most potent force for good or evil, is the Anglo-American friendship, in the opinion of Sir Wilmott.

Mrs. Roosevelt beseeched the women to study sympathetically the problems existing between the United States and other nations.

"When we are actually at war there is nothing we can do to better international relations," she explained. "The work must be done while we are at peace with all the other nations of the world."

The women were implored by Mrs. Roosevelt not to sink into insignificance during peaceful times.

"We should be more interested then than ever in what is happening in other places," she declared. "I am frequently told that we can do nothing to do away with war because it is human nature to want to fight and to settle difficulties in that way. But we have managed to leran to settle some of our difficulties in different ways."

After her talk, Mrs. Roosevelt hurried away to catch the 8 o'clock train for Boston to attend the Girl Scout conventoin.

The bank women began their day yesterday with a breakfast at which Walter E. Spahr, professor of economics at New York University, spoke on "Unified Banking in the United States." In the afternoon the convention delegates were received at the Pan-American Building by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union.

Native tobacco grower telling American tourists how Turkish tobacco is cured.

On the sunny slopes of Smyrna . . . in the fertile fields of Macedonia...along the shores of the Black Sea . . . grows a kind of tobacco that is different from any other tobacco in the world.

THESE Turkish tobaccos are the only tobaccos of foreign cultivation that are used to any great extent in making American cigarettes.

Turkish tobaccos are famous for their spicy aroma, and a blend of the right kinds of Turkish tobacco with our own home-grown tobaccos is better than any one kind used alone.

It is by blending and cross-blending these different tobaccos that we make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better.

Bankers Told Of Customer Relations Need

Educating of Public on Finance Methods Is Held Vital.

The panicky days which immediately preceded the National banking holiday in March, 1933, showed the need for "constructive customer relations" in every bank and trust company in the country, W. R. Morehouse, vice president of the Security-First National Bank of Los Angeles, declared yesterday at the second customer relations session of the A. B. A. convention.

Recalling that many depositors, he ring ill rumors, came to the bank to withdraw their deposits, Morehouse said:

"Instead of getting the facts from their bank or trust company, these worried customers had been getting their advice from alarmists, destructionists and misinformed people, some of whom believed that banks and trust companies should be put out of business.

"And that was the source of much of their information, principally because banks had not practiced constructive customer relations. Is it any wonder that they were confused and generally alarmed, and millions of depositors throughout the United States withdrew their balances?"

I. I. Sperling, assistant vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., stressed the importance of bankers maintaining the good will of their clients and depositors.

"Manner is just as important as method," he said. "Bank officers realize, in terms of good will, how they decline a loan application is equally as important as what they say."

A plea to give the public the facts about banking so as to offset the mass of current misinformation was made by David M. Auch, secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association.

Any program of improving customer relations which has as its sole goal the production of new business for banks is "extremely short-sighted," he said.

"A well-conceived and properly-executed plan of giving information about banking will do much," he asserted, "to prevent enactment of foolish and bizarre banking legislation."

Bankers Feted By A.B.A. Head

Law Is Host to Former Officials at Willard Luncheon.

Francis Marion Law, president of the American Bankers Association, was host yesterday at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel to past presidents of the A. B. A.

Law, Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., Philadelphia; Richard S. Hawes, First National Bank, St. Louis; Thomas B. McAdams, Union Trust Co., Baltimore; Walter W. Head, General American Life Insurance Co., St. Louis.

Rudolf S. Hecht, Hibernia National Bank, New Orleans; Robert V. Fleming, Riggs National Bank, Washington, and F. N. Shepherd, executive manager of the A. B. A.

Sabath Attacks Bankers of U. S. As 'Short-Sighted'

Bankers were charged with "short-sightedness" and failure to cooperate with the Administration yesterday by Representative A. J. Sabath (Democrat), Illinois.

"It is inexplicable," he said, "that some of the very financiers and brokers that were responsible for the recent panic and crash, but who nevertheless were themselves saved from complete extermination, are foremost among those who are today criticizing and finding fault with the Administration.

"These gentlemen must be under the impression that the people have forgotten that it was due to their avarice, greed and ignorance that the country has suffered.

"The business men of the Nation as well as the masses are thoroughly familiar with their lack of cooperation with the Administration and with their persistent unwillingness to extend sufficient credit for legitimate business. It is this short-sighted policy on the part of bankers that is retarding our progress toward complete recovery."

Bankers Waiting Roosevelt As Crowley Offers Reform

helpful to the depositor and to the country," he cautioned, "must always rest on you—and on no one else.

"Owing to the great crisis in your business, Government has come to your assistance. Its object is to promote self-help. American banking has survived the chaos and shock of the crisis. But much needs to be done.

"There is a challenge to the ability and willingness of the surviving American bankers to give constructive service and leadership in the upbuilding of our country.

"Your own first vice president said recently: 'We owe it to ourselves, and to the President, not to oppose, as our association has so frequently been accused of doing, every proposal of banking legislation and every departure from the old order!'"

Proposes 5-Point Program.

Crowley advanced a five-point legislative program, including:

1. Provision that an "adequate capital structure" be a condition of admission to the insurance fund.

2. Permanent limitation of $5,000 as the maximum of an individual's insurable deposits.

3. Power for the deposit corporation to buy assets from banks "in difficulty" to "facilitate mergers."

4. Power for the corporation to adopt rules and regulations which would promote "flexible administration."

5. Establishment of the definite annual premium payment.

In explanation of the specific limitation on premium payments, Crowley observed:

Asks Definite Premium.

"In the interest of depositors of the banks and of the insurance fund itself, there should be a definite premium payable annually. The banks will thus know what their expense is going to be and the corporation what revenue it can obtain if necessary from its members.

"This will remove the unlimited liability of banks. It will enable us to plan on the building of our fund. It will reveal to us if any additional sources of funds will be necessary It will be a definite stimulus to improved management to keep premiums as low as is consistent with the purposes of the fund."

Additional bank deposits in the past year of $4,500,000,000 were cited by Crowley as evidence of "increasing public confidence." He attributed the change to accomplishments of his organization in rehabilitation of the capital structure of banks, stimulation of "good management" and insurance of deposits.

He congratulated the bankers on past cooperation, adding:

"I predict that a continuation of this constructive attitude will bring us more closely in accord. In mutual confidence and mutual regard we shall best be able to serve the whole American people."

Cites Error in Licensing.

Crowley cited failure of 14,000 banks in 13 years as evidence of "gross error" in almost "indiscriminate licensing" of the institutions.

"We should not repeat that error," he warned.

"We are concerned about it because the unnecessary multiplication of banks will vitally affect our fund. No new bank or branch bank should be licensed or chartered unless it is economically necessary in the particular community."

Law modified earlier utterances by deploring "a Pollyanna attitude" or undue optimism.

"The bankers are far too intelligent to assume a Pollyanna attitude," he declared. "Facts and conditions must be faced.

Warns of Undue Optimism.

"There could be no greater mistake than for us to preach untempered or undue optimism, and if you don't mind I want to repeat that there can be no greater mistake than for us to preach untempered or undue optimism. There are grave problems to be recognized and solved."

Warming to his subject, Law went on:

"The world-wide depression is not over, although great progress toward recovery is being made. As thoughtful men, aware of the exigencies of the case, we may approve during the period of emergency measures and expenditures which otherwise we might not countenance."

"Approval of these is warranted on the basis that many of them are temporary in nature, and temporary only. In other words, many of these measures and expenditures will and should be eliminated when the emergency passes.

Has Faith in Recovery.

"No group of men in all the country more earnestly desires recovery than the bankers, and, as a group, we assert unshakeable faith that the natural forces of the country in themselves, will in due time bring about a full and complete measure of business recovery.

"That does not mean that a do-nothing program would be warranted. The country has been in no mood to tolerate such.

"Throughout the world, notably in England and the United States, earnest efforts have been and are being made in an endeavor to restore employment and to promote National well-being and this is as it should be.

"During the past few years the forces of destruction have been gallantly challenged and it can now be said that more and more of these destructive forces are being put under control. The country has a right, a very good right, to look to the bankers to be among those who lead in the movement to reawaken business confidence and initiative."

Law reminded banking is not "a closed science."

"Bankers generally agree," he said, "that the banking system we have had has not been good enough. That does not mean that it should be thrown on the scrap heap. The foundations are good and should be preserved. It is on the superstructure that work needs to be courageously and intelligently done and the country has a right to expect the bankers to do the job."

Will Work for Harmony.

The association, Law declared, always has followed a policy of maintaining "an harmonious working relationship" with the Administration and with Congress. He said that course would be pursued in the future as well.

"In this policy there was nothing political," he remarked. "We were simply dealing with the constituted powers operating the Federal Government. There was the one fact that we were concerned with, not whether the Government was of this party or that, and not whether it represented a certain type of social philosophy as against any other type.

"The American Bankers Association at no time has been committed to anything further than the support of certain measures or viewpoints strictly related to the banking field and which, as we saw it, would strengthen banking, as the true economic servant of all the Nation."

Every "sane banker" in the country, Law said, is "eager" to make good loans. He reported a "distressingly low" demand for the "superabundant" credit available.

Fleming Wins Praise.

Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, was praised by Law for his work as chairman of a committee on proposed revision of banking laws.

Law said bankers accorded "unanimous assent" to a recent statement by Donald R. Richberg, recovery coordinator, that the Federal budget should be balanced as soon as possible.

Other arresting statements by Law included:

"There is a feeling among bankers and business men everywhere that a recognition of the vital need of individual initiative and of fair profit is a sine qua non to recovery."

"Hasten the day when we shall be able to work out with other important Nations international agreements both as to trade and stabilization of currencies."

"We must perfect a banking system of our own and in our planning we will have as a goal the setting up of a structure that will fully meet the needs of changing National and business requirements; one that will adequately serve agriculture, industry and commerce, and, lastly, one that will contribute most fully to the well-being of the entire country.

"Everywhere people are returning to such old habits as thrift, self-denial, hard work and living within their income."

Federal Reserve Change-Up.

The presence of so many bankers in the city, meanwhile, caused a renewal of speculation in Treasury circles as to the ultimate plans of the Administration for reorganization of the Federal Reserve System and coordination of Federal banking functions.

In addition to being required to find a governor for the Federal Reserve System, President Roosevelt also may have to find a new Comptroller of Currency. J F. T. O'Connor, who holds that post, has been under heavy pressure to accept appointment as chairman of the board and Reserve agent of the San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank.

Paying an annual salary of $25,000, it is an attractive position from several standpoints. He likes Washington and his present job, but he has not yet made up his mind.

There has been some talk at the Treasury of consolidating under one head in the Treasury the various banking functions of the Government. For instance, it is contended, both efficiency and economy would be served by consolidating the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, now governed by by a three-man board, with the office of Comptroller of the Currency.

Work Seen Duplicated.

At present there is some duplication by the two agencies, chiefly in the making of bank examinations. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has been anxious for some time to bring about greater uniformity of bank examinations.

As far as could be learned President Roosevelt has not determined on a successor to Eugene R. Black as Governor of the Federal Reserve Board. M. S. Szymczak, a member of the board, was reported to be the President's choice, but that could not be confirmed. Previously Tom K. Smith, St. Louis banker, and Marriner S. Eccles, of Utah, now a special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, have been mentioned as possible appointees.

Although the Administration is understood to have definitely abandoned the idea of establishing a central bank, plans are being formulated for a revision of the Federal reserve act in order to give the board tighter control over the activities of banks. Nothing definite has been adopted, so far.

Studebaker Takes Education Office

Successor to Zook Was Delayed by Illness.

John Ward Studebaker, superintendent of schools in Des Moines, Iowa, for many years, arrived in Washington yesterday to assume his new duties as United States Commissioner of Education in the Federal Office of Education.

Mr. Studebaker, who was scheduled to begin as Commissioner on September 1, was delayed by illness in arriving. He was appointed to succeed Dr. George F. Zook.

Mr. Studebaker made numerous reforms and undertook many successful innovations in the Des Moines school system, including the nationally-known Des Moines public forum, an experiment in community-wide adult education; established the Smouse Opportunity School for physically-handicapped children; reduced the per capita pupil instruction costs by more than 20 per cent, and systematically revised courses of study.

Trust Business Gains Are Told At Bank Parley

Power in New Financial Regulations Lauded by Speaker.

Trust business has assumed "great importance," Tom K. Smith, president of Boatmen's National Bank, of St. Louis, told the trust division of the American Bankers Association yesterday.

He reported banks with authority to exercise trust powers total 1,845 and have combined capital of $1,285,000,000. He said their resources exceeded $18,000,000,000, or 87.8 per cent of the National banking system.

Smith declared National banks were administering more than 100,000 individual trusts amounting to $6,311,000,000 as well as 10,784 corporate trusts and were acting as trustees for note and bond issues totaling $10,400,000,000.

Banking Act Praised.

"It is clearly apparent," he added, "that trust business has reached very remarkable and very impressive totals and that the conduct of trust business today constitutes a very considerable portion of the total activities of the banks and trust companies in the United States."

Fewer bank failures should occur in the future due to the 1933 banking act, declared Eugene M. Stevens, board chairman of the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank.

"Prior to the enactment of the banking act of 1933, he said, "supervising agencies had little or no power to correct practices and policies in individual banks which were leading them into ultimate disaster.

"The punitive powers could be exercised only when actual insolvency had been reached, or when there had been some direct violation of the banking act.

New Power Stressed.

"Under the banking act of 1933 such agencies are clothed with an authority which is designed to enable them to check the evils of mismanagement by demanding change in such management and in policies which are inimical to the best interests of the bank, and thus be in a position to prevent disaster, rather than await the culmination of difficulties which would later have been cured by drastic action.

"The knowledge of the existence of this power should make its application unnecessary excepting in rare instances. If the supervising authorities have the courage and the good judgment to exercise these new powers properly, a greater public confidence in examination and supervision may therefore be justified."

Another speaker, H. O. Edmonds, vice president of the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago, urged removal of present handicaps in trust company operations.

Keeping the Home Fires Burning Is Problem for TVA

The fire that burns continually on "Ras" Londemood's hearth is posing a problem for the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Associated Press says.

Landemood is a farmer in Union County, Tenn. His farm is in the basin of the new Morris Dam and the valley authority wants to move him to another one.

Lindemood's agreeable, but he insists that the authority find him a farm near enough so that he can "carry fire" from his old hearth to his new one. Since his family went over the mountains from Virginia generations ago, the fire at his hearth has never gone out, and he doesn't intend that it shall.

Sidelights on the Bankers

It Seems That Bank Bandits Prefer Using the Name of Nelson—A. B. A. Head Gets a Laugh From Interview.

Bank bandits prefer the alias "Nelson" to any other, according to W. R. Morehouse, vice president of the Security-First National Bank of Los Angeles. A study of bank crooks, he said, revealed there have been as many as five using the name at one time.

"So take a tip from me," he added, "and look out for men calling themselves Nelson, the most popular name among bank crooks."

Washington bank deposits exceed the deposits in all Mexican banks, the constructive customer relations session was told yesterday.

Francis M. Law, president of the A. B. A., admittedly got a great kick out of an interview he granted the press yesterday, more than a score of newspaper men appearing to question him about this and that.

"It makes me laugh," he said, "to think that a boy from Houston can come up here and tell you fellows anything."

"Politics is a funny thing," opines Clinton B. Axford, editor of The American Banker. "Before election we hear on all sides how much the candidates will save the country. After election we get our eyes open and wonder how much of the country can be saved."

The A. B. A. in 1925 founded the American Bankers Association Educational Foundation in commemoration of its fiftieth anniversary. This is a trustee fund to provide scholarships and promote research in banking and finance in colleges throughout the United States.

Law Deplores Trade Timidity

Business Men Out of Red, Must Take Up Available Credit, He Says.

Bank reserves are unusually large because "business men were shell-shocked by the depression," Francis M Law, American Bankers Association president, declared yesterday.

He said at a press conference that bankers in recent months have offered their clients lines of credit totaling millions of dollars, but few of such opportunities to borrow money were utilized.

"Business men are getting their feet on the ground," he added. "They are more or less in black ink. They struggled for a long time to wipe out their pre-depression obligations and now they're slow to get back in debt.

"As a class they are timid. Because of their natural conservatism they're always afraid something unfortunate is going to happen. We hope to see this timidity dispelled."

Asked whether most bankers still were bothered by "sleepless nights," he responded:

"No. Their greatest worry now is over putting reserves to work."

He voiced encouragement over "a modest expansion" of credit in recent months. He declared interest rates were lower than for many years, but seemed to have little bearing on total loans.

Law said the trend seemed toward longer-term loans.

"I don't believe this country can be liquidated on a 90-day basis," he said. "It would be a contribution to recovery if pressure would be lessened on slow loans backed by good assets."

Bankers, he reiterated, are anxious to cooperate with the Roosevelt Administration in spurring recovery.

"We're for any program of recovery that does no violance to sound banking principles and does no harm to depositors. There are lots of opinions among our thousands of members, but on such fundamentals we stand together."

Parent-Teacher's Group Meets at Charles Young

Teachers of the Charles Young School discussed school activities at the first meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association last night. The Rev. James D. Pair, president of the Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations, and Mrs. M. H. Winton, school principal, addressed the meeting.

Plans were announced for a play, "The Dragon," to be presented at the school, November 2. W. A. Jackson, president of the association, presided.

When Cheap Is Dear.

A matter that is not formally on the schedule for discussion, and which has received little mention in either the daily press or the financial publications, is, nevertheless, important in the minds of many of the bankers assembled at the current convention.

This is the policy of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in reducing its interest charges to the point where it is actively in competition with private banking, with its rate level not only as low as business rates, but even lower. It should be recalled that a directly opposite policy was pursued by the War Finance Corporation in reconstruction finance work in 1921-23. At that time loans were made to banks and other borrowers at rates which encouraged the beneficiaries to repay the Government and seek their funds elsewhere.

However popular cheap money from the Government may be politically, it is unsound from the point of view of Government finance. Obviously it keeps the burden of supplying funds on the Treasury for unnecessarily large periods and in unnecessarily large amounts. Public funds should be used as a backstop when other funds are not available. They should be employed with a view to having repayment made if, as and when private business can take over the financing that the Government should only enter into for temporary and emergency purposes.

The fact that many banks are borrowing, and like to get their funds at the lowest possible rates, should not interfere with sober consideration of this fundamental and important question by the bankers assembled at this convention. The cheap money that borrowers like to obtain from the Government will be very dear in the long run if it means that Government banking institutions will take over permanently the functions and business of private banking in this country.

A Limping Parole System.

Conditions in the District's penal institutions are far from satisfactory. The reformatory at Lorton is notoriously inadequate in its present unfinished state, and the District Jail is frequently condemned by authorities as a place unfit to incarcerate human beings. Reports currently submitted to the Board of Public Welfare again emphasize the urgent needs of these institutions, but there seems to be little chance of securing the necessary funds.

Unfortunately, the District can not inaugurate all civic projects that appear desirable. The pressing need for more schools, libraries, playgrounds, sewage disposal facilities, municipal buildings, &c., can not be satisfied in a single year out of an economy budget. Replacement of the District Jail seems to be one of many improvements that will have to be postponed until more propitious times.

In the meantime, however, conditions might be substantially improved with very little expense by establishing the parole system on a secure footing. The desirability of more efficient parole work is indicated by the report of Capt. Rives, superintendent of the jail, that nearly 65 per cent of the prisoners received at the jail during the last fiscal year had previously been committed. Apparently the failure to follow up prisoners released from our penal institutions keeps a steady stream flowing back into the jail.

There are many indications that more prisoners could be released from Lorton and the District Jail if the Parole Board had a staff of supervisors to check up their activities. At present only one such officer is functioning. Two more would be added under provisions incorporated in the budget for 1936. At least five such officers are needed to relieve the parole system from its present moribund state. A relatively meager outlay for this purpose might relieve crowded penal institutions and at the same time further the even more important work of crime prevention.

Balance Of Payments.

Hugh Walpole is a British novelist whose reputation rests in part upon his familiarity with what used to be called "Polite Society." Other "society novelists" wrote about dukes and duchesses from hearsay, picturing them as the novelists thought these coronet-wearers ought to be. But Walpole wrote about them as they were. "He knew." Now he has fallen into a society that he did not know. The results are unsatisfactory.

He fell into a society of swindlers. In one very practical sense, he joined it—though wearing the full panoply of innocence. He met some suave gentlemen at Hollywood, who played not on the screen, but on Walpole's well-attested reputation as a "joiner." It was suggested that he should join a brotherhood whereof the badge "would be useful in many places." The cost was $100. Mr. Walpole says he paid it, only to discover that "the organization was not bona fide."

This is deplorable. But judgment should not be too hasty. Although a crime is a crime, motive ought to weigh in the infliction of punishment. British lecturers have taken a lot of money from America, and Mr. Walpole has been one of the most assiduous of them. After all, international payments must in the long run balance, regardless of how that balance is secured.

The Legion's Opportunity.

Agitation for immediate payment of the veterans' bonus seems to be under control at the American Legion convention in Miami, but it is far from smothered. Apparently leaders are striving merely to keep the Legion from abandoning all restraint. Little thought is being given to the possibility of making a positive contribution to the country's economic stability.

Senator Stelwer rightly called into question "the ethics of able-bodied men making a demand for immediate cash payment of claims not yet due when many of them can afford to wait for payment until the certificates mature in 1945." Nevertheless, he advocated a compromise request for "early payment" of the bonus, when it would place a "minimum burden" upon taxpayers. That time will not arrive as long as the American Legion Monthly can advertise that legionnaires earn double the average income.

Advice given the Legion by its former national commander, Louis Johnson, was more constructive. His theme may be readily extracted from a few brief sentences:

> Our first duty is and must be to our country and our disabled comrades. . . . Let us remember that now is not the time to plunge into a program which might retard our progress toward complete recovery. . . . If we descend to selfish interests, if we put ourselves as individuals above the welfare of all of our people, then our strength will become a weakness, our goals will never be reached.

Even this thoughtful and realistic address, however, ended on a weak note. Mr. Johnson's central theme was, "Don't rock the boat."

An organization as assertively patriotic as the American Legion should be ashamed to indorse such a purely negative objective as "Don't rock the boat." It should not forfeit its present opportunity to take a positive and constructive stand for the country in its hour of need.

As the most influential organization of veterans, the Legion could greatly strengthen current widespread efforts to revive confidence by decisively declaring against payment of the bonus as long as the budget is unbalanced. Such a move might swing the balance in favor of constructive budgetary policy and give a real impetus to recovery. Certainly such truly patriotic action would enormously increase the prestige of the Legion and reverse the unfortunate belief, too widely held, that National welfare is not the ideal closest to its heart.

Program Note.

Washington is fortunate in having a Symphony Orchestra. It has not always seemed as though residents of the District appreciate this fact. But the enthusiastic response which Hans Kindler's first program of the season received on Sunday afternoon is all the indication anyone needs that this organization is filling a definite need in the community.

The National Symphony Orchestra, in the three years of its existence, has had those varying experiences which are the lot of any new organization dependent upon the public whim. But for three years it has steadily advanced under the direction of its conductor, and because of his loyalty to his difficult task it has assumed at least the beginning of that integrity so necessary to an undertaking of this nature.

The National Capital deserves an orchestra which, in the realm of music, will place it on the same level that its libraries, laboratories and galleries have attained in the realms of letters, research, and art. Through the generosity (or is it really only the civic duty?) of several of its residents, the orchestra will have no financial difficulties this season. It is, however, a fact that its "appropriation" is the lowest of any in a city of comparable size in this country. With support assured, it is now up to Mr. Kindler and his loyal associates to give Washington programs of as high a quality as are at his command.

Timidity, it may be suggested, is as dangerous a quality as a desire to sensationalize. A good proportion of those who attend the concerts are intelligent persons who hope to hear something more than pieces of time-tested merit. They want also to be informed on what contemporary artists are attempting. We hope, therefore, that the National Symphony will offer a widely varied fare, even though some of it may shock ears unattuned to anything after Brahms. If we are to have a Symphony worthy of the National Capital we can do so only by allowing its conductor to carry on his work unhindered by those trammeling conventions that too often elsewhere have retarded orchestral development.

Zest In The News.

Charles A. Dana once announced that his ideal of a really newsy news item was the true account of a man who bit a dog. Yet this high standard, perhaps too often cited, was attained by several dispatches during the last few days.

There was that one from Long Beach, Calif., which told of a modern Enoch Arden's return and his remark, that his wife was "vaguely familiar." There was the story from Deering, Mo., which described the plucking of a hen, to determine the winner of a wager, and the discovery that exactly 8,537 feathers were on the fowl. Washington came forward with news that a man, posted by the police as missing, had been traveling back and forth between New York and Ireland, and finally cabled that homesickness would cause him to remain forever on the old sod.

From Hot Springs, Ark., issued information that a physician had demonstrated a cure for tuberculosis to be confinement in a room from which all light is excluded! The Arkansas doctor claims that germs can not live under such conditions. In Kansas City, Mo., an 84-year-old woman asked that "The Sidewalks of New York" and "Wearin' of the Green" be played by a band at her funeral, and it was done.

Grandfather might say, "Nothing of that sort happened when I was young; no freakish news appeared in the papers." Grandfather is right, and grandfather is wrong. Incidents even as curious as those of today were constantly occurring, but stories of them did not appear because the art of gathering and disseminating news was in its infancy. Today the public is so keen for something different that members of the Fourth Estate are continuously raking the four corners of the earth for items, which, like tobasco sauce or paprika, will add zest to what the reader has set before him upon the printed pages.

A National Disgrace.

An intolerable crime situation in the District of Columbia is brought to a climax by the murder of Allen D. Wilson, newspaper route carrier, who was apparently mistaken for one of the "big shots" in local racketeering. Although the murder occurred across the line in Montgomery County, there is no question that the crime was definitely connected with the organized gambling operations which are fast making Washington a National disgrace.

Unless the public as a whole make their indignation over this outrage effective, the spread of gambling, prostitution, drunkenness and housebreaking will rapidly become even worse. The average observer does not need much knowledge of the underworld to be aware that both gambling and streetwalking are well organized within the District. And any competent police expert knows it is from these lucrative forms of organized vice that murder too often spreads.

The District Police Department, under Maj. Ernest W. Brown, has been active within recent weeks in disturbing the gangsters who have been far too immune in dotting the central part of the city with gambling establishments. At least one important arrest has been made. But it is only through constant harassment of these known racketeers, conducted with the insistence of a terrier with a rat, that any appreciable clean-up seems possible under the existing laws regulating games of chance.

The committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches yesterday sent a circular letter to members of Congress, judges, prosecutors and other District officials calling attention to these "extremely serious" conditions. The committee makes the wise suggestion that all those to whom the letter is addressed work for concerted action to rid the city of crime. Obviously part of the effort should be toward a tightening of the laws and a complete overhauling of the Police Court procedure, so that the police will have no further excuse for failing to improve conditions.

In the meantime existing laws should be vigorously prosecuted by the Police Department, without any reliance on the excuse that arrests at present do no good.

The Hawaiian Case.

The legal status of the Hawaiian Islands is further clarified by Justice Bailey's decision against the sugar producers who endeavored to prove that the Jones-Costigan Sugar Control Act is unconstitutional. But the political controversy over the relationship of these Pacific isles to the United States will merely be sharpened by this decision.

In effect, Justice Bailey decided that Congress may discriminate against Hawaiian industry if it so chooses. Annexation of the islands subjected them to the sovereign dominion of the Federal Government in spite of the fact that they voluntarily became a part of the United States. Congress not only has power to regulate commerce between the States and with foreign nations, but also complete authority to regulate the internal affairs of Territories, whether or not they are organized.

The important thing in this case, as in many others, however, is not the letter of the law but the policy of administration. So long as Hawaii and the insular possessions are victims of an uncertain and haphazard policy, complaints of discrimination will be carried to the courts as well as to executive officials. It may be true, as Justice Bailey suggests, that the islands will gain rather than lose economically through enforcement of the Jones-Costigan act. But the manner of applying that law to the islands is repugnant to their people.

No doubt the current decision will stimulate Hawaii's demand for statehood. Coming in the wake of the President's promise on leaving Hawaii that "your Administration will not forget you are in very truth an integral part of the Nation," Justice Bailey's opinion will give Hawaii the feeling of an orphan. Because of the great distance of the islands from the mainland, and the differences in race and customs, it is questionable whether Hawaii should ever become a State. On the other hand, the status of a territory can easily become intolerable if it is subjected to discrimination. Perhaps a more comprehensive insular policy is needed than that recently inaugurated by the well-chosen appointment of Dr. Gruening as director of Territories and Island Possessions.

Here is a subject that will demand increasing attention if the Government continues to extend its control into the economic field. It might well be placed upon the agenda of the next Congress for exploration if not for immediate legislation.

Even Democrats Not Safe.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read Mr. Evan Jones' complaint about being let out of a job in the Scranton (Pa.) postoffice.

The Democrats of Arlington County, Virginia, find a different situation. We find Democrats let out of jobs and outstanding Republicans appointed. For example, W. B. Denham, a United States deputy marshal, was required to resign September 1, notwithstanding he was originally appointed to the post during the Administration of President Wilson with the indorsement of Hon. C. C. Carlin, who represented Eighth Congressional District of Virginia in the House of Representatives.

On the other hand, we find outstanding Republicans appointed to positions in the Federal Government. Fred A. Gosnell and L. C. MacPherson being outstanding examples. Mr. Gosnell was nominated and elected a member of the county board of Arlington County as a Republican in 1931. He was at the time an employe of the Federal Census Bureau. Later he resigned this post. During the 1932 campaign he was prominent in the support of the reelection of President Hoover and opposed to the election of President Roosevelt.

Within the past year he resigned as a member of Arlington County board and was appointed to a position in the Census Bureau. I am also informed that Miss Elsie English, president of the Arlington County Women's Republican Club, has been appointed to a spot in the Census Bureau.

In the case of Mr. L. C. MacPherson, he was for a number of years the chairman of Arlington County Republican committee and in 1932 predicted that President Hoover would have 1,000 majority in that county. Recently he was appointed an inspector in Public Works Administration, with offices in Richmond, Va., and participated in the Eighth District Republican convention that nominated John L. Green as its candidate for Congress. I am taking this as reported in the State newspapers that he was on the resolution committee of the convention that drew up the platform for Mr. Green, who is an outstanding opponent of the New Deal.

Mr. Evan Jones is possibly an exception to this rule.

The author of this letter had received an offer of an appointment as a watchman at United States and District of Columbia Courthouse under Mr. Colpoys, but finally declined the appointment for the reason that under normal conditions I am able to earn a larger salary than one paid the court attaches.

For More Books.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our city for many years past has been notoriously low in the number of units constituting its public library system and in its per capita degree of support of public library service. It is the sincere hope of tens of thousands of Washingtonians that there will be an increase, rather than a decrease, in future appropriations for this essential educational and cultural service.

Recently I had occasion to compile per capita maintenance cost figures for our public library system, as compared with the immediate 10 larger and 10 smaller cities. The results showed that, with the exception of the last two fiscal years, Washington has been very far below the per capita average for these 20 cities.

As you are probably aware, the depression years have run up library use and book circulation figures to heights far beyond anything dreamed of in the past. This multiplied use of our public library collections has materially increased the wear and tear of books until now some 25,000 books are worn out annually.

The appropriation for book purchase for the Public Library has been cut from $54,500 to $40 000 for the last two years, despite the greatly added demands for public library service. I think all Washington citizens will agree with me that the next appropriation should be materially increased in order to insure a proper service to all library users.

Planes for Preparedness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Aroused interest, with astonishing swiftness, is centering upon the Air branch of National Defense. When the Aviation Commission, with Clark Howell at its head, was first named and ordered abroad for purposes of observation and investigation, superficial critics thought it a mere highflung New Deal gesture, with but slight real significance.

That it is no such thing is so plainly shown by the findings and subsequent reports of the commission to the President that its doings are rapidly becoming of a headline significance, scarcely equaled by any other news of the day.

What the air force of even a small nation like Japan, who is today demanding naval equality, could in an instant do to our cities and our inadequate, attenuated coast defenses, thinly stretched over thousands of miles, is a shuddering thought. We've got to have more planes. Nothing will be allowed by Mr. Roosevelt to impede their quick furnishing. We'll get them. Existing landing areas will be improved, and many new ones be provided at strategic intervals throughout the country. Reliable, inexpensive planes will be turned out by the hundreds and thousands.

Inland cities, big and little, are today helpless. Should they so continue at the present critical juncture? The highest authorities on war signs tell us war can not possibly be avoided. It is certain that the nearest approach to its prevention is through perfect preparedness, and that lies within our power.

Sinclair and the New Deal.

Does Upton Sinclair believe in and support the New Deal?

Before the primary and about the time of the Sacramento convention, attempts were made to persuade Democrats that the EPIC candidate is ardent in the New Deal.

The evidence of Mr. Sinclair's own words in his campaign booklets is to the contrary. He has taken numerous opportunities to hold up New Deal measures to ridicule and to brand them as certain failures. In his "I, Governor of California," a large part of his argument for himself is to the effect that his EPIC plan is needed because the New Deal measures are failing and sure to fail.

Mr. Sinclair begins early in his "I, Governor of California." On page 12 he says:

"Like all good Americans, I am giving my support to NRA, but I can not shut my eyes to its failures. . . . As a matter of fact, the NRA program admits its own inadequacy."

On the next page he says of public works relief:

"The work is a farce, and the workers know it is a farce, and it does not do much to keep up their morale."

On page 24 he says, speaking, according to his habit, as though he were looking back on the past:

"In October, 1933, the failure of NRA was easy to foresee. . . . The President was trying the futile Hoover idea of extending bank credit to business men who had no customers."

Again, on page 28, still speaking as of the past, he says of NRA and of the President's dollar devaluation:

"The NRA system of restricting hours of labor and fixing wages while permitting retail prices to increase without restriction, brought its inevitable consequences. The workers were unable to buy what they had produced and production began another swift decline. The only remedy was inflation—actual inflation, not merely the promise of it, which had been sufficient during the summer of 1933. The effect of inflation was to render the minimum wage program meaningless because a continued rise in prices meant a continual cutting of real wages."

"In the effort to keep up prices the Federal Government is now reducing production, the very apex of economic folly."

Mr. Sinclair gives lip service to Franklin D. Roosevelt personally, but as for the New Deal he does not believe in its methods and flouts its promises.

Upton Sinclair a New Dealer?

Poison By the Ton

Postoffice, Wednesday.

THE most dangerous of habit-forming drugs is heroin. It is more deadly than morphine, from which it is derived—far more deadly than mere opium, from which morphine is derived. In some countries the law permits registered physicians and surgeons to buy minute quantities for use at rare medical and surgical crises. In this country the law flatly prohibits heroin. Even the most lenient governments agree that the entire world's "legitimate needs" total only a fraction over a ton per annum.

So what would you say to the European manufacture of several tons during 1933?

And what will you say when you hear that most of these came to America?

* * *

America's heroin-troubles aren't like charity: they don't begin at home. The hands of American drug manufacturers and importers—the legitimate industry—are clean. Yet American officials declare that the illicit traffic smuggled between four and five tons of heroin into the United States last year—from a single source.

* * *

The story of how this stream of poison was detected, and traced backward, ought to be told by the authentic biographer of Sherlock Holmes. However, the record of the actual sleuth work is buried. We have had to garner the bare results from a statement recently made by Stuart J. Fuller—of the City of Washington and the Department of State—and, as his audience was the Opium Advisory Committee of the League of Nations, he had to talk like a delegate.

Nevertheless, we venture to fill in a few gaps.

* * *

What happened seems to have been this:

Here in the Capital, some official was yawning over pages of statistics concerning Bulgaria's import-trade. Suddenly his eyes brightened.

"This is a funny thing," he said to his chief. "Bulgaria's been importing a whole lot of acid acetic anhydride. She got 70 kilograms in 1931, mostly from Germany, a bit from France. In '32 she jumped to 3,500 and in '33 to 6,000."

"What"—the chief probably inquired—"is acid acetic what's-its-name used for?"

"Well, it's used for a couple of dyestuffs, for aspirin, for some artificial silk processes—and for the manufacture of one other commodity. Now, Bulgaria doesn't produce dyestuffs, or aspirin, or rayon. We know that. So the inference is that these Bulgarian imports must be used to the other commodity—which is heroin."

* * *

There are various estimates of how many units of heroin can be produced from a given number of acid acetic anhydride units. In theory, 1,000 of the latter will make 1,500 of the former. Allowing for the faults of expert practice, under conditions obtaining in a really efficient factory the product is fifty-fifty. The ordinary clandestine laboratory gets 500 units of heroin from 1,000 units of the anhydride—but even that is not to be sneezed at, especially as the cost of raw material and production isn't heavy, while, in the illicit traffic, the pure drug is bringing as much as $90 an ounce, and, when adulterated up to 85 per cent, sells for $20.

* * *

Anyhow, those Bulgarian import figures started that investigation the details whereof are hidden from a drama-loving public by our undramatic Government. And the end was not the formal statement made by Mr. Fuller to the League's Opium Advisory Committee; Mr. Fuller politely stopped without saying whither the heroin went. The end was given your Post-Impressionist here in Washington the other day, when another official declared:

"Out of those Bulgars' six tons or so addicts in Egypt and Canada got between one and two tons and addicts in the United States got the rest."

* * *

However, if our own country suffered at the hands of the Bulgarian bandits—and it's only fair to say that the Bulgarian government is getting after them—poor China has been suffering more at the hands of heroin-makers far and wide. Mr. Fuller says that imports of acid acetic anhydride have been frequent and regular, for some years past, at Shanghai and that lots of from 1,000 to 5,000 pounds are now arriving several times in each month.

* * *

Alfredo Ernesto Blanco, head of the Anti-Opium Information Bureau, Geneva, is an able authority upon such matters. Says he: "The acid acetic anhydride imported (into China) in one month through Shanghai alone suffices for the manufacture of an amount of heroin at least equal to the total (legitimate) needs of the world for an entire year."

* * *

Finally, at the League Committee's session, up spoke Senor Julio Casares, Spanish representative. "He"—we quote the official report—"drew attention to the enormous quantities of caffeine, one of the principal constitutents of heroin-pills, into China. He stated that these have increased to 60 tons annually. If it is not possible to prove that such quantities are utilized for chemical purposes, one must come to the conclusion that they must be used in the manufacture of such pills." And Senor Casares was obviously of opinion that the chemical alibi was "out."

* * *

And so?

Well, it's always a comfort to know that some other country is worse off than our own, anyhow.

Versatile Musician Joins Band Playing at Heigh-Ho Club

By Kay Ware.

Heigh-Ho's new orchestra member is practically a one-man band. He plays the violin, blows a saxophone and clarinet, and is a fine pianist.

So if the saxophones seem more mellow it'll be Rutt's doings; if the clarinet solo is more arresting than usual, Rutt will be the player.

When you're at Heigh-Ho, ask the band to play "Serenade for a Wealthy Widow." It's a "stomp" and ordinarily requires 14 musicians. A little think like absense of the other six doesn't bother them at all, and their eight players put it over.

Jack Pomeroy's Revue continues a second week at Club Michel. Crawford and Caskey, dance team, who have appeared at local theaters, interpret Ravel's "Bolero" and the Bing Crosby number, "Temptation."

The girl with the English accent is Adele Ardsley, who sings popular ballads; Jackie Moore, a Californian, presents a dance that hasn't any name, but is interesting none the less.

Hoyt Meredith does a big job. In addition to being master of ceremonies, he contributes vocal numbers, one of which is a song with over 21 verses.

* * * *

That Harlem Dance.

That Harlem dance at Madrillon had a hard time keeping alive. Allen and Mona Drake, the dancers, had to contend with the police in some cities, because "the savage bit of choreography" was considered too much for the patrons. It was originally presented by Clifton Webb and Mary Hay in London. Then the rights to present the number were turned over to the Drakes by Clifton Webb himself.

The Drakes' Carioca is said to be the original version, since they presented the stage Carioca that accompanied the opening of "Flying Down to Rio" in Hollywood.

This team sings as well as dances.

Another feature at Madrillon is Toma Genare, with tap and acrobatic waltz numbers. She has been recently with the Capitol Theater in New York, where here 40 or 50 spins at the end of the waltz made the Gothamites sit up and take notice.

If you are watchful, you may catch a glimpse of some of the distinguished financiers of the country in the Mayflower lounge almost any afternoon.

Then, too, if you had been observant, you would also have seen Joseph P. Tumulty and his partner, John F. Crosby (Mrs. Crosby listening very intently to Sid Cowen's singin); Mr. and Mrs. Preston (NRA Administrator) McKinney, Frederick H. Payne, former Assistant Secretary of War; Mrs. Harry Norment and M. and Mme. Pierre Claudel, son and daughter-in-law of the former French Ambassador to the United States.

Moe Baer, formerly with Pete Macias, will furnish the music at Guy Scott's new Club Habana. The opening date ought to be almost any time now.

Lotus offers dances, dances and still more dances. Elton and Gilrone do a modern waltz and an Arabian dance; Marita, of the Pacific Coast, expresses eccentricity in her routine, and Karol and Givens, a musical comedy team, tap in double-quick rhythm, and show you some new and intricate steps you've never seen before.

Bill Strickland becomes increasingly proud of his songstress, Judy Ellington. He plans to introduce her in some of the skits, along with the antics of the orchestra.

There's a new man at the Willard's Bamboo Room. Fenton Froom sings and appeals to the ladies. John Slaughter has said nice things about his voice, and patrons nod and smile at the end of his numbers.

The committee in charge of the approaching Victory Ball were having a fine time at the Bamboo Room the other night. Maj. Raymond J. Walter, president, and Miss Mary Ellen Taggart, National Committeewoman, head the committee.

The "Back in an hour" sign is still on the door of the old Troika. Hope nobody's waiting.

Blonde Libby Rowland is one of the reasons why Washingtonians go to Casa Rita. Jimmy Santmeyer and orchestra is another. But if it weren't for those two features, the desserts, Spanish girls and funny paintings on the walls would invite you just the same.

Maryland Club Gardens goes in for remodeling on a 24-hour basis. Flood lights make night work possible. It's all to get ready for the Halloween opening.

Billy Barrington, decorator, shot holes in Heigh-Ho's tap room and used a real gun to do it. He wanted the fireplace to look as if there had been a battle there.

If you're ever looking for Barnee in his spare moments, you'll find him at the Cotton Club. And he's not the only celebrity who goes there. Visiting orchestras, theatrical bills turn out en masse. Something is going on all the time; there are no lapses in Cotton Club's program.

Remember "Roule-Roule?"

Today we have indescribable dance sensations going under such names as "Carioca," "Cockroach" and "Continental." Twenty years ago the "Roule-Roule" (pronounced Rouly-Rouly) was described by Evelyn Nesbit in a long article and nine natty illustrations. Some of Miss Nesbit's comments:

"The Roule-Roule belongs in the catagory of folk dances, having a basis in actual human emotions and activities. No dance movement that is purely artifical can excite the general popular interest that is enjoyed by one that is rooted in the life of a race or a nation or a human activity. 'Roule-Roule is a sort of playful nautical French idiom descriptive of the rolling gait of sailors on the pitching decks of a vessel at sea.

"Nobody knows how long the French sailors have danced the 'Roule-Roule,' whose steps and figures . . . with a windmill motion of the arms . . . are based on the idea of the instability of a ship's deck. A merry and playful dance with its windmill motion . . . it delights the children, and the kiddies learn it quite rapidly."

And then at the close of the article is this information: "There are few, if any, of the new dances which are as valuable as the 'Roule-Roule' in the way of physical exercise for women who are taking on flesh too rapidly and are in need of a general livening up."

Times haven't changed.

One observant young man states that all the town's rumors start with the town's musicians. So, if you want gossip, you'll know where to turn.

The schooner Constellation is anchored at Water and M streets. It's an old vessel made over and is well worth a trip to the water front. Dinner dancing nightly, George Gaul's Music. A point of interest during the day, and a delightful place to spend an evening. Nights—by reservation only.

Housewives say there are lots of things you can do in a frying pan besides fry. Sure, jump out into the fire.

Flatter men and they will love it, but don't ever tell them they're susceptible to your flattery.

A girl will believe what she knows is a lie—if it is a compliment.

Isn't it almost time for the Monument to step out of its bath-tub?

Economic 'Solution' Is Offered Germany

Nazi Writer's Plan Given Wide Publicity Logical Way Out for Reich.

By Anton Angelo.

WHILE the German government is making desperate efforts to solve steadily increasing economic stress in the Reich, German business leaders are endeavoring to salvage Germany's dwindling foreign trade, the loss of which contributes so greatly to the acute domestic situation, notably the unemployment problem.

When the Nazis assumed power under the leadership of Hitler, they started to revive certain medieval organizations, notably the famous Hanseatic League, which exercised a virtual commercial supremacy over northern Europe during the middle ages.

At one time, the Hanseatic League dictated to emperors and princes. It was more powerful than the Hudson Bay Co. or the British East India Co., and it held sway in the steelyard of London, as well as in 76 German Hansa cities, which were in complete control of the league. This organization passed out of existence historically at the close of the Thirty Years' War, at the signing of the peace of Westphalia in 1648.

The revived Hansa Bund is, of course, only a bare shadow of its powerful predecessor, and it is virtually under direct control of the Nazis. Its functions consists mostly of speeches and writings by the various officers of the league in the various cities under its sway.

In this connection, it is interesting to note the widespread publicity given in Germany to an article by Dr. Hans Peter Danielcik, president of the Berlin Hansa Bund. In this he suggests a possible solution for the economic problems, not only of the Reich, but of the rest of the world, with especial reference to foreign trade, an issue which is a burning one in Germany at the present time.

Dr. Danielcik's ingenious and controversial dissertation goes far to explain recent German policy with regard to debt obligations. It follows, in part:

"THE transformation of foreign trade policies in Germany, as well as in the entire world, is, today, one of the most acute economic problems. The volume of world trade and of the German export trade has decreased, during late years, to an unprecedented degree. The world trade of today amounts to a bare 34 per cent of the 1929 volume. The German export business has decreased from 13.48 billion reichsmarks in 1929 to 4.4 billion reichsmarks in 1933.

"Our international economic connections are largely destroyed. A world-wide revival of foreign trade is necessary. But, as developments of the last few years have taught us, this can not be accomplished by the methods of the past. New paths must be blazed. In order that the necessity of such recovery be realized by the entire world, it is imperative to review briefly the causes of the present state of affairs.

"One of the main causes of the present predicament is to be found in the Treaty of Versailles, which was built upon the premise of depriving Germany systematically of the means of livelihood, while simultaneously draining the country of billions of marks. Germany tried to comply with the dictate of Versailles. For this purpose she contracted huge credit loans in past years, largely devoted unproductively to the payment of tribute. The supply of goods levied on Germany threatened the economic stability of the creditor countries and led to the adoption of tariff regulations and to a universal trade war.

"Theoretic possibilities of solution for this world economic crisis, precipitated by Versailles, have been advanced by Dr. Schacht: On the one hand the exemption of the import of German goods in the creditor countries from all levies. To support this is the axiom that international obligations are met only by a supply of goods or services on the part of the debtor countries and the creditor who does not accept these goods is really in default and not the debtor, who wishes to meet his obligations. On the other hand, debt cancellation and the resultant liberation of international economic relations from financial burdens.

"THESE suggestions can not be accomplished practically in this manner. What is necessary is mutual agreement on both points, as well as on the trade relations in goods, which will protect the interests of the contracting parties. In other words, the fulfillment of German obligations must be made possible through increased willingness to accept German exports and simultaneously there must be a substantial reduction of debts in line with a clear realization of actual conditions. For this purpose Dr. Schacht stressed the urgent necessity of a moratorium of several years in regard to the old debts. It is obvious that the new National Socialist Germany must promptly meet the obligations now contracted and that no obligations be contracted if their fulfillment is not 100 per cent secure.

"However, it would be farfetched to assume that, even after elimination of the consequences of Versailles, there would be a return of the old conditions, the so-called "peace-time." For in the present economic situation, we are not dealing with one of the usual crises of which we have experienced many—even before 1914—and which usually ran their course. The foreign trade debacle, as well as the economic upheavel in general, can not be dissociated from the present spiritual transformation, just as any other phenomena of our era.

"Liberalism proclaimed the primacy of economics. National Socialism brushed aside this primacy and erected in its stead 'the primacy of the common people,' and of 'political leadership.' Economics is not the mistress but the servant of the whole, is not set apart from the state, following its own laws, but is a sector of the state development plan. The national mission is not so much concerned with the profit of the individual, but with the establishment of a standard of living in line with national economy as well as to advance the economic progress and safety of the nation. Foreign trade has very definite functions in this connection. It does not depend senselessly, as formerly, on unchecked exports at any price.

"THE main object of importing is to strengthen and safeguard the national economy from within, for instance, to obtain the necessary raw materials. The main object of exporting is to obtain the means for payment of the necessary imports and thereby assure these imports; further, to meet all other obligations, and simultaneously thereby advance employment to its fullest possible scope. The object of all foreign trade is, above all, the expansion of international trade relations from country to country in compliance with mutual demand and necessity. Thereby the economic progress of the other nations is aided, with the ultimate possibility of benefiting all concerned, but without jeopardizing one's own safety.

"This means breaking with the system of the unchecked playing of forces of 'laissez faire.' Owing to this free play of forces, people lost control of production planning. Under the aegis of laissez faire, during the past century, production ran riot without regard to the volume of goods on hand, or to the possible demand, and without planning. But the people and their purchasing power were forgotten, and one thought only in figures. Anarchy of production, clogging of distribution, trade wars fought with all possible weapons, for instance the valuta-dumping, economic dumping, etc., were the consequences. Simultaneously this led to exclusion regulations.

"This problem can only be solved by National economy and international order. This order can be brought into fruition by planning, direction and leadership of foreign trade relations, which obviously must go hand in hand with national economic planning from within.

"In the domain of foreign relations, our object will be that of mutual friendly cooperation. For that purpose, in view of the diverse structures of the various national economies, there will be a wide leeway. But even the future development of economics will not be without planning and within an uncontrolled course. Above all, the various economic methods, which we witness everywhere today, must be abrogated. The British empire, the United States of America, with their spheres of influences, as well as Russia, present instances of that kind."

The plan suggested by Dr. Danielcik is an interesting revelation of Nazi economic thinking and not the least interesting feature is the fact that similar methods have been persuasively suggested for the United States. Unfortunately for Germany, however, she has far less chance of carrying such a plan into effect than would this country.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Education by Radio.

More time for educational programs on the radio is opposed by radio station owners on the grounds that the public demands entertainment. The attitude of the experts is that no air college can succeed unless the professors have a clever routine, some good music and an identification line like "Wanna buy a duck?"

* * * *

No educational hour could go over big, they believe, unless the instructors could croon, wisecrack and lead a jazz orchestra in a pinch.

* * * *

The introduction, "Ladies and gentlemen, we now present Dr. T. Stapleton Podd, professor of economics at Harvard," would mean nothing.

* * * *

But, "Folks, we now give you our de luxe economics program, featuring Prof. Podd, the Ritz Roof Boys and Rudy Valee," would go over big.

* * * *

"Members of the unseen audience," you can imagine a professor saying in the Little Talks on Astronomy Hour, "let us resume our studies of celestial bodies. Last week I told you about Saturn. Hot cha-cha! Tonight I want to take up Neptune. It's colossal, boy, colossal! But before I go into that, folks, I want the Boswell Sisters to sing 'Fun to Be Fooled,' by permission of the copyright owners."

* * * *

Or Prof. Thaddeus D. Witherwather broadcasting: "This is Prof. Witherwather in the third of his series on talks on American history, with special attention to great battles of the republic. My program tonight will be divided into three parts.

* * * *

"Part one will be Lexington to Valley Forge, Burns and Allen and Paul Whiteman.

"Part two will feature Washington's Administration, Rubinoff and the Kenesaw Hill Billies.

"The program will conclude with the War of 1812, Amos and Andy, a news review by Lowell Thomas and ten minutes with that inimitable comedian, Joe Cook."

* * * *

* * * *

Another proposition being made at Washington is that the Government own and operate its own radio chain. Swell! This would guarantee a change of radio stars every four years.

* * * *

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

The Awakening.

ONE of the hopeful signs of our current life, the students have been saying for the past year, is the aroused interest of our people in the affairs of Government. As I understand it, there has not been any serious questioning of our ability to solve our problems if we would only wake up and study them. The trouble was that we had come to entrust our Government to self-seeking politicians and, as a result, we made quite a mess of things. But, now, with people all over the country showing such profound curiosity about Washington and what goes on here, well, we could bank on things getting on the up and up. Our liberties and institutions could not be endangered as long as this awakened spirit prevailed.

BARGERON

I was never so much impressed with this changed attitude as I was while visiting the Shakespeare country this summer. There I encountered such a search for knowledge about our Government as to make me glow with pride.

* * * *

It was quite apparent, early on this particular tour, that our Cooks' guide, in his early 50's, was miscast; that he shouldn't have been a guide but a poet, a singer or something by which his romantic nature could get a better play. After his second romantic flight two women seated ahead of me on the bus agreed that he had suppressed emotions.

"This, my friends," he would exclaim ecstatically, "is a land of romance. Romance abounds on every hand. We shall alight from the bus now and visit Kenilworth Castle, where men fought and bled and loved in the early days."

* * * *

"Come with me now, my friends," he pursued as if in a daze. His words were present, but it was obvious that his mind had jumped centuries back.

"Ah, yes; love and fight, that is all they did in those edays. On these storied grounds you can contemplate the medieval loves and hates, the ambitions, that pressed man onward for the conquest of the beautiful woman. And if I may say with all deference to the ladies present, the ladiess of those days were more beautiful than are our ladies of today."

We were by now completely absorbed in this man's eloquence on a subject manifestly so close to his heart. That is, all of us were, except one elderly woman who was hard of hearing and who, after trying to follow his romantic recitations by cuffing her hands to her ears, gave it up and became very impatient. It was she who fell so suddenly on his happy reverie.

* * * *

"Oh, that you were seeing this by moonlight," our friend went on. "Close your eyes and follow me through the beauty of it. There is little Amy Robsart who loves the Earl of Leicester——"

"Is the bus right where we left it?" the elderly woman interrupted.

"Why, er, er, yes, madame," replied the guide, so rudely awakened and so obviously annoyed. "The bus is right where we left it. Does my lecture bore you?"

"No, but I don't want to get my feet wet on this grass."

"You will find the bus right where we left it, madame—as I was saying, if we may now return to the spirit that so animated Sir Walter Scott, just close your eyes and picture little Amy Robsart waiting there to plead with Elizabeth——"

At this juncture the woman from California standing beside me became intensely interested in our government back home.

Turning abruptly to me, she said excitedly:

"Yes, yes, very interesting—but tell me, you are from Washington, is it true that all the New Dealers are in love with their secretaries?"

National Gallery

FELIX FRANKFURTER, legal guardian of the New Deal. Keen-minded author, lawyer, talker and adviser, he has recommended numerous lawyers for key positions in the Administration. Distinguished as a teacher, lecturer at Harvard Law School, he has refused appointment to public office. Like Roosevelt, who has long been his close friend, he conceals the true force of his character beneath an unquenchable sense of humor and merry manner. A leader in the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti, he has written many diagnostic treatises on labor, social justice, wages, and court practice. There are few Americans who can talk more effectively.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

ROBERT E. LEE died 12 years before President Roosevelt, to take a comparison, was born. Yet inconceivable as it may seem, the world has had to wait until now for a full and definitive biography of the South's greatest gentleman and general.

Indisputable is the rank of Douglas Southall Freeman's magnum opus, a four-volume biography with the simple title "R. E. Lee," two volumes of which have just been issued (Scribner, $3.75 each). For 20 years Dr. Freeman has been editor of the Richmond News Leader—for 19 he has ransacked libraries, traveled over the South, and talked with hundreds of people who could help him with this biography. Far more than you would think, he had to break new ground in his research.

Then, with patient faithfulness, he put it all down with almost as much completeness as seems humanly possible. True, when he makes the point that George Washington P. Custis did not look with favor upon the suit of his prospective son-in-law because Lee had only his Army pay, Dr. Freeman neglects to mention what a second lieutenant in 1831 received.

But elsewhere there is a plethora of detail—a list of the books Lee withdrew from the West Point library while he was a cadet; the fact that his head, at maturity, measured 23½ inches around; the nice point (verified by a footnote) that when Lee entered the Richmond convention in 1861 to be acclaimed as general of the Virginia forces, he stepped in three paces. Dr. Freeman writes with that exactitude. A single chapter will have as many as 200 footnotes.

Here, then, are presumably the total materials which may be at all relevant to Robert E. Lee. And Lee's was a character which lends itself to this minute, slow-advancing method. There were in him no contradictions and problems to engage the scintillating talents of a Thomas Beer or a Walter Millis; there is no need of epigram or flash-back, crisp phrasing or lightning-stroke insight. "These documents," says Dr. Freeman, "revealed Lee as in all respects a man of normal impulses and of simple soul—there were no 'secrets' and no scandals to be exposed or explained." Dr. Freeman had only to assemble the data and record it clearly. There was no need of brilliant literary finish, because the character and acts of Lee himself give the whole work its dignity and classic beauty.

* * * *

The first extant autograph of Lee is his acceptance of his West Point appointment, gained after an interview wih Secretary of War Calhoun, who was soon to become the "father of nullification"—a doctrine which led direct to Lee's war-torn years. (Oddly, the first Jefferson Davis letter is a like acceptance from Calhoun.) So handsome and well-mannered was Lee at the Point that he gained the nickname of the "Marble Model." But he was also capable—he graduated second man in 1829. Eleven cadets of the time were to become Confederate generals.

As an officer in the Engineers, Lee was to "cut ditches in Georgia mud banks, run the Ohio-Michigan boundary, blast rock from the bed of the Mississippi, repair casemates in New York, serve on Scott's staff in Mexico, drive piles in Baltimore Harbor" to build Fort Carroll, and become commandant of West Point—where he dealt in memorable fairness with the cadets, even one "Curly" Whistler. Then, at the age of 48, a lieutenant colonel, he transferred to the cavalry. More advancement lay there; Lee was feeling frustrated.

Two years later came a personal crisis which almost removed Lee from a further military career, G. W. P. Custis (Washington's adopted son and Lee's father-in-law) had died, bequeathing a legacy most difficult to straighten out. Lee took many months of leave to repair Arlington, the ancestral mansion, and put the farm on its feet. But when John Brown shook his fist at the Government from the Harpers Ferry Armory, it was Lee who plucked him out.

* * * *

Let us look a moment at Lee in 1860. He was 53, had seen 31 years of commissioned service and had been 22 years in advancing from captain to lieutenant colonel. His total pay was $4,060 a year, on which he supported an invalid wife and four unmarried daughters. When, in July, Joseph E. Johnston was made a brigadier general, Dr. Freeman has this to say: "His old classmate's attainment to the rank of general officer made Lee look on himself, more than ever, as a failure, a man whose errors of judgment and slowness in promoting his own interests had left him far down the ladder."

Then the slow-grinding mills of the gods turned a little, and in less than ten months Lee stood before the convention in Richmond and said: "I devote myself to the service of my native State, in whose behalf alone will I ever again draw my sword." He was a major general, on his way to immortality.

* * * *

But we have got only three-quarters of the way through the first volume; the last ten years of Lee's life fill the rest. It is countermarch and battle and a calm, gray-bearded gentleman, firm-seated on a horse named Traveler, for many, many pages now.

More readers than those who profess a delight in military strategy will enjoy Dr. Freeman's account of the War Between the States. For one thing, he preserves the "fog of war"—no fact is mentioned, either in Virginia or the West, until it is known to Lee. Thus, we stand at Lee's side, and the method really is more understandable and full of the illusion of time and place than if we were omniscent. For another, Dr. Freeman has long made a hobby of tactics; but being no professional strategist, he can explain maneuvers amply and clearly to the layman. Dozens of neat little sketch-maps illustrate the campaigns. Few leisure occupations for the winter would be more pleasant, I'm sure, than to follow and work out Lee's strategy carefully, at home with these volumes and by motor trips to the battle sites. They're all within 200 miles of Washington.

* * * *

If you do take up military tactics, you'll want to read Liddell Hart's incisive and intelligent little book, "The Ghost of Napoleon" (Yale U. Press, $2.50). With characteristic pungency, he points out how Napoleon succeeded by the strategy of mobility and surprise and lost by the fossilized strategy of mass attack. As a military tradition, the last named endured through the Great War, and was responsible for the ghastly stalemate.

Here is the acutest view of the philosophy of warfare. With it, you can read rather more into "R. E. Lee" than even Dr. Freeman's herculean labors afforded.

"Never the Time—"

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

MANY poets of genius lose something of their spontaneous lyrical power as they advance in years; their poems may have more cerebration, they may be more weighty in ideas, but they often lose in lyrical expression. All the more remarkable is it, that Browning, after he was 70 years old, wrote one of his finest lyrical poems. It became an immediate favorite on its appearance. Not only that; the first two lines became a proverbial expression, and I think they are often quoted by persons who do not know their origin.

Of the three elements necessary for perfect happiness, one is often missing, says the poet; but even at the worst, there may be a complete union of the three. But Browning did not believe in the worst; he believed in the best. He gives here as evidence of the future life, the miracle of memory, by which at any time we can lead a life of vivid intensity apart from the body; and if we can do that with the past, do not doubt that we can do it with the future.

Never the Time and the Place.

Never the time and the place
And the loved one all together!
This path—how soft to pace!
This May—what magic weather!
Where is the loved one's face?
In a dream that loved one's face meets mine,
But the house is narrow, the place is bleak
Where, outside, rain and wind combine
With a furtive ear, if I strive to speak,
With a hostile eye at my flushing cheek,
With a malice that marks each word, each sign!
O enemy sly and serpentine,
Uncoil thee from the waking man!
Do I hold the Past
Thus firm and fast
Yet doubt if the Future hold I can?
This path so soft to pace shall lead
Through the magic of May to herself indeed!
Or narrow if needs the house must be,
Outside are the storms and strangers: we—
Oh, close, safe, warm sleep I and she,—I and she!

Income Tax Called Illegal in District

Test Based on Inability to Vote Set in Court.

Baltimore, Oct. 23 (AP).—The theory that District of Columbia citizens are exempt from income taxes because they can not vote will be tested in court Thursday.

Norman C. Bowles, disbarred Washington lawyer, who was convicted here of violating income tax laws, will argue his appeal in Richmond before the United States Court of Appeals of the Fourth Circuit.

Bowles, who is at liberty on $5,000 bail pending the appeal, says in a brief he has prepared for the argument, that taxing a citizen of the District of Columbia is "taxation without representation and that he was therefore illegally convicted.

The Emancipation of Women

Western women have made remarkable strides toward complete emancipation . . . but they are now at a standstill. The pendulum has moved in their favor with remarkable swiftness . . . yet if the woman's movement in the world at large is influenced by the back-to-the-home measures in Germany, the pendulum may swing just as far in the opposite direction!

This is the belief of Dr. Takranath Das, who has recently been appointed to the faculty of Catholic University as a lecturer on Far Eastern affairs. In an absorbing interview with Hope Ridings Miller, Dr. Das has some surprising things to say . . . particularly in regard to Mrs. Gandhi, the wizened little 60-year-old woman who is the motivating force behind the woman's movement in her country.

Bankers Here Tuned To Roosevelt Speech

By Elliott Thurston.

CONTRARY to Mr. Roosevelt's intentions, his speech tonight to the American Bankers Association is of paramount importance. For him to confine it to a mere greeting, as he suggested in a press conference last week that it might be, would only intensify the uncertainty and confusion now existing among the nearly 4,000 bankers from all ends of the country who are assembled here in convention.

There is one group of leaders among the bankers who desperately hope that Mr. Roosevelt will make the most of the extraordinary opportunity to encourage the improved psychology which they have been promoting with more zeal than genuine conviction. If he disappoints them, if there is to be more of the tone and temper of the last radio speech, then the adverse, destructive consequences can hardly be overstated. These bankers from every community in the country will go back home persuaded that there is no hope of early recovery. The counsels of pessimism will echo into every last corner of business and industry.

However popular it may have been, politically, to make scapegoats of the bankers, the time long since passed, if it ever existed, when it was more to the Administration's advantage to make war on bankers than to try to enlist them as allies in fighting the battle of recovery.

BESIDES, as shrewd observers have noted, the New Deal can not indefinitely obscure the evils of the present by harping upon the sins of the past. In other words, regardless of who were responsible for the calamities which have befallen, the responsibility for recovery is inescapably upon the shoulders of the Administration. And those perhaps overly, studiedly optimistic bankers, who are preaching cooperation and conciliation—not simply an armed truce—believe that Mr. Roosevelt is too good at politics not to be well aware that he has an embarrassment of political riches and altogether too little recovery.

So they are confident that he will not let them down. The question, then, in their minds, is how far he will go—or how far he feels he can go consistent with political limitations—in promoting the "better feeling" which has been feeding hungrily in the last few weeks on the few crumbs of comfort that have dropped from New Deal tables. Undoubtedly no President, faced with the uncertainties of a Congress which promises to be even more spendthrift and inflationary than the last one, can give positive assurances that will satisfy exacting demands for "certainty."

Mr. Roosevelt's problem, as the more sympathetic bankers see it, is to determine what he can say—in so far as words count—that might reassure business to the point where "frightened money" will begin to flow once more into private enterprise. There is a growing realization that some things can not be said at this time, with any real assurance or sincerity, much as the banking-business world would like to have them said.

THAT is, as long as Congress remains the greatest factor of uncertainty as to spending, inflation, the budget, and as long as Mr. Roosevelt appears to feel that the dangers of losing command in an outright battle outweigh the evils of compromise, his problem is how much he can promise and deliver. The question, largely, is whether under such circumstances sufficient assurances can be given to release private capital from the doubts and fears of the future now paralyzing it.

While one school of bankers apparently holds that a conciliatory spirit, a rapprochement instead of open hostility, a reiteration of orthodox generalities, would be enough, there is clearly a widespread opinion among other leading bankers that until Mr. Roosevelt shows himself ready to battle against Congress for orthodoxy instead of compromising with it, there can be no confidence adequate to insure recovery.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech will be seen in different focus according to different opinions. In any case, whether he wills it or not, this speech will largely determine the mood and psychology of business and banking from this point on.

Mrs. Rogers Asks Bay State Relief

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Republican Congresswoman from Massachusetts, yesterday called on President Roosevelt to urge increased outlays of relief and public works funds in her district, including improvements to Camp Devins.

Another visitor to the White House was Gov. Ibra C. Blackwood, of South Carolina, reported to be under consideration for a Federal job when his term expires in January. Olin D. Johnston, Spartanburg lawyer who will succeed Blackwood, was a caller last week.

An enthusiastic New Dealer, Gov. Blackwood has been in Washington several days, conferring with officials. He is particularly interested in obtaining a $35,000,000 public works allotment for the proposed Santee-Cooper power development.

$500 Is Presented To Essay Winner

President Roosevelt yesterday presented five $100 bills to George A. Delhomme, jr., sturdy young high school graduate of Houston, Tex., as the winner of the sixth annual Gorgas Essay Contest.

Delhomme's essay was declared best of 18,500 papers submitted on the subject of the benefits of controlling mosquitoes. Present for the brief ceremony were Mrs. Delhomme, the youth's mother, and the following:

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, president of the Gorgas Institute; Dr. Franklin H. Martin, director general, American College of Surgeons, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Doherty, of New York, donors of the prizes, and Mrs. Aileen Wrightson, daughter of Gen. William Crawford Gorgas.

Tea Is Given First Lady by Press Women

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Feted Before Leaving for Boston Parley.

Mrs. Brosseau and Mrs. Doak Preside at Entertainment.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Before leaving for Boston to attend the Girl Scouts' convention, Mrs. Roosevelt attended the tea given yesterday in her honor by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington. The tea was held in the lounge of the Press Club, where a fire burned in the huge open fireplace. Vases of chrysanthemums and pom poms decorated the room and the tea table, where Mrs. Grace Lincoln Hall Brosseau, honorary president general of the D. A. R., presided at one end, and Mrs. William N. Doak, widow of the former Secretary of Labor, poured coffee at the other end.

Mrs. Brosseau wore a smart gown of sheer black crepe, trimmed with self-material faggoting and a narrow piping of red, a small black velvet hat with a trimming of ostrich, and a silver fox scarf. Mrs. Doak wore a suit of black woolen with silver fox trimming and a blouse of eggshell satin.

The First Lady was received by Miss Margaret Hart, newly elected president of the club, and Mrs. Hobart Brooks, former president, who escorted her to the lounge for an informal reception. Mrs. Roosevelt wore a dark brown matelasse crepe with a scarf collar of terra-cotta crepe, a corsage of gardenias, a present from the club, and a smart brown hat.

Chats With Hostesses.

She chatted with her hostesses and their guests, and commented on a conversation she had had the preceding event with Miss Fannie Hurst, who dined at the White House that evening. Miss Hurst was discussing the attitude of the women in Germany and other European countries she had visited during the summer.

An amusing incident just before the arrival of Mrs. Roosevelt was the hasty departure from the room of Sir Wilmott Lewis, who had been in deep conversation with a friend when the guests began to arrive. He suddenly looked up, realized he was in the midst of a ladies' gathering and, with an "oh, heavens!" beat a hurried retreat.

Mrs. Roosevelt probably will meet Mrs. Herbert Hoover at the Scout convention in Boston. Mrs. Hoover is there already. The second Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was the first First Lady to be honorary president of the Girl Scouts, and since then each successive chatelaine of the White House—Mrs. Harding, Mrs. Coolidge, Mrs. Hoover, and now Mrs. Roosevelt—has been ex-officio honorary president.

Visiting Mrs. Rickard.

Mrs. Hoover has been visiting Mrs. Edgar Rickard, at her home in New Canaan, Conn., for several days, and on Sunday attended the Girl Scout meeting in Providence, R. I. Mrs. Rickard was a frequent visitor at the White House during the Hoover regime.

From Boston, Mrs. Roosevelt will go to Buffalo to make the first of a series of speeches in behalf of Mrs. Caroline O'Day, candidate for Representative at Large from New York. Her tour will take her to Rochester, Syracuse and Albany, and later she will make a speech in New York for Mrs. O'Day.

The First Lady will spend Saturday and Sunday at Hyde Park, going to New York Monday to attend the meeting of the 1934 Mobilization for Human Needs, returning to the Capital that night.

D. C. Justice's Niece Married In Ireland

Mary O'Donoghue, Michael Healy Are United in Colorful Rites.

One of the most colorful weddings of the early autumn was held September 25 in the Honon Chapel, University College, Cork, Ireland, when Miss Mary O'Donoghue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Courtney O'Donoghue, Caherciveen, County Kerry, was married to Mr. Michael Healy, an official of the Provincial Bank, Kiltimagh, County Mayo. The bride is a niece of Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, of Washington.

The chapel was decorated with autumn flowers and foliage with lighted candles on the altar. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. Walsh, C. C., Blackrock, assisted by the Rev. Dr. James O'Brien, dean of Residence U. C. C., and the Rev. Charles Brennan, P. P., Dromtarriffe.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. She wore satin with a long train and her veil of Carrickmacross lace was held by a halo of orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was of white asters and Killarney roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Nancy O'Donoghue, sister of the bride, and Miss Kitty O'Neill, cousin of the bride, in gowns of ivory satin with coats to match and wreaths of silver leaves in their hair. They carried bouquets of pink asters. Mr. Cormac O'Hanlon, Provincial Bank, Cork, was best man.

After the ceremony the parents of the bride entertained at a wedding breakfast and reception, after which the couple left on a wedding trip to the South of England. The bride wore an ensemble of navy blue. On their return they will be at home at St. Aidens, Kiltimagh, County Mayo.

Mr. Healy is the son of Mrs. and the late J. J. Healy, solicitor of Skibbereen, County Cork. He is a graduate of the University of Cork. The bride was born in Caherciveen, where she has lived nearly all her life. She was educated in Irish convent schools and later in Belgium, where she obtained her Bachelor of Arts degree.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

It is a never-ceasing wonder to me about the number of people (on the street) you bump into, unless the brakes are super something or other or else the people are all "quick like a mouse." Why doesn't someone, somewhere, somehow invent a gadget that would lift the car way up whenever the proximity of another vehicle was dangerous? Perhaps too many of us are up in the air most of the time, as it is.

Recently in the Mayflower lounge I caught a fleeting glimpse of Mrs. E. Webb, Betty Cremen and Barbara Baker listening to Pendleton Hogan recounting some of his interesting tales. It was a very artistically arranged group. Mrs. Webb, who is very blonde, was seated at one end of the bench. Barbara, who also is blonde, but a bit tanned, was next and at the other end was Betty, petite and brown-eyed.

Kay Pearson and Peggy Mac, those constant companions, are deserting the paved streets and tall buildings today for the mountains, to spend a few hours on rustic highways and byways, where there is no tooting or honking, unless some geese happen to wander that way.

Czechs Mark Independence This Sunday

Charge d'Affaires Issues Invitations to Legation Reception.

The Charge d'Affaires of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Josef Nemecek, has issued invitations to a reception Sunday from 5 to 7 p. m., at the legation in celebration of Czechoslovakia's independence day.

The Minister and Mme. Veverka and their daughter, Miss Nella Veverka, are in Prague, where the latter two are planning to spend most of the winter. Miss Veverka, who made her debut in Washington last winter, will be presented to society in Prague this season and will return to this country after the New Year.

The Minister had planned to come to this country early next month, but rumors indicate that in the new government plans of President Masaryk, Mr. Veverka will become Foreign Minister, replacing Eduard Benes, who will become vice president.

The constitution of Czechoslovakia has not hitherto provided for the office of a vice president.

Women of Orient Hold Key to Future of World Feminist Movement, Dr. Das Says

Catholic U. Lecturer Predicts Major Role in the New India

Gandhi's Wife Pictured as a Force as Strong as Mahatma Himself and Power Behind Progress of Sex in Her Country.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE future of the women's movement in the world depends more on the women of the Orient than on the women of the Occident, in the belief of Dr. Takranath Das, noted journalist, who recently has been added to the faculty of Catholic University as a lecturer on Far Eastern affairs.

"Western women have made remarkable strides toward complete emancipation in the last few years, but they are now at a standstill," he said. "The pendulum has moved in their favor with remarkable swiftness, but if the woman's movement in the world at large is influenced by the back-to-the-home measure in Germany, the pendulum may swing back one way as far as it has gone the other."

Dr. Das was born in Bengal, India, and educated in this country and in Germany. He is now a citizen of the United States. There is nothing of the turbaned Hindu in his appearance, but his bronze complexion, silver hair and black eyes make him distinctive.

Having observed the woman's movement in many countries and having studied it closely in India, Dr. Das is well prepared to discuss the position of women in the country of his birth. And he is convinced women will have a great role in solving the problem of India's relationship with Great Britain and in promulgating the real progress of the Far East.

Gandhi Recognizes Women's Rights.

"Anyone who considers the plight of India today must take into consideration the place women have had in India's past and the position they are now making for themselves," he said. "The salvation of India depends on the women, and nobody is more aware of that than Mahatma Gandhi—the man who has more disciples than any Indian in the world. The woman's movement, of course, began more than a hundred years ago with the work of Rajah Rau Mohon Roy, the founder of the Hindu parallel of the Unitarian movement. But Gandhi is the first native Indian in many years to give women the opportunity to express themselves. He has recognized they deserve rights as individuals."

Dr. Das mentioned also that Gandhi's wife had done much—probably more than her husband—to further the woman's movement.

"Mrs. Gandhi, who goes by the name of 'Kasturbai,' is as strong a force in Gandhi's work as Gandhi himself," he said. "That little 60-year-old woman is also the motivating force behind the progress of women in her country. A conscientious adherent to Gandhi's principles of nonviolence and voluntary poverty, she has carried on her husband's work successfully the numerous times he has been in prison.

"Furthermore, she has been repeatedly arrested and imprisoned on the charge of 'civil disobedience'—which, in her case, has usually been the boycott of British goods and the picketing of opium and liquor shops—and she has served many sentences in prison, only to take up her work where she left off as soon as she was released.

"Her activity has been the source of inspiration to many Indian women and is largely responsible for the fact Gandhi's recognition of women has been such a strong force in promoting the rise of women in India."

Miss Lester Backs Opinion.

This opinion was borne out by Miss Muriel Lester, of London, who was recently in Washington. A close friend of Gandhi and the author of two books about him, Miss Lester was hostess to the Indian leader and his wife when they went to London, and has just returned from visiting them in India.

"Kasturbai Gandhi is more practical, is more of a realist than her husband," Miss Lester said, "even though the world at large has heard little about her. A woman of tremendous courage and possessing a dynamic personality, she has been an important factor in his work and in attaining recognition for the women in her country."

But back to Dr. Das.

Women in India, he pointed out, spurred on by example of the remarkable wife of Gandhi, are now seeking broader fields and greater opportunities.

"The magnitude of the awakening of Indian women can be realized when we take into consideration that only a short time ago Indian women always lived in pardha (seclusion), and did not take part in public affairs. But during the recent political upheaval in India tens of thousands of women took leadership in the movement for the emancipation of India and thus suffered imprisonment.

"These women inspired millions of young men then and are continuing to do so. This activity may be a source of inspiration to women of the Western world who are seemingly loosening the reins on their rights. The support of the Eastern women to the women's movement may constitute the case of the disciple helping the teacher who is losing heart."

Taj Mahal Shows Esteem.

Political and social revolutions were responsible for the fact Indian women lost the high position they once held, he explained. And he mentioned that outstanding rulers and even some noteworthy fighters in the history of India were women.

"Evidence of the high esteem in which Indian women were once held is shown in the Taj Mahal, the glory of Agra, which was built as a mausoleum for Mumtaz Mahal, the wife of Shah Jahan," Dr. Das said. "At one time, in fact, Indian women were copartners with men in every field of human endeavor. But because of foreign invasions, resulting in reaction, they retrograded. Now, once more, they have started up."

He pointed out that progress in education in India has been largely responsible for the recent awakening of women, and called attention to the fact people of the United States had done much in this field.

"But the greatest thing friends of India in America can do at present is to give Indian girls the opportunity to study here," he declared. "An Indian woman trained in medicine, for instance, in this country, returns to her native land and trains, in turn, hundreds of native women. She will know, better than any missionary, how to adapt Western ideas to Eastern civilization, and she will do much toward helping the woman's cause in India."

Women in India, he further explained, are eagerly devouring every opportunity to broaden their sphere and to participate in public life Furthermore, they are contending for their rights just as women did in this country 25 years ago before they were accorded the privileges they now enjoy.

Reaction Seen Temporary.

Dr. Das does not believe women in the United States will ever relinquish these privileges. There is a reaction to women's rights at the present, he said, but as yet there is no outstanding evidence American women are being forced, as a whole, to go back into the home.

"Women in Europe—particularly in Germany and in Italy—are victims of the present economic system," he said. "In some cases, the same thing is true in this country. On the one hand, numbers of American women are relinquishing their jobs to unemployed men and are going back into the home because domestic labor is so expensive.

"But on the other hand, there are women in America who now hold higher political positions than ever before. The latter seems to indicate women of the United States will not be deprived of their rights and their privileges."

Dr. Das' optimistic outlook on the position of women in this country is shared by his American-born wife who, having been a founder-member of the National Woman's Party, is keenly interested in the woman's movement.

Stock Crash Of 1929 Seen Vain Lesson

AMERICANS are born gamblers. Ten years of listening to the dreams and difficulties of a savings bank's depositors has convinced Miss Mabel F. Thompson that the lessons dearly bought in the 1929 debacle would be forgotten the minute stocks started skyrocketing.

As director of the service department of the New York Union Dime Savings Bank, Miss Thompson deals mostly with small and medium income groups. Their attitude toward savings, investments and speculations has changed but little in the ten years she has been contacting them, Miss Thompson said yesterday. She is attending the twelfth annual convention of the Association of Bank Women at the Mayflower Hotel.

"The most conservative in money matters are young people who are planning to be married or who have just been married," the service director explained. "They are the ones who are most interested in budgets and in absolutely safe investments."

Wives Become Partners.

Young men are making their wives active partners in financial affairs, Miss Thompson has observed.

"Young couples of today usually talk the money situation over carefully before the marriage ceremony," Miss Thompson said. "They budget their income to include current living expenses and a savings account, even though the savings may be pitiably small. And the wives, with their allowance, are able to run their homes on a sounder economic basis than when they depended on hand-outs from their husbands at irregular intervals."

It is Miss Thompson's job to help the depositors at her bank budget their incomes. She reports that men and housewives are becoming more budget-minded every day; business women long ago learned the advantages of apportioning their money.

When both husband and wife are wage-earners, the couple often takes all living expenses out of the man's money and puts the wife's earnings in a savings account.

Living Scale Easily Adjusted.

"Then when the woman wants to stop working, it is easier for the family to adjust its scale of living," Miss Thompson said.

Young married couples with a cultural background invariably use a small proportion of their income for rent, she declared. They don't mind modest living quarters if they can buy books, attend the opera and the theater and put money in the savings bank, Miss Thompson has learned.

The aptitude for saving is sexless, according to the service director.

"There are cautious men and cautious women, spendthrift men and spendthrift women," she said. "But it is true that women are usually a little more interested than men in saving money for their children's education. And women come into control of more money every year. They should learn how to take care of it. Our economic security depends upon them as much as upon the men."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a girl 19 years old and I would like for you to help me solve my puzzle.

Why is it after I go with a young man about a month he acts as though he doesn't want to see me any more? There are some facts bearing on the case which seem to point out that I ask them to go with me too much. However, I do not get them to spend any money, because I do not think it fair to "chisel," as many girls do. The places I take them are usually to club affairs which my club gives often.

• • • •

I have been told that I'm good-looking, with nice figure, pretty teeth, hair and hands. I have been complimented on my dancing, singing and piano playing. I also like golf and tennis. Fair at both. In other words, I try to be an all-round girl.

However, I don't like to talk much and would rather listen to the young men.

• • • •

Not long ago I met a young man a good deal older than I, who seemed interested in me. I took him to three club affairs. The last event ended early and after he drove me home he said he had another engagement and left me early in the evening. That rather hurt my feelings, so I haven't asked him anywhere since.

Now, Miss Haworth, I am not the type who drinks, smokes or pets. I do, however, let a boy kiss me goodnight if I know him well and like him enough.

• • • •

Now, the other thing which puzzles me is that men rarely ask to take me places, and I would never dream of asking them to take me to a show or to a dance which would cost money. However, many girls I know do that very thing.

Most girls tell me young men in Washington are just cheapskates and out for all they can get. Is this true?

• • • •

Do you think I should encourage this young man I spoke of, by asking him to another club affair? I really do like him, but have a lot of pride and would feel badly if he advanced that "other engagement" excuse again. What would you do?

NINA.

DEAR NINA: Obviously, the reason your young men don't show up after a month or so is because they're no longer interested. Your recurrent loss of beaux is probably due to lack of finesse in handling them.

Only with a completely devoted suitor, or with a man friend of long standing, is it sound practice for a girl who values his opinion to take the initiative in making "dates."

Then, there's a possibility these boys, confronted by a girl who unwarrantedly asks them to be her escort, assume she is the type whose whole standard of conduct is equally unconventional.

• • • •

They may accept the first few invitations out of curiosity, just to learn what kind of girl she really is.

As to why these men rarely take you places, few men spend money on a girl, by taking her dancing and to the theater, unless they really care about her, and I'm afraid you're wasting a lot of time, heartache and speculation on men who don't care enough about you to make them worth bothering with.

• • • •

I don't think you should ask this particular young man to another club affair. In fact, I strongly recommend you discontinue the practice of asking any young man to be your escort. Let your girl friends, or their beaux, provide you with a beau when occasion demands. And remember, if a girl is to keep a man's interest, once she has caught it, she must possess some elusiveness, mental as well as actual. Don't be so patently eager for his company.

M. H.

Blonde Hair Requires Lot Of Attention

By Frances Mangum.

THIS BUSINESS of being a blonde isn't half as simple as it sounds. Constant effort is required to keep fair hair golden, skin clear and creamy, and eyelashes and brows becomingly dark.

And then there is the trying problem of make-up. Glaring rouges, startling eyeshadows and black mascara make her look cheap and hard. Powder that is too pink, or too dark, or too light forces her skin into an unflattering contrast with her hair. Her problem is to find a bright lipstick that suits a delicately-tinted rouge and powder that is a match for her skin tone.

There are blondes who are all peaches and cream. They can wear powders verging on a light pink. But there are others whose skin is more like ivory. Their powder must be devoid of any pink caste and far removed from a tan. There are still blondes whose skin is naturally olive. The question is whether, if they use a brunette powder, they should follow this with brunette rouges.

There is only one way to find an answer for each individual. That is through experimentation with make-up under an electric lamp and in the bright sunshine. The mirror is a frank adviser.

Blondes, in general, should remember:

1. Don't use black eye make-up. Use brown instead. Stick to blue, green and gray shadows and use these sparingly

2. Don't use a harsh soap on your hair. Castile soap is an excellent shampoo, especially when reduced to jelly form by semidissolving over a slow fire.

3. Don't use quick or harsh bleaches that cause the hair to become brittle and dry.

4. Don't neglect your rinses. These are most important for golden hair. The lemon rinse is a general favorite, as it cuts the soap and brightens the hair at the same time.

5. Don't detract from your natural fairness by heavy brunette colors. If your eyes are blue, gray, violet or green, and your hair golden, such colors as blue, violet, gold, light green, blue green, orchid, beige, yellow and gray should be fine.

Picture Dresses Return But With Modern Touch

Paris Houses' Big Contribution to Fall Evening Fashions Show Evidence of Being Well Received in United States.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 (AP).—The pendulum has swung back to the picture dresses, graceful, charming and delightfully feminine.

Yes, just such gowns as Gainsborough, Reynolds and Watteau painted in portraits of ladies of their day, but styled with a definite modern interpretation.

These portrait robes de style, as Paris calls them, are the big contribution to fall evening fashions made by the great houses of design in Paris, and they show evidence of being well received at American crossroads.

Debutantes here are making their bows in these romantic gowns, and matrons are rediscovering how full skirts and carefully-fitted bodices are kind to figures that are either too ample or too thin.

These picturesque gowns are being made up in glistening satins, stiff velvets, billowing taffetas, crisp nets, sometimes embroidered with sequins, tulles and moires. It is noted that the new fabrics have backbone, which makes them easily adapted to this fashion.

The skirts are full and wide. One Paris house is reported to have developed a model with a hemline circumference of 10 yards, but that, judging from the new gowns in the Chicago shops, is very extreme.

Some of the new picture dresses demurely have shoulders and upper arms covered. Others have backs bared in extreme V's and squares Still others have the neckline dropped off the shoulder. An important new back treatment is a decolletage that juts out wing-like.

Complaining Women Flayed By Mrs. Law

Most Contemptible Is One Who Scolds Over Cut Income, She Says.

THE MOST contemptible woman in the world is the one who complains when her husband's income is cut, and is resentful when she has to give up the luxuries to which she has become accustomed.

In these words did Mrs. Francis Marion Law, of Houston, Tex., whose husband is president of the American Bankers Association, yesterday express her opinion of the woman who failed to stand by her husband during the depression.

"There was such important work for a woman to do in those days," she said at the Willard Hotel, where she is staying with her husband during the convention.

"And yet the job was so easy to do. All that was necessary for her to do was to have faith in her husband, to make him comfortable at home, and to keep him cheerful."

Has Soft Southern Accent.

Mrs. Law has the soft Southern accent one would expect from a woman who was born and reared in Texas. Her manner is gentle in accordance with the Southern tradition, but she has strong convictions which she expresses clearly and forcibaly.

"I think that depression and crisis was the best thing that ever happened to most of us," she continued, "for the first time in our lives we realized that things didn't make happiness. We learned to find happiness within ourselves.

"I made it a rule in those days never to worry. In fact I never did. I just believed in Mr. Law, in his integrity and his ability to meet any emergency, and my faith in him was justified. I think that faith can be cultivated just as any other quality can, and I know it is this faith that helps a person through the little difficulties, as well as the big ones in life."

Speaks Lightly of Economics.

Mrs. Law spoke lightly of the economies she has had to practice as if they were of no importance.

"Of course, we don't have as much money as we used to have," she said, "but I think we are really happier. I do the same things I always did, but on a simpler scale. And if I have to wear last year's dress other people are wearing their last year's dresses too, and it doesn't matter.

When I entertain today I entertain more simply and I find it much more fun. The parties are smaller and more intimate, and people get to know each other better than they used to at large formal gatherings.

"You know, I hope we all stay poor for a whole. I think we will have a better sense of values when this is over."

School Kitchen Helps Morale At Institution

Riverdale Parent-Teachers Rewarded for Work by Happy Pupils.

A GROUP of happy, healthy children, better school work, and the disappearance of disciplinary problems—these things the parent-teachers of the Riverdale Elementary School, at Riverdale, Md., say are enough to reward them for the long hours of work they have put into running the school kitchen they established a year ago.

Mrs. Mary E. Riedel has given her services in the kitchen every day since it was established, and she is assisted by other mothers in the community. The kitchen is supported by contributions and by the small income from the lunches. No charity has ever aided it.

When the kitchen was opened last October a charge of three cents was made for a luncheon tray. Children, whose fathers were unemployed, received free lunches.

This year conditions are a little better in the community, and the retail price of food is a little higher. So each dish is sold for five cents. Thus, a child can buy a well-balanced lunch for 12 cents.

Every day last winter 85 children received free lunches at the school lunch room. Those children whose parents are still unemployed are receiving free lunches this winter.

The children are not required to buy their lunches at school, and many of them bring their lunches from home and buy milk or a dessert to round out the meal.

A small tea given by the mothers this autumn brought in some money to help finance the lunchroom, and a canned-goods shower brought in 85 cans of fruit and vegetables which started the work off this year.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A MILITARY influence gives a cavalierish dash to the flannel robes featured in a local store. There are robes and robes—but three attractive features distinguish these from others at the same price.

In the first place a neckline that fastens close under the throat may also be open with the lapels lined in bright colors turned back, after the style of some cadet cloaks, the wide lapel, when worn up, fastens with three metal buttons as large as 50-cent pieces.

Wide, crunchable belt-sashes taper off into fringed edges. Patch pockets are roomy enough for a goodly percentage of one's belongings and the flannel material is all-wool and warm and comfortable for winter evenings.

Black and brown robes are both trimmed in turquoise. They sell for $5.95.

Olive Oil Plus Sunshine.

Not for one year, but for hundreds, fastidious women have washed their hair in olive oil, knowing that it was good for dry and peeling scalps and coarse, dry hair. Acting on this principle, the chemist for a large cosmetic concern took as his base pure imported Castile olive oil, annexed soapy substances to this, and added a sunshine element which tends to correct scalp conditions.

Think how seldom the actual sunlight penetrates one's forestlike head of hair. And think how essential sunlight is for health. Thus, the chemist considering these two matters, the benefit of olive oil and sunshine to the scalp and hair, created his shampoo combining both.

Only a small quantity of it is necessary to give the head a thorough bath, but that small quantity not only removes the dirt, but is beneficial to the scalp.

After it has been used the hair will seem far more manageable than after the majority of shampoos which leave it wispy and difficult to arrange.

Collapsible Laundry Racks.

It's no fun to play hide and seek with the new laundry racks, for they are so small, collapsible and compact that they are hidden easily in any odd nook and corner.

They are about 22 by 18 inches, and then they open out 10 inches in order to accommodate the whole family wash. The most amazing thing about them is their actual weight, in comparison with their weight ability. They weigh a scant two pounds—and they will easily hold 25 pounds.

The racks are wire frames with several bars placed counterwise over which to hang the clothes. They are cadmium-plated, rustproof and stainless.

When winter comes along and it's virtually impossible to hang one's light laundry outside, it's a simple and convenient matter to put up one of these indoor racks for lingerie, hosiery, baby's clothes, or whatever needs to be dried.

Cream Does Work of Four.

A cream that does four things and does them well is not to be lightly laughed aside. Hundreds of thousands of young women do not actually need to use the array of bottles and jars strewn across their dressing table or the bathroom shelves. Just one all-purpose cream would save them time, and do as much for their skins, as four creams each with a separate purpose.

This one cleanses. In a more than superficial manner it gathers dust and dirt particles and scoops them right out of the pores and wrinkles. In the second place, it nourishes. It gives the skin that solid comfort that most cleansers do not. It works toward supplying any oils lacking in the skin, and in keeping the skin firm and young looking. Thirdly it bleaches. Not a great deal all at once. But use it over and over again and you'll notice that your skin seems much fairer.

In the fourth place, it makes an ideal powder foundation and keeps the powder on for hours.

Vest Pocket Manicure Set.

It's seldom one sees a manicure set that holds as much as this one and yet folds up into such a small package.

When it's opened out on the counter you see an emery board, nail file, orange stick, tweezers, nail clipper, cuticle scissors, and blackhead remover. But fold it up and you have practically a vest pocket parcel.

It costs very little and comes in green, red, black and brown leatherette cases.

Pottery Ash Trays.

The trays are green, rose, yellow and ivory, and the rosebuds are in contrasting colors. They are only 25 cents.

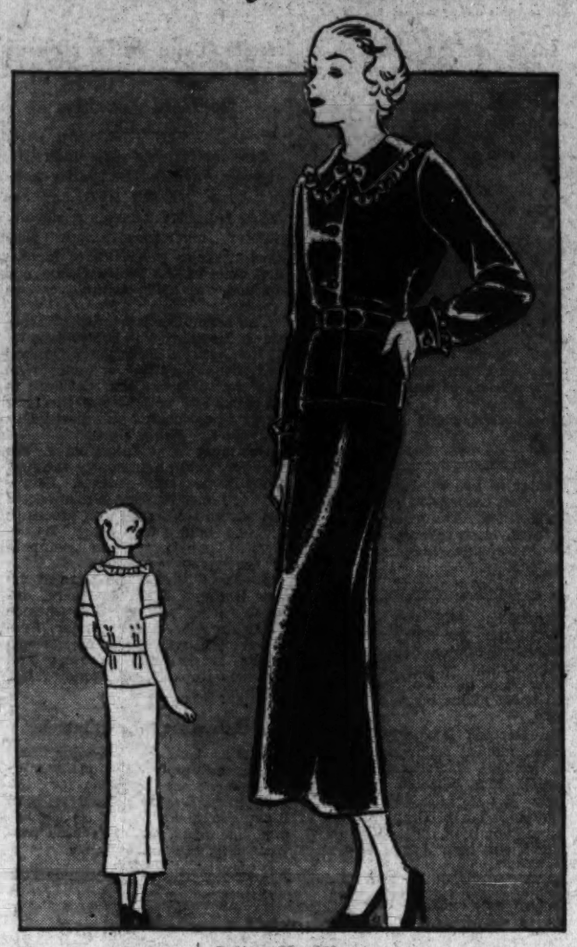
Dark Velveteen Dress Has Many Varied Uses



Pattern No. 810.

THIS DRESS soon becomes indispensable. It gets worn to football games (because it's warm), to afternoon gatherings (because it's casually dressy), on shopping trips or to work (because it's so easy to slip into and stays fresh-looking). It has a belted overblouse with a little round collar, and a simple, straight skirt.

If this dress is made of dark velveteen, buttons of pearl or brilliants make it "dressy." But this year velveteens are also available in monotone checks and gay plaids. A skirt of solid color, a blouse of plaid—or both of one-tone plaid—make the dress a gay sports outfit.

Cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 18 (36) requires 4⅝ yards of 35-inch fabric.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Hemorrhoids or Piles.

DISEASES of the rectum are often overlooked, since this particular part of the body is all too frequently neglected because of a false sense of modesty.

The condition known as hemorrhoids, commonly called piles, is brought on by an enlargement of one or more of the hemorrhoidal veins which lie just beneath the mucous lining of the rectum. The terms itching piles, bleeding piles and weeping piles generally fail to describe the situation accurately. Bleeding from the rectum may arise from many causes other than hemorrhoids. The same may be said of itching and of a slight discharge of mucus.

Hemorrhoids may be compared to the varicose veins seen under the skin of the leg. Veins enlarge and become tortuous because their walls are weakened. The pressure of blood within the veins then causes stretching and deformity. In a hemorrhoidal vein the erect posture of the body and the sluggish return flow of blood may bring about enlargement and finally a clotting of the blood within a vein. Constipation causing undue pressure on the walls of the rectum is often a causative factor. Sometimes the enlarged veins become stretched and may protrude outside the rectum, seriously interfering with normal bowel movements. Pain, irritation and slight bleeding on pressure are characteristic symptoms.

Treatment depends on the stage of the hemorrhoids at the time of examination. In certain cases these enlarged veins may be obliterated by the injection of an irritating chemical that causes them to shrink. Among the substances used is a 5 to 20 per cent solution of carbolic acid in a glycerin-water mixture.

Not all cases are adapted to this type of treatment. If the injection method is regarded as suitable the enlarged veins so treated will generally absorb in from one to three weeks. The injection method usually causes little if any pain and in the hands of skillful physicians has been attended with considerable success. An advantage of this method is that hospitalization is either entirely avoided or shortened.

In some cases surgical removal is necessary. A local anesthetic is frequently all that is needed, although general anesthesia may be required. Rectal surgery is one of the most particular and exacting branches of general surgery and an experienced operator is required in order to insure a complete and thorough removal of the diseased veins. Under competent management, however, there is no need to fear the procedure. The improvement in general health that follows the removal of hemorrhoidal enlargements is most noticeable.

Grandmothers Back Modern Infants' Diet

Delegates to Conference on Dietetics Explain Radical Changes.

Young mothers, with a nutrician book under one arm and a child psychology text under the other, are off to the health clinics for more information.

Expert Pleased.

Miss Lillian B. Storms, chairman of home economics in business, a branch of the National Dietetics Association and research director of the Gerber products, says:

"Six years ago, grandmothers were a real problem to both mothers and child dietitians. Many of them raised a young furor when we began advocating the addition of semisolid foods to the diets of infants under the 1-year period.

Some baby specialists now include semisolid foods as early as 2½ months, Miss Storms said.

Others hold off until the child is 5 months of age. Two years ago, no one thought of including even orange juice on the diet until after five months.

"Now the well fed young man or woman of five months," explained Miss Storms, "gets, besides his milk, either orange or tomato juice, cod liver oil, strained cereal and several varieties of strained vegetable."

As research director of Gerbers, Miss Storms gives food lectures to mothers, contacts child health nurses and home economics specialists, furnishing them information compiled in the food company's laboratories.

She is now engrossed in a Detroit Hospital experiment in which more than 80 babies are being fed a vegetable and meat soup in an effort to produce better blood.

Experiment Succeeds.

With four preschool youngsters in her charge, ranging in age from 3½ to 4½ years, Dr. Nye is concerned with two levels of protein diet.

"The youngsters have been fed exactly the same diet for three months and like it," laughed the very pretty Michigan college dean. "They are completely under our care day and night. They have lots of outdoor air, regularity of meals and sleep.

"Our only change in the diet was to add a higher protein level during the last month and a half of the experiment, this addition being of higher protein level than is contained in the ordinary home diet. Although we haven't checked all our data yet, the children's general health improved greatly in the three months we've had them."

The Five as a Top Card.

It is by no means uncommon for a trick to be won by a five-spot when the five is a long card, but it is distinctly so for a five to win when the deuce, trey and four are played to the same trick, and even more so for it to be actually promoted to winning rank. Usually when the five captures the deuce, trey and four, it is because the leader, under the impression that his partner was void, led his lowest card to give him a ruff and because the partner, instead of a void, held a very low singleton. In such cases the victory of the five-spot, far from resulting from the operation of the promotion principle, comes about in spite of it, for there may have been no promotion whatever. The lowly five wins, not because the general, colonel, major, captain, &c., have all been killed off, but simply because they did not engage in the skirmish. In today's hand, however, the five won because it actually was promoted to winning rank. All higher cards except the six were killed in the first two rounds, and the six, being in the same hand as the five, was an equal.

North, Dealer.

The bidding: (Figure after bid refers to numbered explanatory paragraph.)

North	East	South	West
2◇(1)	Pass	2NT	Pass
3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Although North does not like to bid two with his meager distribution, he decides to do so because of his wealth of honor strength. North realizes that a three-notrump contract can not be severely penalized even if South has an absolute blank, and that any smattering of picture cards will make the game a laydown.

Against the three-notrump contract West made the neutral opening of a small diamond. North won the trick in Dummy and led a low spade in an effort to set up tricks in that suit. East perforce won the trick with his Jack and decided that a heart shift would be the safest. He chose to lead the nine-spot so that the Declarer would not be able to force out a high honor from the West hand by playing an intermediate card and thus to create an entry to his own hand if he held the Jack. South covered the nine with the Ten, West played the Jack, and the Dummy won the trick with the King.

Another low spade was led from Dummy, East winning this time with the Queen; and rather than blindly tackle another suit, East continued with the hearts. This time the seven was led, South covered with the eight, West played the Queen, and Dummy's Ace won the trick. The Declarer now led the Ace of clubs from Dummy and followed with another club, and East, not knowing that the Declarer held both the Queen and Jack, decided to duck to give the Declarer a possible guess. South's Jack held the trick, and he now led his good five of hearts, West playing the two, the Dummy the three and East the four. The six of hearts was led and Dummy's last spade discarded, and South now claimed the balance of the tricks—making, strangely enough, four-odd, despite the many high cards held by East.

This hand is shown as a curiosity and not because it teaches any lesson. East's defense turned out badly from start to finish, although none of the plays East made could be severely criticized. As a matter of fact, the way the cards were distributed, there was no way that East and West could have defeated three-odd.

Tomorrow's Hand.

Both sides vulnerable.

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Mustaches Held Good Protection From Infection

Mustaches can act as protectors against small razor scratches or whatever risk there may be in kissing.

This consolation for men who have clung to their mustaches comes from no less a source than the American College of Surgeons, which, at a recent meeting in Boston, discussed the advisability of growing mustaches to prevent infections.

The upper lip, nose and adjacent parts of the face are among the most vulnerable parts of the human anatomy, it was asserted in a paper on "Infections of the Upper Lip and Face," by Dr. Frederick A. Collier, professor of surgery at the University of Michigan.

Infection of these tissues is particularly dangerous because of the ease with which the infection can spread, Dr. Collier said.

Three Simple Rules Govern Meringue Pie

Recipe for Cheese Souffle Always Successful if Prepared Carefully.

By Dorothea Duncan.

ANNOUNCE lemon meringue pie for dinner and not one member of the faimly will be found missing. A flaky crust, firm, golden filling and piles of snowy meringue will tempt even those with jaded appetites to the table.

There are three arts then in mastering a perfect meringue pie and the meringue is equally as important as the crust or the filling. Bedecking your pie with a meringue that is going to be tough, watery or shrunken is like trimming a beautiful bonnet with a bedraggled plume.

Many of our readers have asked how to accomplish this miracle of a perfect meringue, so here are three simple rules: Successful meringues are fluffy, tender and fine textured. Two egg whites will cover a nine-inch pie. Allow four tablespoons of sugar to each two eggs. Beat egg whites until foamy and add sugar, two tablespoons at a time, and beat after each addition. After all the sugar is added, continue beating until the mixture will stand in peaks. Pile lightly on filled pie and bake in a moderate oven (350° F.) 15 minutes.

A recipe for cheese souffle has been requested, and here is one that, if prepared carefully, will never fail.

Cheese Souffle.

3 tablespoons tapioca (variety that needs no soaking)
1 cup milk (scalded)
1 cup grated cheese
3 egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten with one teaspoon salt

Add tapioca to milk, and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add cheese and stir until melted. Cool. Add egg yolks and mix well. Fold in egg whites. Bake in a greased baking dish, placed in a pan of hot water, in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes, or thirty minutes in individual cups. Souffle is done when it shrinks a trifle and is brown.

It was requested that the recipe for frosting for chocolate marshmallow loaf be repeated. Here it is:

Chocolate Frosting.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate, cut in small pieces
1 tablespoon hot water
1 egg, well beaten
½ cup confectioner's sugar
¼ cup butter

Melt chocolate in double boiler, add hot water, and blend. Add egg and sugar. Remove from fire, but allow mixture to stand over hot water, stirring constantly until it is slightly thickened, about 3 minutes. Cool quickly to lukewarm. Add butter, which has been washed in cold water to remove salt, 2 tablespoons at a time, stirring and blending after each addition.

This frosting may be made ahead of time and kept in the refrigerator until needed, as it can then be spread on cake layers that are slightly warm. This will soften the filling so that it will spread easily.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

IF OCTOBER 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. to 12 noon, from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 12 noon to 2 p. m. and from 5 to 7 p. m.

On this October 24 there may arise conditions which might cause a feeling of discouragement. Our fears are seldom realized. Numerous times we allow our imaginations such freedom of range in the Land of Foreboding that they build up mirages of mountains of trouble, which Time dissolves eventually into nothingness. If you will remember this, it will be an easy matter for you to cast any feeling of depression aside, and go through the day grateful for the good things that may take place.

There are things likely to happen on this date which later on will turn out to be for the best, both from a financial as well as a personal viewpoint. Good news will possibly reach your ears before the day is over. Guard your temper carefully, as it might get you into trouble during a discussion over a trivial matter.

Avoid creating ill feeling or an enemy by being too abrupt should a stranger come into close contact with you. A man or woman of foreign lineage may be indirectly responsible for your making or receiving some money very shortly. Social activities should be participated in, for they may be productive of a great deal of good either in a companionable or business way. Married and engaged couples, or those contemplating matrimony, will exercise excellent discretion if they will avoid any display of temperamentality on this date.

If a woman and October 24 is your natal day, you will do well to curb any tendency to emulate the butterfly, flittering hither and thither, seeking only the high and avoiding the low and rough spots in life. If you will cheerfully share your part of the responsibilities of your household or office, life will be far less complicated. You possess a remarkable capacity for making friends, so should enjoy a great deal of popularity, providing you do not neglect or expect too much from them. The stage, lecture platform, or demonstration work are fields offering you great possibilities for success. Your married life will be very happy, if you are not too exacting or demanding.

If a man and October 24 is your birthday, if you will remember "a good sport" and "hail fellow well met" is only regarded as such so long as his money holds out, you prove yourself wise, and make a success out of your life. Astronomy, law, journalism and politics offer men born on this date opportunities.

Savant Has Theory On the Alphabet

The Phoenicians, long credited with the invention of the alphabet, probably borrowed their writings from a system in use among the Israelites, Sir. Charles Marston, the British archaeologist, believes.

Among the recent archaeological evidence which throws new light on the origin of the alphabet is the discovery last summer of a new script among the ruins of an Egyptian temple in the Near East, Sir Charles said in a recent interview.

The new writing was found on a water jar at Tell Duweir, believed to be the Biblical city of Lachish, near Jerusalem.

Many Colds Laid To Overdressing

The American custom of donning heavy underwear and turning on the heat during the first cool days of autumn often causes colds and more serious diseases, according to Dr. J. Moore Campbell, chief of the Health Conservation Bureau of the Pennsylvania Health Department.

Dr. Campbell advocates a more Spartan attitude toward cold weather, reports the Capital News.

"Many diseases could be prevented if people changed their attitude of antagonism to cold weather to one of reasonable welcome," Dr. Campbell said.

Chief Angered, Won't Give U.S. Floyd Comrade

East Liverpool, Ohio, Oct. 23 (AP). Efforts of Federal and Missouri officers to gain custody of Adam Richetti, ally of Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, who was slain yesterday, reached a deadlock late today when Police Chief J. H. Fultz of nearby Wellsville, Ohio, refused to surrender the desperado.

With Richetti in the Wellsville Jail, the body of Floyd, former Ozark outlaw, was being prepared here for back-tracking a cold trail to Oklahoma tomorrow.

Missouri and Federal officers want to return Richetti to Kansas City to answer accusations he participated in the Union Station massacre there in June, 1933.

Won't Talk Further.

"I don't intend to talk further with them," the Wellsville police chief said tonight, referring to the Federal and Missouri officers who earlier had engaged in conferences with him and other local authorities.

A lack of harmony between Fultz and Federal officers has been evident for several days. Fultz maintained that the Federal officers had not produced sufficient evidence to show they were entitled to the prisoner.

In Kansas City, however, it was reported a secret indictment against Richetti had been returned by the Federal grand jury, charging Richetti and Floyd with transporting a stolen motor car.

Fultz has indicated he does not want to release Richetti for anything less than a murder indictment.

Fultz also quarreled with an assistant United States Attorney from Cleveland, who was ordered to Wellsville in the Government's interest. Originally Fultz had had differences with Melvin C. Purvis, head of the Department of Justice Bureau at Chicago, who led the squad which slew Floyd.

Chief Explains.

Fultz insisted he would not turn his prisoner over to Kansas City authorities, although he intimated he might turn him over to the Missouri State police at Macon, where he is wanted for the killing of two State policemen.

In a formal statement, Chief Fultz explained: "The Mayor and I were working to locate Floyd, and Mr. Purvis came to the mayor and me under an assumed name, which we resented. Mr. Purvis would not cooperate with us, and instead went to another city after we had given details of the case and the vicinity where we believed Floyd was. He was captured only a short distance away from where we had mentioned."

Federal men made it plain that they were cooperating with Kansas City officers in an effort to get Richetti back to Missouri while the Federal grand jury probing the Union Station slaughters is sitting.

Note Suit Won By Defendant

Purchaser of Park Savings Notes Held Blameless for Agent's Fraud.

Persons who purchased from the Park Savings Bank notes that had been left there merely for collection can hold them as against the original owner of the securities, Justice Peyton Gordon, in the District Supreme Court, decided yesterday.

His ruling came in a suit brought by Nannie Counselman, as executrix for the estate of Katherine M. Counselman. Katherine Counselman had purchased four $500 notes from the bank and had left them there for collection, after indorsing them in blank so the bank could deal with them.

In June, 1932, the bank sold the notes to Rufus F. Pitzer, 1422 Decatur street northwest, who was named defendant in the suit, and Robert S. Stunz, then executive officer and vice president, wrote a letter to Pitzer explaining why the notes had been extended beyond their due date.

Pitzer's attorney, Aubrey St. C. Wardwell, contended his client had paid full value for the notes and had purchased them without notice that the bank was not the real owner. Justice Gordon held that the bank had been chosen as an agent by the petitioner, who would have to suffer the consequences of the agent's fraud.

Check Evil Ways, Youth Urged, As Episcopal Session Closes

'Menace of Reno' Flayed; 'Pastoral' Is Read by Bishop Freeman.

Atlantic City, Oct. 23 (AP).—With an appeal to youth to check the "evil and lustful ways" of a "wicked and adulterous generation," bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church today addressed a message of mixed despair and hope to the communicants of their faith.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, read the "Bishops' Pastoral," the review of church and world affairs which ended the fifty-first triennial general Episcopal convention.

In contrast to the throng of more than 20,000 which gathered October 10 for the opening service, there were but 1,200 lay delegates, presbyters and bishops at the final session.

"Ethical and moral standards have suffered grave impairment in this post-war age and it is our conviction that this departure from ways and practices that are clean and wholesome is a primary contributing cause of the long-continued depression," the pastoral stated.

"We have had the conceit that America, with its vast estate and its incomparable ingenuity, could survive misfortune and disaster. * * * We have poured out of our treasure in prodigal measure. * * * We have invoked the cooperative influence of commerce and industry; we have appealed to the patience and loyalty of our people, but we still linger in the shadows of a disillusioned and distracted world."

Crying out against "greed and selfishness, unrest, hunger and multiplied disorders, civil strife in cities and despair in agriculture," the document told of a "moral sag" which has "sapped the strength, impaired the confidence, exhausted the reserves and reduced to a low plane of importance this Nation and the nations of the world."

Plays and novels "immoral and grossly licentious * * * cleverly conceived and written * * * "suggestive and indecent motion pictures which have "aroused the wrath of self-respecting people who have demanded the right of decency," all were condemned.

"The menace of Reno, * * * child life blighted and its future obscured by darkened homes, * * * the appeal to foreign courts which have given us an unenviable distinction quite without parallel, even among so-called pagan people"— were termed the results of divorce.

"This unchecked and growing evil, largely indulged in by people of wealth and position, destroys the sanctity of marriage and gives it the character of legalized prostitution," the pastoral declared.

'Torch Murder' Of Three Laid To Ex-Convict

Candidate for Judgeship and Alleged Aid Held; Confession Claimed.

West Plains, Mo., Oct. 23 (AP). Fears of a woman that she was the next on her former convict husband's "murder list" today led officers to the purported solution of mysterious slayings in Missouri, Arkansas, and Indiana.

The husband, Rufus E. Edwards, 37-year-old Thayer, Mo., real estate dealer, and Joe (Luck) Braden, 35, were in jail charged with the insurance "torch murder" last July of Edwards' stepson, Oscar Bushart, 27.

Edwards and Braden waived preliminary hearing and were bound over to the November term of circuit court.

Ewards' arrest and subsequent confession, authorities said, also solved the murder of Albert Johnson, ironworker, near Mount Vernon, Ind., three years ago and the more recent slaying of Clinton Bruce Claibourne, at Calico Rock, Ark.

Edwards campaigned for the nomination for probate judge in the August phimary on the promise he would, if elected, try to clear up the mysterious slaying of his stepson.

Edwards promised to pay him $500 for killing Bushart and to double the amount if he succeeded in collecting double liability on a $4,000 insurance policy for accidental death, Braden was qouted as stating in a separate confession. Actually, Braden said, Edwards paid him only $35.

Mrs. Allie Francis Edwards, who is about 15 years older than her husband, furnished authorities with the "leads" which, they said, enabled them to solve the murders.

Kidnaper's Wife Asks Mrs. Stoll's Aid at Her Trial

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 23 (AP).—Defense of Mrs. Thomas H. Robinson, jr., indicted for participating in the abduction of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, will rest principally upon Mrs. Stoll herself and members of her family, Clem W. Huggins, Mrs. Robinson's attorney, said tonight.

Mrs. Robinson, indicted with her husband and father-in-law, today pleaded not guilty to the charge.

The lawyer said he planned to subpena Mrs. Stoll, Frederic M. Sacket, former United States Senator and diplomat and an uncle by marriage of Mrs. Stoll; C. C. Stoll, father-in-law of the erstwhile captive, and Ferriss Bailey, Nashville lawyer, who, Huggins said, received the $50,000 ransom package from an express agency.

"They'll tell the truth," Huggins said, "even though the Department of Justice has temporarily put the muzzle on them."

He repeated his claim that Mrs. Robinson was "the instrument" of members of the family and the Government in effecting the restoration of Mrs. Stoll after six days' captivity in an Indianapolis apartment with young Robinson.

Auto Workers Charge Houde Barred Union

Justice Department Given Affidavits on Alleged Discrimination.

(Associated Press.)

The United Automobile Workers yesterday filed with the Justice Department affidavits that the Houde Engineering Corporation of Buffalo, N. Y., refused on October 9 to recognize a union committee as representing all its employes for collective bargaining.

Lack of evidence of this nature was understood to have caused the department to hold up court action against the Houde company after the labor relations board ruled that the United Automobile Workers represented all the employes of the auto parts firm.

Charlton Ogburn, counsel for the union, filed the affidavits, signed by more than half a dozen members of the local union committee.

The Houde case has been regarded of major importance by both labor leaders and industrialists since it involved the question of whether a union should speak for all the employes of a plant if a majority of those employes belonged. The labor board said it should.

Huey 'Redistributes' $6 Doles To Students for Trip to Game

Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 23 (AP).—Huey P. Long today applied his pet theory of redistribution of wealth by dishing out train fare at $6 a head to Louisiana State University students, who nearly mobbed him in their eagerness to get to Nashville Saturday fo the L. S. U.-Vanderbilt football game.

The scene, with many hundreds of cadets, coeds and other college students clamoring around the "Kingfish" for cash, served as a prelude to the excursion to Nashville. The Senator boasted he would be an attraction, as well as the 125-piece college band which he will lead on parade at the head of the 1,550 cadets.

"If any of you haven't got $6, come to see me privately and I'll let you have it," the Senator told the student body from the rostrum at the college.

He said it was a loan to the students.

No liquor nor the smell of it.

No Pullmans, but chair cars for all.

And "don't take me lightly," admonished the Kingfish. "The trains will be patrolled by Louisiana's police."

Five special trains will carry the students.

WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1934 15

Nice May Get Backing of 2 Minor Groups

Conley Wing Reported Ready to Join With Tabler Minority.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 23 (Spl.).—An unusual situation may result in Washington County if Harry W. Nice, Republican, is elected Governor, political leaders, who profess to know, intimate.

These leaders, who have had their ears to the ground this week, believe the minorities of the two major parties here may combine behind Nice. Whether such a trade is with the knowledge and approval of the Republican gubernatorial candidate is not known.

Significance is attached by these leaders to the dinner given last night, to which the leaders of the minority group who supported Nice, in the primary here, were invited, but which found none of the Old Guard leaders, who supported Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, present.

The minority group in the Republican party in this county who supported Nice was defeated by Old Guard Republicans in the primary, although Nice carried the county. Dr. H. E. Tabler, Hancock, leader of the Nice campaign here in the primary, is leader in the district in the county with the largest Republican affiliated majority. Dr. Tabler, who headed a ticket opposing the Old Guard ticket for the State central committee, was defeated, as were several more of his candidates. The Old Guard, however, after Nice's victory in the primary, has taken charge of the Nice campaign in this county.

Democratic Situation Similar.

A similar situation exists in the Democratic party in the county, with the minority, under the leadership of Dr. J. Hubert Wade, who directed the campaign of Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, for the gubernatorial nomination, reported by these leaders who profess to know, to be ready to combine with the Tabler minority. They point to the conference held here between the leaders of the two minority groups.

Dr. Wade, former chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee of Maryland, has been the anti-Ritchie leader in Western Maryland since he was ousted as director of the State Board of Welfare during Governor Ritchie's first administration as governor. Not only has this feeling against Ritchie been shown in the primaries, but Ritchie has been cut in Dr. Wade's own Boonsboro district each time he was a candidate for governor.

The Democratic primary fight here this fall was unusually bitter, with Dr. Wade having an entire ticket in the field for the six central committee places. However, the Democratic organization forces which backed Ritchie, carried the county and named all six of its candidates.

Since the primary, Dr. Wade has given no indication of supporting the Ritchie ticket.

Conley Supporters to Dine.

While tonight's Republican mass meeting found the Republican Old Guard leaders, who supported Goldsborough in the primary, on hand to greet Mr. Nice and other State candidates, leaders here believe Dr. Tabler will direct most of the patronage here, if Nice is elected, while Dr. Wade would be consulted when the minority party's appointments are made.

A dinner which is scheduled for Friday, a few days before the election, by supporters of Dr. Conley in the primary, likewise is pointed to by these leaders as significant in view of the reports that the minorities in each of the two major parties are getting together.

Just how far such a defection from the ranks of the Democrats would cut into the Ritchie vote in this county, no one would risk a guess. Dr. Conley obtained 3,600 votes in the recent primary here, while the Democratic affiliated majority over the Republicans since the recent registration is 1,910.

Some Democrats, however, pointed to the possibility that a large number of Republicans who supported Goldsborough in the primary, are not reconciled to the Nice candidacy and that such a combination as reported, might cut both ways.

They admitted, however, that they did not expect to see Dr. Wade or any of his lieutenants in the recent primary at the mass meeting tomorrow night in the interest of the candidacies of Ritchie and other State and county candidates.

Will President Roosevelt become a duck hunter?

That is a question foremost in the minds of citizens at Poplar Island, Md., who have heard rumors that construction activities in progress at the ducking grounds there may be preparatory to a visit from the President during the duck hunting season. They also hear that President Roosevelt may shoot ducks in company with the United States Senators from Maryland.

And a whole island will be waiting for the Chief Executive if he decides to duck hunt there. Owners of Valliant Island have noted their desire to turn the place over to the President for the sport.

Canvasback ducks, redheads, mallards and other species of wildfowl are reported in great numbers in that region and some real sport, no doubt, awaits the President.

Charles S. Hunter, jr., of Staunton, Va., suffered an unusual accident—one that cost him his left eye and the post of best man in a wedding which was to have taken place a few hours later.

Mr. Hunter is manager of a machine shop and while he was supervising some work, a screwdriver in the hands of a mechanic slipped and struck Mr. Hunter in the eye, penetrating the eyeball.

A substitution was made in the wedding party for Mr. Hunter as best man.

For some months, a gold mine at Wilderness, Va., has been worked and now comes word that Harry Shuler, of near Luray, has discovered veins of gold while digging a well.

Mr. Shuler says that when he got the well down to 267 feet the gold findings covered the bottom of the opening. Without further thought of water from that source, Mr. Shuler sent the nuggets to a chemist for assaying. The assaying disclosed a high percentage of pure gold. Mr. Shuler lost no time in giving options to a number of capitalists for prospecting the place.

The question of the moment seems to be: "Will there be a gold rush of '34?" and if so, remember, Virginia is not far away.

It was Charles Dana who gave us the thesis that when a man bites a dog that's news. It might also be said that when five generations of the same family hold a reunion, that's news.

Little Scottie Pryor, 6, of Hagerstown, Md., was the honor guest at a reunion of five generations of his relatives at the home of his great-grandmother, Mrs. Jennie B. Miller, 60, at Waynesboro, Pa. Others present included his great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Alice Miller, 82, Edgemont, Md.; Mrs. C. L. Garver, 42, Hagerstown, his grandmother, and Mrs. Mildred Pryor, 23, Hagerstown, his mother.

100 Homestead Requests Filed

Time Limit for Remaining in Shenandoah Park Is Extended.

Luray, Va., Oct. 23 (AP).—Approximately 100 mountaineers today had signed applications for subsistence homestead privileges, and in return were granted extensions of time in which they may remain in the Shenandoah National Park until April, 1935, or until the homesteads are ready for occupancy.

Officials said the signing would continue until November 1. By this time it was hoped all families in the park would have taken advantage of the opportunity to get a home. They have been notified that they must vacate by November 1 unless they agree to go into a homestead.

The number of families who thus far have refused to sign is estimated between 20 and 40.

Purchase of five sites for homesteads for mountain dwellers is expected to be made shortly. They have been appraised and options have been taken. Two are reported to be located near Luray and another on the Page County-Rockingham County line. Others are located in Madison, Rappahannock and Green Counties.

Ruling on Deadline For Candidates Asked

Annapolis, Oct. 23 (AP).—An interpretation of the State statute setting a time limit for filing for elective office, as it applies to an independent candidate, was requested from the Court of Appeals today.

The case came up on the appeal of Gordon Tull from a decision of the Somerset County Circuit Court, upholding the action of the board of election supervisors of the county, in refusing to place Tull's name on the ballot as an independent candidate for State's attorney. The board held that Tull had filed his certificate too late.

Tull, an attorney of Princess Anne, filed a certificate of nomination, signed by more than the 500 voters required, with the supervisors on September 28, after the primary election. The board in refusing to place his name on the ballot cited section 55, article 33 of the State law, which requires a candidate to file 15 days before the primary election.

Claude Bailey, who appeared before the Appellate Court for Tull, contended that it was not the intention of the Legislature to make section 55 applicable to independent candidates. He held that the certificate of nomination should be received by the supervisors at any time prior to 10 days before the election in which the independent candidate wishes to participate.

Virginian Gets 7 Years' Term For Extortion

Small Is Sentenced for Demand of $1,000 on Employer.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 23 (Spl.). Just five days after he wrote a note demanding $1,000 from his employer, Edward A. Small, 28, Pulaski chemical plant worker, today was sentenced to seven years in the Atlanta Penitentiary by Judge John Paul in United States District Court here.

Small came here in custody of a Pulaski policeman waiving a delay until court convenes at Abingdon, November 12. He was accompanied by his wife, mother and father-in-law. He is the father of three children, the youngest born a month ago.

Case Sets Speed Record.

Government agents say the dispatch in handling the case sets a speed record for this district. Small was arrested Saturday, indicted Monday and sentenced today.

Small told the Court "I didn't realize what I was doing or I would not have done it." That was his only statement.

Judge Paul said it was hard to pass out a sentence for a crime "born in ignorance and foolishness" especially when the accused is not an innate criminal. But, he added, "extortion is just about the meanest crime there is and terrible consequences result when threats are carried out."

Judge Paul declared that "decent people must be protected against this crime because no one knows when the writer of a threatening note may be mean enough to carry it out."

Got "Tip" From Stranger.

Howard C. Gilmer, jr., assistant district attorney, said Small told him a stranger suggested the note writing if he needed money. The attorney emphasized no gangsters were involved, but that the crime was "more revolting" because the wife of M. D. Landis, against whom the threat was made, died recently. Small was employed at the General Chemical Plant of which Landis is superintendent.

Small was arrested when Pulaski police lay in wait for him at the point the note designated the money be left. His misspelling of the word "thousand" trapped the would-be extortionist. Stationery similar to that on which the note was written was found in the Small home.

Sam H. Harris, Noted Showman, Plans Quick Revamping of What Promises Big Hit

Famed Produc Will Have Play Redone Shortly

'Bring on Ladies' on Spot; About Melcher's Past; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The first manifestation of his managerial acumen, I believe, was revealed in his conduct of a laundry. A successful laundry, it may be said. Then, through a series of amateur experiments, he discovered that the not too-gentle art of fisticuffing was not without its material rewards. So he managed Terry McGovern, one of the greatest mittmen the ring has known; took him as a bantamweight, won the featherweight title with him from George Dixon and later campaigned him as a lightweight.

Show business next attracted his attention and has held it ever since. There is no more notable team of producers in the annals of the American theater than Cohan and Harris. And the latter half of that partnership would be the gentleman of whom we are speaking at the moment—Sam H. Harris.

The experience gathered during the expansive period between the years of the laundry and the production of "Bring on the Girls," the current attraction packing them in at the National, has made a "gambler" of Sam H. Harris. A "gambler," in the parlance of the showshop, is a producer who takes the long chance to salvage triumph out of ruin or, perhaps, mediocre success.

An Eye to Main Chance.

That is what Mr. Harris proposes to do in the case of "Bring on the Girls." There is a wealth of material of the first order in this overstressed farce aimed at the more vulnerable aspects of the present operation of the New Deal, but they somehow do not quite jell after the fall of the curtain on the first act.

This was proclaimed in friendly spirit in yesterday morning's issue of this reliable palladium. Mr. Harris agrees with what we said concerning the shortcomings of what ought to be, and no doubt will be, in due course, an overwhelming comedy smash. But there is work to be done before this happy consummation.

In order to facilitate this essential revision, it is not improbable that "Bring on the Girls" will be temporarily withdrawn from circulation on Saturday night and rewritten from the end of the first act on. After the three or four weeks that Mr. Harris estimated to this writer last evening that the process might consume the play will be reopened in a more compact and rationalized form.

Farce Is Out-Farced.

The determining factor in differentiating a farce from a straight comedy or a serious drama is the extent to which an extravagant premise—"preliminary situation" it usually is called—can contrive to make itself acceptable to the credence of an audience. Once the fantastic premise has been established it should be possible to "go along with" the players in the working out of their problems.

In "Bring on the Girls," as it stands at this point, this is not quite a possible task for any audience. The tale transcends every farthest reach of believability. In other words, it out-farces farce and resolves itself into a series of sporadic comedy lines and situations that are no more closely knit than to make pertinent the observation that compared to some such standard political comedy as Charles Hoyt's "A Texas Steer," "Bring on the Girls" is about the equivalent of reading a copy of Life as opposed to a Dickens novel!

All this is to be corrected. Mr. Harris was emphatic in this statement when pleasantly encountered in the National last night. So was George S. Kaufman.

Mr. Kaufman Speaks.

When asked why "Bring on the Girls" had not been made the basis of a glittering girls-and-music show, Mr. Kaufman, momentarily detached from journalistic interests other than these, expressed the view that 16 or 60 girls have done about all there is to be done with their dance routines, pulchritude and toe-pointing to capture the interest of any public.

One gathers that "Bring on the Girls" was written in the first place as a libretto and then was deemed of sufficient dramatic worth to stand on its own legs as unmusicalized entertainment. If all its legs were fashioned after the classic contour of Muriel Campbell's this would be wholly true.

It was 21 years ago, incidentally, when Mr. Kaufman was engaged in the complex task of getting out a local column between poker games in the cardrooms of the National Press Club—a fact which he recalled with some glee last evening as I similarly recollected that I used to send excessingly clever items to his daily symposium. I am laughing!

At any rate, on the testimony of one of the theater's foremost producers and one of its most prolific and most successful authors, "Bring on the Girls" is going to be a show. Just now it is a series of gorgeous "gags."

So now it comes out.

Walter Morris, managing director of the Stanley Theater in Baltimore, with the opening of which this column was indifferently concerned back in the fall of 1927, will leave his present post on Friday, October 26, which would be day after tomorrow, to accept a position of some importance in the "home" offices of the Warner Brothers in New York City. Mr. Morris has been engaged in professional activities in the Washington zone of the Warner interests for the past four years. During that time he has successfully executed arduous duties in many cities, including a term of several months at the Metropolitan Theater in this city.

Rodney Collier, for the past many seasons managing director of the Rialto Theater, recently closed by Universal, lessee from Tom Moore—and I had something to do with the opening of this theater back in 1918, too—will assume the duties of manager at the Stanley in Baltimore, which has been presided over by a considerable list of skilled showmen, including Bernie Depkin, Harry Lohmeyer, Billie Busch and numerous others well known to Washington's theater world.

So, He Fiddles!

And there is another cat out of the bag!

This fellow, Eddie De Selding Melcher, our esteemed young confrere on the Evening Star, in addition to being critic and playwright, also is—or was—an embryo Kreisler, Zimbalist, Spaulding, or something. In other words, he bows a mean fiddle.

This all comes out because Eugenie Gray Woodruff, the society girl dancer, is headlining the current floor show at the Shoreham. Miss Woodruff, teamed with James Struthers—and both are social registerites—discloses the heretofore closely guarded secret that Eddie once played the violin at an amateur dance in which she participated in Northeast Harbor, Me.

Not especially because this unveiling of the past is productive of this meager mention, Mr. Melcher is said to be vastly excited by the presence in the Capital of a dancer whom he hugely admires. She has been dancing of late at the Ambassador and Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

"Jayhawker," the new play by Sinclair Lewis and his unrelated namesake, Lloyd Lewis, will open in the Cort Theater, New York, on Monday night, October 29. The play has undergone extensive revision since its presentation in Washington last week and will mark the dramatic debut in the metropolis of Fred Stone and his charming daughter, Carol, just as it did here. Whatever the fate of the play may be at the hands of the "death watch," there can be no doubt of the welcome that will be accorded the star and his daughter.

Avariciousness Note.

If you are talking about that turkey in "Bring on the Ladies," I'll take the wishbone with the diamond necklace on it!

Repairs Urged At Workhouse

Pettit Finds Conditions in Frame Buildings 'Deplorable.'

The frame buildings housing the women prisoners at the District Workhouse at Occoquan, Va., are "in deplorable condition," Capt. Arthur L. Pettit, superintendent of the prison said in his annual report for the last fiscal year made public yesterday by Capt. M. M. Barnard, general superintendent of District penal institutions.

The women's part of the prison, it was said, "should receive immediate attention with a view to erecting all new buildings which would serve far better as to sanitation and comfort.

"The population of the women's department was almost at capacity during the entire year. More than half of the inmates are women with penitentiary sentences."

There were 8,882 prisoners handled at the prison during the fiscal year, Capt. Pettit said. The average daily population was 738 men and 72 women.

Straight From the Studios

Conflicts Impend Over Ownership of Film Plays; Young Scientist Finds His Way Into Picture; News Notes From West Coast.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Oct. 23.—Competition over good stories for the screen is getting to be something fearful, and it looks as if there soon may be a fight a minute over who owns the rights to what.

RALPH BELLAMY.

Charles B. Rogers and Universal are the latest, threatening deadlock in bloody battle. Some time ago, Rogers announced plans to produce "Diamond Jim," which, it was said, would emerge under the title, "The World's Greatest Spender." George Bancroft was considered as the star.

Now it seems that Universal has arranged for the purchase of a "Diamond Jim" story by Parker Morrell, and the Hays office may yet have to step into the fray.

There is also, you know, the contention over production of "Beau Brummel," one version with Leslie Howard starred, and another with Robert Donat.

More Runyon On the Way.

"Three Wise Guys," by Damon Runyon, is slated for early start at M-G-M. The plot concerns three chaps who live by their wits. Franchot Tone probably will appear in the picture, with Stuart Erwin in one of the comedy roles.

Make-Believe Science.

Experiments of Dr. Robert E. Cornish at California University in bringing dead dogs back to life are attracting all sorts of attention from picture makers. Anything new in scientific experiments generally does.

An incident dealing with such resuscitation occurs in "Life Returns," featuring Onslow Stevens and Lois Wilson. It is said that Dr. Cornish himself is photographed in this film actually performing an operation, but it is questionable whether this can be included in the final version.

Meanwhile, another competitor appears in "Man Alive!" This may star Charles Laughton in a role somewhat similar to his part in "The Isle of Lost Souls." The story was suggested to J. P. McEvoy by James Davis, a masseur at Paramount, and McEvoy was so enthusiastic about the idea that he wrote the screen play within three hours.

"Dream" Designer Named.

"Midsummer Night's Dream" is assured of some colorful settings. Anton Grot, who designed backgrounds for Doug Fairbank's "Thief of Bagdad," has been placed in charge of this work for Max Reinhardt's production. Grot's imaginative scenic designs for the Fairbanks picture were among the most beautiful of their time. Mickey Rooney, Warren William, Josephine Hutchinson, Jean Muir, Guy Kibbee, Frank McHugh and others reported cast for this picture.

Bellamy With Sten.

Ralph Bellamy will appear as the Polish fiance of Anna Sten in "The Wedding Night." This is the second male lead; Gary Cooper being assigned to the American novelist role. Miss Sten recently spent some time at the Chicago Fair, but recently returned and work will start soon with King Vidor directing. This picture is laid in a Connecticut setting and will be entirely different from either of Miss Sten's two previous American-made pictures.

Parties Pledge School Work

Democrats and Fusionists Back Project in Bethesda.

Montgomery County's Democratic and Fusionist organizations pledged completion of the new Western Suburban Senior High School unit at Bethesda, with an auditorium and gymnasium as originally planned, in letters read last night to the meeting of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School Parent-Teachers Association.

Stedman Prescott, chairman of the Democratic county organization and candidate for State Senator, wrote that immediate efforts were being made to obtain PWA funds so that the unit might be ready for use early in 1935, and promised that, if PWA funds were not obtainable, the Democrats would work to get the necessary appropriations from the coming session of the Maryland Legislature. He advocated prompt construction of a second unit to meet the school-building needs of the next two years.

Adequate school facilities were similarly indorsed in the Fusion letter from Thomas M. Anderson, county chairman. Both letters were addressed to James V. Bennett, president of the association.

Three Staunton Cadets Sought

Trio Missing From School in Virginia Believed in Washington.

Washington police were requested yesterday to be on the lookout for three cadets who took "French leave" from Staunton Military Academy, Staunton, Va., Monday night.

Hospital Wing To Be Erected At Alexandria

Addition Costing $50,000 Will Contain 40 Beds; Plans Speeded.

The Alexandria Hospital will build an addition to its present structure, to cost $50,000, according to an announcement yesterday. The hospital is on the north side of Duke street, between Washington and Columbus streets, and the addition, which will contain 40 beds, will be on propery owned by the hospital, to the west of and adjoining the present building.

It will be three stories in height, in keeping with the older building and will have a frontage on Duke street of 66 feet and a depth, running north on Columbus street, of 40 feet.

One feature of the addition will be a flat roof which will be utilized as a promenade for convalescent patients. The plans have been practically completed by J. B. Collins, architect, and the addition will require four months to complete.

The present hospital, which contains 50 beds, was built in 1917 and has been overcrowded almost from the time of its completion, it being necessary often to place beds in the hallways. It is an outgrowth of the old Alexandria Infirmary, for many years located at the southeast corner of Wolfe and Pitt streets, the name being changed when the new building was constructed.

John D. Weaver, representative of the office of D. R. Hunt, State NRA compliance director for Virginia, will be in Alexandria tomorrow from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m., to advise employers who desire information concerning their respective codes. He will be located in the postoffice building. Employes who feel that their employers are not living up to the code in every detail are requested to make reports of such violations to Mr. Weaver.

It is stated that interviews will be regarded as confidential, and names of persons consulting Mr. Weaver will not be disclosed or used in making complaints.

Charles N. Smith, 63 years old, of the 1500 block Pennsylvania avenue southeast, Washington, died yesterday in the Alexandria Hospital, as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident near Woodlawn, Fairfax County, Sunday. He sustained several broken ribs, and one of his ribs, it is stated, punctured his heart.

Mr. Smith was a passenger in an automobile with his son, C. A. Smith, 34, of the 1700 block I street northwest, Washington, who received a possible fractured knee and lacerations. Their car was in collision with one said to have been operated by George C. Ellis, of Longfellow street, Washington. William Ames, of Rosslyn, who was a passenger in Ellis' car, escaped injury.

The committee which had charge of plans for the National Firemen's Association parade, held in Alexandria on Labor Day, will meet in the George Mason Hotel at 8 o'clock tonight to consider a proposition to liquidate an indebtedness of approximately $2,100.

Owing to the rain on the day of the parade, several thousand seats on the route of the parade on Washington street remained unsold. This being the principal source of revenue depended upon by the committee, a serious deficit arose.

The Eighth District Council, American Legion, met last night in Gadsby's Tavern, with District Vice Commander John Haggerty, of Occoquan, presiding. Alexandria Post, No. 24, was represented by Everett Hellmuth, commander, and Franklin DeDier, adjutant.

Troop No. 134, Boy Scouts, of Christ Episcopal Church, Alexandria, will celebrate its first anniversary with an army supper in Christ Church Parish Hall. Talks will be made by several speakers. Reuben R. Robinson, Scout leader, will be in charge of serving the army "chow."

Democrats Busy In Montgomery

11 Rallies Scheduled for Next 10 Days.

Eleven rallies are scheduled for the next ten days by the Democratic party of Montgomery County.

Speakers will include local candidates for office and the candidates for the county-wide positions, including Stedman Prescott, candidate for State senator, James H. Pugh, candidate for State attorney, and J. Forest Walker, candidate for county treasurer.

The program calls for a meeting at Clarksburg tonight, Takoma Park and Potomac tomorrow night, Laytonsville Saturday, Potomac and Travilah Monday, Silver Spring and Cabin John Park Tuesday, Gaithersburg Thursday and Glen Echo and Germantown Friday.

Chamber to Hear Charles H. Brough

"The Challenge of the Twentieth Century" will be discussed by former Gov. Charles Hillman Brough, of Arkansas tonight at a meeting of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce. E. L. Florence, general commercial manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Baltimore, also will speak.

The program will include motion pictures made by the telephone company and musical selections by R. H. Davidson, director of the C. & P. Glee Club. Members of the Kensington baseball team will be guests of honor.

Bus transportation for Kensington and Garrette Park will be discussed.

Sunrise in the Suburbs

By Clyde H. DuBose.

The 200 members of the CCC camp at Beltsville, Md., will be on hand at the Ritchie Coliseum, University of Maryland, Friday night to lend a little organized cheering to the Democratic rally.

They are being given a little instruction ahead of time so only a given signal will be needed to get a vociferous "ray Ritchie" or "rah Radcliffe."

These same boys were recently guests of the university at the school's opening football game with St. John's College, at which time they assisted the Maryland team with the organized cheering.

So, of course, there may be some danger of their getting their signals mixed Friday night and astonishing the audience with "we want a touchdown."

Robert G. "Mac" Macartee, of Hyattsville, Republican candidate for the Maryland House of Delegates, fell into the hands of certain Prince Georges County's Democratic candidates the other night.

At 2 a. m. the playful Democrats enticed "Mac" into a Bladensburg barbecue. At 4 a. m. "Mac" left the barbecue loaded down with campaign cards of one of his opponents.

In retaliation he went to another opponent's office yesterday and plastered the walls and furniture with his own campaign cards—just a little playful campaign going on out there.

Fire department officials in the suburbs have issued warnings to those who maintain residences to watch defective chimney flues.

Last winter almost a dozen persons living near Washington lost their lives when their homes burned while they slept. In several instances these fires started from defective flues.

Residents of Fairfax and Arlington counties have been warned by the State's Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that bootleg liquor sold in the Old Dominion "ain't what it ought to be."

Artificial coloring, the presence of foreign protein matter and an evil order were said to be among the properties of the backwoods beverage.

This Washington and Lee High School at Ballston, Va., is no slacker when it comes to taking the spotlight.

If they are not electing a yearbook staff or beginning the dramatic season, they are winning all the football games, or sending the French class to visit the French naval vessel at the Washington Navy Yard.

And with "Washington and Lee the second" on the air, it might be well to say the boys over there asked that something be said about the Delta Sigma Nu (local frat), and their spookey Halloween dance, to be held at the Ashton Heights clubhouse.

Lions Assume RedCross Work

Silver Spring Member Will Replace Board That Resigned.

Support of Red Cross work in the community was pledged by the Silver Spring (Md.) Lions Club at a meeting last night following a report that the officers of the local branch of the Montgomery County Chapter of the American Red Cross have resigned and the work is temporarily in abeyance.

It was stated that if the Red Cross situation should remain as it is during the period of the annual roll call which starts within the next several days the Lions Club would take over the work of soliciting memberships and other funds. In addition the club also stands ready, it was said, to carry on the current work of the branch, which consists of providing lunches for a number of undernourished children in the local schools, aiding in furnishing funds for the visiting nurse service of the county, and other welfare work.

Capt. Frank L. Hewitt attended the dinner held in Rockville last night by the county chapter of the Red Cross as a delegate from the Lions Club to offer assistance and ascertain the facts of the case.

The four officers of the Silver Spring branch of the Red Cross resigned in a body last week in protest against alleged "lack of cooperation" on the part of the members of the branch and the community. Officers who resigned were Mrs. William Wight, chairman; Mrs. Charles E. Gebhardt, vice chairman; Harry Trainer, secretary, and Mrs. Walter Oliver, treasurer.

Defendant Denies Assaulting Officer

Richard Walsh Arraigned in Prince Georges.

Charged with assault with intent to kill Eleventh Precinct Policeman Everett Grimes, Richard Walsh was arraigned in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday and pleaded not guilty.

Bud Grimes, who also has been indicted by the grand jury in connection with the assault at Silver Hill, Md., last August, has not yet been arraigned.

Policeman Grimes was allegedly beaten by a gang of men who, he said, threatened him if he ever came into Maryland. He said they were irked by his arresting several of the gang. The patrolman was confined to the hospital for several weeks after the attack.

Capt. Dolan's Funeral Will Be Held Today

Funeral services for Capt. Joseph C. Dolan, U. S. A., retired, will be held today at Arlington National Cemetery. Full military honors will be rendered from the Fort Myer gate at 1:30 p. m.

The officer died in New Orleans, La., on Sunday. He was born in Maxwell, Nebr., March 18, 1889, entering the Army in the Field Artillery section of the Officers Reserve Corps in November, 1917. He held the Silver Star and Oak Leaf Cluster for acts of bravery in the World War. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Alice Marie Dolan, of New Iberia, La.

County Supervisors Fix a Tentative Slate.

Election supervisors of Prince Georges County yesterday drew up a tentative ballot for the November 6 elections, it was announced at Upper Marlboro by Samuel A. Wyvill, clerk to the supervisors.

On one side, Mr. Wyvill said, the ballot will contain the names of the gubernatorial candidates and those for the United States Congress, State Legislature, and State Senator.

On the other side will be those for clerk of court, State's attorney, county treasurer, sheriff, register of wills, county commissioner board, orphans court, and the two constitutional amendments.

With the approach of winter the fire marshal appeals to home owners to see that flues are cleaned and in good condition. Records show that in past years many fires started in the early winter were the result of defective flues.

Attention is also called by the fire marshall that in the burning of trash fires at no time be left alone as in many instances serious damage of property results.

Other officers elected were Francis Madigan, vice president; Juanita Strickler, secretary, and Agnes Deaton, treasurer.

By John R. Vosburgh.

TECH HIGH SCHOOL'S powerful football team trampled its old rival, Central High, 45 to 0, yesterday afternoon in the thirty-second annual renewal of the dual series. The score fell 4 points short of being the worst beating in the history of the rivalry. Back in 1928, Tech won by a 48-to-0 margin.

While 6,000 spectators looked on in amazementfi the perfectly drilled brigades of Coach Hap Hardell loosed a bewildering offensive which gathered momentum every minute the game progressed.

Breaks Into Stride.

Starting with one touchdown in the opening period, the Techmen broke into a scoring stride which struck repeatedly again and again with sharp, sudden decisiveness. By the time of the final whistle, the Grey had accumulated seven touchdowns, throttling its opponents' offensive consistently before it could get started and taking the ball time and again to launch out on a new touchdown march.

The triumph once more made Tech a heavy favorite to win the 1934 inter-high championship despite its tie with Eastern last week. It was Central's first game of the series.

Startling Spurt.

It was hardly a high school team which Coach Hardell unleashed on Central yesterday. It had the smooth perfection of a college eleven. It was fired with an indomitable fervor, bulwarked with a fast-charging line and powered with a ball-carrying corps equipped with startling speed and clever, well-executed deception.

Capt. Blackie Heatwole and Pete Alley, Tech's back field aces, were the individual stars of the day. Heatwole was all over the field offensively and defensively. When he wasn't running around end or off-tackle for 10 or 12 yards he was knocking down passes or doing some deadly tackling.

Scores on Fake Spinner.

It was Alley who slashed through from the 5-yard line for the first touchdown on a fake spinner not long after the opening whistle. The chance for the score had come on an intercepted pass by George Bogan, who ran 15 yards to Central's 14-yard line, and gained 7 more on the next play. Alley picked up 2 before going over for the score. He missed the extra point on a place-kick attempt.

Monroe Emmerich, a track man like Bogan, tallied the next touchdown, taking the ball on an end-around-end play from the 11-yard line, where Heatwole had placed the ball early in the second period on a 27-yard run-back of a Central punt. Alley made good his placement attempt.

Bogan paved the way for the third touchdown a few minutes later, intercepting a pass on Central's 38. Alley, Paul Lynch, another track sprinter, and Heatwole ripped off a couple of first downs to the 11-yard line, from which point Lynch went through left tackle for the touchdown. Alley's kick hit the crossbar.

Bogan Intercepts a Pass.

Central's best offensive gesture of the day came in this period, but was ended on its own 38 when Bogan intercepted Dunlap's pass.

Bogan scored on a 6-yard run early in the second half on a wide left-end sweep, his speed carrying him beyond the reach of Central's secondary.

Alley went over from the 1-yard line in the fourth quarter after Tech had marched 39 yards and Heatwole added another touchdown a little later on a spectacular 46-yard run after intercepting a pass. The little Tech back snatched the ball literally out of the hands of Buddy Groome, Central end, took his own headgear in one hand and the pigskin in the other, and zigzagged over the goal line. Ted King, substitute end, scored the last touchdown on an end-around-end play from the 12-yard line following an intercepted pass by Lynch on Central's 44 and an exchange of kicks.

Walker Rated 6 to 5 Over Brown

Will Be Outweighed by 20 Pounds Tonight; Rival Confident.

By Bill McCormick.

MICKEY WALKER and Natie Brown await the gong for their ten-round fight in the Auditorium tonight. Brown is expected to enter the ring weighing about 188 pounds. Mickey will be outweighed some 20 pounds.

Walker's superior punching power is conceded by observers to offset the local heavy's boxing skill and weight. While most wagerers are laying 6 to 5 on the Clouting Celt, several bets were recorded yesterday at the astounding odds of 7 and 8 to 5.

Has Trained Hard.

In the customary prebattle statement last night, Walker varied from the usual routine. "I hope to beat Brown," he said. "If I hadn't, I would never have taken the fight. I may not beat him, but if I don't I want it to be a good fight. I've trained for this one as I never trained before. All I ask is that he help me make it a fight and win—lose or draw, it will be one."

Brown expressed confidence in his ability to defeat the Toy Bulldog easily. His handlers expressed doubt as to the ease with which he would win.

Asked For Delay.

"Had the fight gone through when originally scheduled," averred his manager, Billy McCarney, "it would have been fairly easy. Walker was in just fair shape and figured he had a quince to fight here. Someone tipped him off, he asked for the 10-day postponement and worked harder than he ever has before to get in shape. Now he figures to give Natie a helluva battle."

Both gladiators rested and went through the usual drying-out process yesterday. They will weigh-in officially at the Boxing Commission at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

POST PREDICTIONS.

Bouts are rated from A (excellent) to G (very, very bad).

MAIN EVENT—Mickey Walker, Rumson, N. J., vs. Natie Brown, Washington, heavyweights; 10 rounds. Rated B plus. This is given the highest rating ever given any local bout because it has everything—class, color and punch. Walker figures to dump Brown to the canvas at least once before time takes its toll, allowing the local larruper to finish strong. He should finish strong enough to win decisively.

SEMIFINAL—Don Petrin, Newark, vs. Mickey Taylor, Elizabeth, heavyweights; 6 rounds. Rated C. Petrin in a walk. Tough and rugged, Taylor nevertheless is just a sparring partner.

PRELIMINARIES—Roddy Davis, Washington, vs. Lou Terry, St. Louis, lightweight; 6 rounds. Rated D. Terry hits and that's about all. He shouldn't hit Davis.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Blindness, dread affliction of old prize fighters, is stalking little Jack Sharkey, once a bantamweight title contender in the days of such fine champions as Peter Herman, Joe Lynch and Kid Williams.

Hampden-Sydney Is Hit by Injuries

Four Star Players Out of Richmond Game.

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Oct. 23 (AP). Four star Tiger players, Young, Bernier, Dotson and Campbell, may be kept out of the Richmond game as result of injuries suffered in playing the heavy Delaware team.

Hyde McCallion and Pedio, Varsity squad members, also will be ineligible for this game because they are freshmen.

On the other hand, Price and Capt. Ferry are expected to be back in the game for Hampden-Sydney.

Dutra Signed.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 23 (U.P.).—Olin Dutra, huge Californian who holds the National open golf championship, was signed today to serve on the professional staff of the Miami Biltmore Country Club during the winter.

Equipoise Back In Races at Pimlico

Will Be Ready Within Next Two Weeks; Discovery Out of Training.

EQUIPOISE, C. V. Whitney's great horse, will return to the races at the Pimlico meeting which opens next Tuesday, Tom Healey, his trainer, said over the telephone from Garden City, Long Island, last night.

Healey reported that Equipoise is being galloped daily and should be ready for a hard race within the next two weeks. However, the Whitney star will not start in the Narragansett $25,000 special next Tuesday at the New England Track. Healey had hoped to have the horse in shape for that test but has decided not to rush him.

The decision of the Whitney interests not to run Equipoise at Narragansett follows announcement by the Vanderbile Stable that Discovery, too, will not seek the $25,000 purse. The big son of Display developed a fever following his race at Laurel last Saturday, and, fearful that he might be harmed permanently, Trainer Stotler has taken the colt out of training.

May Meet in February.

It is not unlikely that Equipoise, Discovery and Cavalcade, the latter Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Kentucky Derby winner, will meet on February 26 in the $100,000 handicap scheduled at the Santa Anita track, California's new course, due to open this winter This race succeeds the Coffroth and Agua Caliente Handicaps as the world's richest race.

The Whitneys are particularly keen about Equipoise's appearance in this race. The horse needs the big purse if he is to supplant Sun Beau as the world's leading money winner. Cavalcade, which must give away loads of weight in engagements late next year, could run his earnings past the $200,000 mark and give him a boost up the all-time money-winning ladder.

Both Equipoise and Cavalcade have been ailing horses since early last summer. A recurrance of a leg injury kept Equipoise out of training while Cavalcade split a hoof soon after the Derby. Discovery's cold and fever is the first setback for that colt.

Discovery's appearance in the Santa Anita would be more than a mere shot at the large prize. The Vanderbilts and Trainer Stotler believe that Discovery is a better horse than Cavalcade despite the latter's victories of last spring.

Coffey Tells Method of Selection

Referees Are Rated in Games, Then Checked at Meeting.

By Jimmy Powers.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Chicago Tribune.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Football coaches of the East, canvassed today, frankly admitted they made up blacklists of "undesirables" or "unfriendly" officials. Army, Fordham, Navy, Columbia, Brown and Manhattan were among the colleges questioned.

At the same time, Walter Okeson, commissioner of football, vociferously denied everything. He figuratively raised his hands in puritanical horror at the mere mention of the row precipitated last night when Dr. E. J. O'Brien, Boston doctor and veteran referee, charged he had been blackballed into retirement by coaches and graduate managers anxious to protect winning streaks and box-office attractions.

Coach Tuss McLaughry of Brown, stated he had presented a list of "competent men" to Graduate Manager Frederich Marvel last winter. O'Brien's name was not on the list although he had worked the Brown-Yale game of October 21, 1933.

Coach Jimmy Crowley of Fordham, said he had submitted his 1934 list of "approved" officials to Graduate Manager Jack Coffey "when the schedule was discussed long before the present season opened."

Coach Chick Meehan of Manhattan said, "Some men are more capable than others and, of course, I try to get the best. I make out my list after a conference with my assistants and the team captain. Sometimes the boys don't like a certain type and ask me not to have him back again."

List Given Worsham.

Coach Gar Davison of Army declared he gave his list to Maj. L. D. Worsham, who represented the Military Academy on Okeson's governing board. Maj. Worsham could not be reached for comment.

Coach Lou Little of Columbia and Coach Tom Hamilton of Navy admitted making out lists of officials they thought capable of handling the more difficult assignments and especially those games where they expected complicated offenses.

All the coaches declared that their lists were a regular procedure and all were kept secret.

Method Explained.

Graduate Manager Coffey, of Fordham, explained how officials are selected: "The coaches fill out a paper similar to a schoolboy's examination sheet. They mark a fair referee maybe 90 per cent, a mediocre field judge perhaps 75 per cent, an alert and speedy umpire 100 per cent. Then at the end of the season they total the points and discuss demerits with their assistants and the boys.

"Some coaches who use a tricky shift avoid officials who are sticklers. Others who use a wide open passing game avoid officials who are too quick to call interference penalties. Some schools use an illegal rolling block and get away with it because they request officials who interpret the block their way.

Ratings of Schools.

"There are 12 underwriting schools who contribute to Okeson. They are rated 10 plus. There are smaller schools rated 9 plus and still smaller colleges rated 8 plus. When a pair of 10 plus schools meet in what is known as a "20 game" and the fee is high, around $100, most of the officials are anxious to get these games. Fordham is a 9-plus school.

"We are given special consideration in intersectional games such as the St. Marys, Southern Methodist and Purdue contests. If we play a 10-plus school that is a '19 game' and it also calls for a fairly stiff fee."

"Homers" Charged.

Dr. O'Brien charged that with the withdrawal of wealthy sportsmen from the officiating lists the competition for fat fees became so heated that a flood of "homers" or officials favoring the home team resulted. Small colleges, he said, felt they were unconsciously given the worst when a 50-50 interpretation hung in the balance.

At Lehigh University today Okeson denied that blacklists existed. He refused to comment on the charge that O'Brien had been blackballed by Brown. "All I want to say about that," he added, "is that Dr. O'Brien is an approved official."

Gallico Would Oust Stagg, Pardon Player

Says College of Pacific Coach Had No Right to Oust Boy for Smoking and Then Announce His Name and "Crime" Publicly.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (Spl.).—Prof. Alonzo Stagg, the famous football coach, spied one of his pupils flirting with Beelzebub the other afternoon and promptly gave him the heave-o from the football squad.

STAGG.

He did this with considerable unction and pride, because the pupil happened to be one of his star half backs and the professor indicated he was willing to castigate himself and deprive himself of the services of this star in order to uphold the good old Christian virtues.

Prof. Stagg pilloried the miscreant publicly, gave his name to the newspapers and made a pretty rattling good example of him. The criminal was not, as you might imagine, involved with the dean's daughter, nor had he misappropriated funds, stolen the examination papers, or murdered the instructor in mathematics. He was caught, I glean from the dispatches from the Coast, in flagrante delicto, palming the stub of a cigaroot, from which he was so imprudent as to extract a drag just as the professor shuffled out from behind the Senior Elm.

The professor, a famous Yale end in his day, and then coach at Chicago University for more years than you or I care to remember, is a pillar of the Y. M. C. A. He is now teaching the students of the College of the Pacific, at Stockton, Calif., how to play football, and, incidentally, protecting them from sin and temptation.

Would Restore Him.

If I were the president of that university, I believe that I should recall that football player and restore him to the team with an apology, lecture him intelligently upon the theories of cigarette smoking and athletic training, but would leave the final decision up to him, and then emphatically fire Prof. Stagg.

I well remember once listening uneasily to Prof. Stagg speak at a banquet in Chicago, and he told the story of how, after he had won an important victory for Yale, the enthusiastic rooters hoisted him to their shoulders and lugged him through the streets of New Haven, calling for many boolas, brek-kek-coxes and bulldogs.

Went by Saloon.

The gay parade went by an emporium equipped with swinging doors from which issued alluring and fragrant aromas of hops and malt. Before he was aware of what was happening, the parade suddenly diverged from the street, and the hero found himself inside that chamber of horrors known as a saloon with a stein of bee-double-e-eare thrust into his fingers. Brother steins were raised aloft.

A toast to Alonzo was proposed and full-throated the song broke out, "Here's to good old Yale, drink her down, drink her down * * *" With a fine sweeping gesture, the hero refused the golden liquid, and the procession, its ardor a trifle dampened, moved away from there.

Little Graciousness.

I don't know whether this story is particularly apropos to this ill-tempered article, except it defines the professor as a youth who had much fear and little graciousness in him. And my quarrel with Mr. Stagg is directed along those lines. Again, if I were prexy, I would immediately fire any coach who visited any kind of public humiliation upon a student who is giving his services to the college football team, earnestly, fervently and gratis.

The dismissal of the young man who was caught smoking was an example of incredible churlishness. He might have achieved the desired effect, dismissed the culprit as an example for infraction of training rules, but he might also have notified the newspapers and the authorities that young Whosis had suddenly developed water on the knee or a bad ankle and would be lost to the team for the rest of the year.

Is Outside His Rights.

Mr. Stagg's bun on cigarettes, I suspect, is a species of Muldoonism, and they tell me that whenever the Old Man returns to the Chicago campus, or is around any of his old players, men now in their late 30's and 40's, that they still palm their cigarette butts or stuff them down their pants pockets. Every coach is entitled to schedule his own training rules, and every youngster who plays under him and knows the conditions obligates himself to observe them. But no coach has the right to humiliate a boy for an infraction, or for any other reason, and certainly not for outraging any of the coach's personal fetishes.

There is, I understand, a school for coaches but I doubt whether there are any lecture courses on the ethics and moral obligations of the coaches toward their pupils. I suppose if a tramp athlete who has been bounced out of two or three colleges finally is signed by a coach and college at a reasonable fee, the coach feels entitled to curse him out, bully him, and publicly brand him as a dolt or a coward. But why universities reputed to be seats of learning and culture will tolerate exasperated and petty muckerism on the part of football coaches toward bona fide amateur students, I never will understand.

Sailor Beware Defeats Star Juveniles at Mile in Laurel's Feature Race

First, Second Places to Greentree

Go Quick Folds After Setting Fast Pace; Finishes Third.

By Walter Haight.

THE familiar pink and black of the Greentree Stables, whipped by an autumn breeze, dominated the running of yesterday's oddly named feature race at Laurel. It was "The Canvasback" in which Sailor Beware and Gillie, both representatives of the famous racing establishment, ran first and second, leaving four other promising juveniles to compete for third money. That rather doubtful honor went to Go Quick from the barn of George D. Widener.

The race held more importance than the $1,000 purse assigned to the event, for it was one of the final tests for the historic Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap scheduled at the nearby Maryland course on Saturday.

Is Clocked In 1:38 2-5.

Asked to go the mile route, Sailor Beware turned in a slashing effort, being clocked in the brisk time of 1:38 2-5 while apparently unextended. Gillie, too, impressed the experts for he was not pressed when it was evident the stablemate had the race well within his grasp.

The victory was not without a Washington angle. In Sailor Beware's saddle was Sonny Workman, the Capital boy, and it was well that a rider of Workman's caliber had the mount. At the first turn the colt was bumped wide and it took some masterful manuevering by Workman to keep his charge in the running at this point.

Cubist was first to show in front as the field made the usual dash for the clubhouse turn. Go Quick, the heavily-played Widener colorbearer, was close up and ahead of Sailor Beware, while Gillie, under Jockey Silvio Coucci's handling, brought up the rear.

The pace-setting of Cubist petered out before the backstretch was reached and Go Quick then went in command and many believed that the colt had the stuff to hold the position. However, Sailor Beware, after recovering from the bumping, was sent winging after Go Quick and the pair staged a head-and-head fight to the far turn.

Draws up on Rival.

The long route began to tell on Go Quick at this stage and Sailor Beware drew up on his rival. Entering the stretch, Workman shook up the Greentree colt and he responded with a drive that put him ahead. In the meanwhile, Coucci had roused Gillie, which began to pick up horses at every jump as the final furlong was reached. Workman glanced back, and, assured the horse charging down the stretch was the stablemate, he began pulling up on Sailor Beware. With only the tiring Go Quick near him, Coucci, too, let down on his heavy riding.

The Greentree victory was anticipated. The mutuel machines were loaded with bets on Sailor Beware and Gillie, with the result that they paid only $3.40.

Star Porter Defeated.

Star Porter, which set a new 6-furlongs track record of 1:10 4-5 last time he started, was installed a heavily-played favorite today and was beaten by two lengths in 1:11 3-5 by G. D. Widener's Kawagoe in the 6-furlong Blue Wing Purse. In his record-making sortie Star Porter had beaten Kawagoe a head.

Soon Over, from the Greentree Stable, was third, two lengths back of Star Porter, in the Blue Wing. Kawagoe was second choice in the field of six, paying $5.40.

The Audley Farm's Minna, favorite in a bulky field of 14 2-year-old maiden fillies, paying $3.90, had all the speed over the 6 furlongs of the first race. She finished three lengths in advance of Blandishment, which lasted to take the place by a head from the fast-coming Lealette.

Bright Haven, from the Sage Stable, met the cheapest opposition he has been asked to beat and stepped home a handy winner in the 6-furlong second race. He paid $6.50. Minton finished gamely to nose out Toytime for the place. Candescent, the favorite, was a tiring fourth in the field of seven.

Rozell in Triumph.

Rozell, coupled in the Trainer A. Bundy entry with Semele, won the third race, a 2-mile steeplechase for maiden jumpers. He paid $17.80. Lei, the favorite, was second and Capstan a distant third. Only seven of the field of ten finished. Magnum lost his rider at the ninth jump, pulling up very lame. Pairbypair lost his rider at the seventh fence, but the boy acrobatically remounted, only to be forced to pull up after losing his stirrup. Lavisby was also pulled up.

Coming from behind a fast early pace, the Howe Stable's Flagstone defeated four opponents in the mile and 70 yards fourth race. Garden message, cofavorite with the winner, was second and Wise Advocate overhauled tired horses to be third. Flagstone paid $4.40.

Bobby Jones brought Resurrection from behind in the final sixteenth to nip Xandra, the odds-on favorite, by a head in the mile and a furlong seventh race. Mouthpiece, which killed off Xandra in a suicidal pace duel, was third. Resurrection paid $9.30.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINNA, $3.90, $2.70, $2.80; BLANDISHMENT, $3.40, $3.40; LEALETTE, $13.70.

MINNA, quick to begin and rated in front when going into command, stalled off a bold effort from BLANDISHMENT at the final furlong pole, then drew out swiftly when shaken up approaching the finish. BLANDISHMENT, kept on the outside while holding a contending position, threatened boldly entering the home stretch, but faltered badly after drawing on practically even terms with the winner. LEALETTE, badly outrun in the first half-mile, swung to the outside thereafter and came with a strong rush to close an immense gap. MISS ALPHONSO dropped back soon after the start, worked her way up steadily when in full stride, and finished courageously. FAN went evenly throughout. FAIR VERBENA went forwardly on the inside and had no mishaps. MIRA lacked early speed. ROCK SPRAY had nice speed for a half-mile, then tired.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:09. Off at 2:11½. Winner, Sage Stable's b. c. (3), by Bright Knight—Rock Haven. Trained by P. M. Walker. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:13 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT HAVEN, $6.50, $4.30, $3.50; MINTON, $4.20, $3.30; TOYTIME, $4.70.

BRIGHT HAVEN, going in his best form to race into a brief early lead when midway of the turn, shook off CANDESCENT entering the home stretch, and under strong urging had enough in reserve to meet the closing rush of MINTON. Latter, slower than usual to settle in his stride, swung to the outside at the stretch turn, then closed fast under punishment. TOYTIME, prominent from the beginning, held on willingly when the real test came. CANDESCENT was used up in the early racing and weakened under strong pressure. SMOOTH CROSSING was clear the entire trip, but failed to rally. STEPBROTHER and WESTACTON were outrun.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $1,000; steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward; maidens. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:38. Off at 2:46½. Winner, A. Bundy's b. m. (3), by Sir Martin—Mural Von Der. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $25. Time, 4:03 1-5 (14 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—†ROZELL, $17.80, $4.80, $3.80; LEI, $2.70, $2.90; CAPSTAN, $4.60.

ROZELL, in the thick of contention after the beginning, took command at the fifth fence, was steadied to his fences thereafter, and came away into a clear lead going to the thirteenth jump. LEI, rated forwardly while fencing nicely, failed to rally after making a strong effort to displace the winner after the twelfth jump. CAPSTAN went wide at all of his fences, but was easily best of the others. FAST CHANCE, unruly before the start, was never a dangerous factor at any stage. SEMELE was far back throughout. LAVISBY made a bad landing at the tenth fence. He was pulled up after the twelfth fence when his bridle broke. FAIRBYPAIR was pulled up after his rider lost the use of stirrup irons at the eighth fence. FAIRBYPAIR sulked during the running. MAGNUM lost his rider at the ninth fence.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:16½. Off at 3:17. Winner, Howe Stable's b. or br. h. (5), by Sun Flag—Dear Maria. Trained by P. M. Walker. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:12 3-5, 1:38 3-5, 1:43 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAGSTONE, $4.40, $2.70, $2.30; GARDEN MESSAGE, $3.10, $2.30; WISE ADVOCATE, $4.10.

FLAGSTONE, ably directed by improved handling, raced restrained back of the leaders for the first six furlongs, reached the pacemakers when shaken up, then gained command entering the home stretch to hold GARDEN MESSAGE safe. Latter, strongly reserved for six furlongs, raced CORRYMEELA into defeat, and then held on willingly to the finish. WISE ADVOCATE, trailing far back early, passed tiring horses during the stretch drive. CORRYMEELA held to a slight lead the first seven furlongs while being steadied, but could not rally when the test came. MOUNTAIN ELK weakened after following the pace closely for six furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Canvasback. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:45. Off at 3:47½. Winner, Greentree Stable's b. c. (2), by St. James—Lady Be Good. Trained by W. Brennan. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:38 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—†SAILOR BEWARE, $3.40, $3.20, $2.30; †GILLIE, $3.20, $2.30; GO QUICK, $2.30.

SAILOR BEWARE, kept close to the leaders after reaching the back stretch, moved up to dispute the pace of GO QUICK entering the home stretch, then came out without effort nearing the finish. GILLIE, squeezed back entering the back stretch, went to the outside in the last half-mile while bettering his position, then closed fast in the final drive. Coucci did not attempt to run down his stablemate. GO QUICK, forced wide at the first turn, went to the front while full of run, was steadied until forced to a drive, then could not stay. BROWN TWIG met with slight interference at the first turn, recovered, and showed a good effort. PITTER PAT was held safe. CUBIST weakened gradually.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Blue Wing. For 3-year-old and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:13. Off at 4:15½. Winner, G. D. Widener's ch. c. (3), by Bickle—Kawa. Trained by W. F. Mulholland. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:46 3-5, 1:11 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KAWAGOE, $5.40, $2.60, $2.50; STAR PORTER, $2.40, $2.30; SOON OVER, $4.90.

KAWAGOE, displaying high speed from the beginning, resisted strong efforts from HAPPY GO in the first half-mile, was shaken up inside the closing furlong, and drew out swiftly nearing the finish. STAR PORTER, steadied along in a prominent position early, was sent to the outside after being bothered by HAPPY GO at the turn out of the back stretch, then, carrying a strong bid midway of the home stretch, but was held perfectly when Meade shook the winner up. SOON OVER was strongly ridden the entire trip. GALLANT MAC was outrun early, but finished stoutly. HAPPY GO had good speed for five furlongs, then weakened. GRAND ROCK was outmatched.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:46. Off at 4:48. Winner, W. Sachsenmaier's br. or blk. g. (4), by Pay Play—Ann Earn. Trained by P. Reuter. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14 1-5, 1:40, 1:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RESURRECTION, $9.30, $3.00, $2.60; XANDRA, $2.50, $2.20; MOUTHPIECE, $2.70.

RESURRECTION, forced to race along on his own courage until well into his stride, came around the leaders at the stretch turn and, then finishing in resolute fashion, was up in the last sixteenth. XANDRA, kept in near pursuit of MOUTHPIECE from the beginning, gained a brief lead inside the closing furlong, but was unable to last. MOUTHPIECE, rated off to the front while full of run, was steadied, saved ground all the way, but weakened approaching the finish. KINDACORN, as usual slow to get going, secured racing room on the inside when bettering her position, but could not menace the leaders. RETRIBUTION was never dangerous. CALORIC raced around at the first turn and went evenly thereafter.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:11. Off at 5:15. Winner, E. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REPEAL, $10.60, $6.90, $3.90; DONA DULCIN (field), $20.20, $7.80; FRUMPER, $4.20.

REPEAL outran his field to the first turn, was rated in front while saving ground, responded nicely when challenged at the stretch turn, and just lasted long enough to withstand DONA DULCIN. Latter went forwardly placed in the early running, came willingly when put to a drive, and finished wearing the winner down steadily. FRUMPER, slow to get into full stride, improved his position on the outside and was going gamely at the end. GENERAL LEJEUNE entered contention with a rush at the far turn, but weakened after reaching the home stretch. ROYAL LASSIE, slow to find her stride, circled her field to close full of run. HOLLAND raced well. JUSTA TEACHER went strongly for the first seven furlongs, then tired. FRESH AIR stopped badly in the last half-mile.

Associated Press Photos.

At the Post . . .

Dear Al: Laurel Race Track.

Lest we forget: The steeplechase lovers have their innings today . . . with the Chevy Chase, annual Laurel fixture, the day's feature . . . it was first contested in 1911 . . . when Black Bridge, a 6-year-old, won . . . Huffy holds the record for the race . . . ran the 2-mile course in 3:52 in 1931 with Johnny Pierce doing the riding . . . many believe the mark will fall today, barring rain or mishap . . . the paddock auction is scheduled for this morning at 10:30 o'clock . . . if you have never seen such an event, it will be worth your while to go out to the track early . . . it is reported that nine claims were made for Xandra yesterday . . . and W. Zuker took the horse to a new stable . . . when more than one claim is made, those interested draw pills for the horse . . . and sometimes they win a dead one . . . because a horse claimed is the property of the claimant from the time he leaves the paddock to go to the post . . . but the old owner gets the purse if the horse wins . . . Bennings, Inc., did not have five winners yesterday. BILL.

First race—Erebus, if memory serves, ran a nice race in New York last summer behind St Stephens. In his first start here, the son of Canter turned on the heat to set a sizzling pace in a distance race, only to fold in the final stages. Asked to sprint today, he may gather the main money. Some Good and Bally Bay appear best of the others.

Second race—Truly Yours and Tool Box, prominent figures in the three-horse disqualification the last time they met, battle again today. As I did before, I'm straddling both with Truly Yours. Unlawful gets one Bennings vote for third.

Third race—Tanaringo won so impressively here last week that it is difficult to pass him up even among these star timbertoppers. Smiley, who rode a rather stupid race in his first outing, came back to put up a perfect job. Jungle King and Canandaigua are both formidable fencers and appear to be ready for money appearances.

Fourth race—Stegal is asked to go the route for the first time. Has been closing resolutely in sprints and looks like a distance horse. Judge Blake has made up much ground on occasions and seems to fit in well here. Insomnia to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Dark Hope comes off sprints and is another which should appreciate a distance of ground. Has a smacking of class that may serve him in good stead when the form runners get through doing their stuff. Identify and Keep Out for the place and show.

Sixth race—Olamay deserves another chance. Can better that last effort. Dunfern and Polo Bar are at home at the route and will be dangerous if the right money is down.

Seventh race—Chatterdo, overlooked in the betting, barely missed stealing a purse. Well suited here and a victory would not surprise me. Big Show and Potion will be ready if the top one makes mistakes.

W. & L.-V. P. I. and Virginia-V. M. I. Contests to Provide Gala Saturday for Lexington

Game Times Are Not in Conflict

Capacity Crowds Likely to See Morning and Afternoon Tilts.

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 23 (Spl.).—A rare dish of Virginia football will be served Old Dominion fans in double portions here Saturday, when the University of Virginia eleven comes to grips with V. M. I. and Washington and Lee with V. P. I.

The games will not conflict with one another since the W. and L.-V. P. I. contest is scheduled for 11 a. m. and V. M. I. and Virginia line up for 2:30 o'clock, and both are expected to attract capacity crowds.

Two Roanoke half backs, Wayt Clark and Meredith Urick, were V. M. I.'s big ground gainers last week against Richmond, and Cadet supporters look to them to carry the brunt of the attack on Virginia. Urick, a senior, was supposed to be a dash man exclusively, and good only for skirting ends, but against the Spiders he proved his all-around value with aggressive cracks into the line.

Johnson May Play.

Virginia may be seriously handicapped by the loss of Capt. Tommy Johnson, its 197-pound triple-threat full back, who is recovering from injuries suffered in the Dartmouth game. Efforts are being made to get him in shape by Saturday.

Some idea of Johnson's value can be gleaned from the statistics. He gained 387 yards in 73 plays through the line; carried the ball 180 yards on end runs; accepted forward passes for gains totaling 146 yards and threw five passes for gains of 80 yards.

Washington and Lee is confident of stopping Tech after its fine showing against Princeton last week. Two missed points after touchdown caused Coach Tex Tilson's men to lose their opportunity of scoring one of the season's biggest upsets.

Primed for Generals.

Tech points for the Generals knowing full well that it can boost its position in the grid world several notches with a victory Saturday. The team came dangerousy near upsetting a larger and stronger Maryland aggregation last week and can be counted on for 60 minutes of real football.

Virginia Poly will be on the lookout for Sam Mattox's passes, which kept Princeton on its heels last week, and a special squad of men has been detailed to guard Charley Smith, to whom Mattox usually tosses.

Purdue Regulars Idle In Scrimmage Session

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 23 (AP).—The Purdue football regulars returned to uniform today, but did not engage in the scrimmage with the freshmen. Duane Purvis still complained of a stiffness in his injured ankle, which he hopes will work out before the Carnegie Tech game Saturday.

Three Good Reasons for Three Teams' Bowling Dominance

New Pool Sure Thing —For the Promoters

FOOTBALL pool promoters, hard hit on recent Saturdays, have devised a new and more profitable formula for mulcting Washington fans.

The little white slips, which gave the fans their choice of games at odds ranging from 9 to 1 for picking four winners, to 50 to 1 for picking seven, have been withdrawn from circulation by the city's larger operators.

In their stead, promoters are flooding the city with a new type of pool which they can manipulate at will with little risk of losses. Thus they have abandoned the old system, which gave fans a chance of winning, for a sure thing—for the promoters. Barring sensational reverses of form by the teams in the Saturday games, the operators can count all bets as sheer profit.

6-Team Combinations.

The new pool is based on a list of 16 teams and sold in six-team combinations. Each pool ticket sells for 60 cents and buyers are tempted with an offer of $600 as the capital prize to the holder of the ticket whose six teams score the greatest total of points in Saturday's games.

The ticket buyer has no choice of the six teams stamped on his ticket. The promoters select from the list of 16 teams, the six-team combination for each individual ticket. Thus the buyers entrust their chances to the honesty of the pool operators.

Chances Ruined.

In making up the combinations, the promoters can include one woefully weak team, which does not figure to score a point, among five strong teams, thus ruining the chances of the ticket holder. Last week, tickets appeared in which two of the teams among the six stamped on a ticket, played each other, thus virtually nullifying all chance that both teams would score frequently.

By withholding from the tickets the choice combinations which can easily be figured in advance, the pool operators stand little chance to lose. The winning ticket, which includes all the highest-scoring teams, can be easily shelved by the promoters before distribution of the pool tickets begins.

Indiantown Again Wins At 'Gansett

Most Consistent Plater Captures His Eighth Straight Race.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, Pawtuckett, R. I., Oct. 23 (AP).—Percy M. Pike's Indiantown continued to maintain his record as the most consistent plater in the country when the 4-year-old chestnut gelding scored his eighth consecutive triumph here this afternoon before about 5,000 spectators.

The son of Trojan out of Galatia captured the fifth race, a six-furlong dash for $1,200, from a field of five rivals and won easily by three lengths over a sloppy track. After having some early competition from R. W. Collins' Old Reb, which eventually finished second, with Keneland stud's Disaster taking the show.

Indiantown now is unbeaten in his six New England starts; three at Rockingham and three at Narragansett. His triumph today brought him even with the modern mark for cheaper horses, that being turned in a year ago by J. D. Mikel's Burning Up.

Jockey Jimmy Lynch had a field day in the mud kicking home three winners. He rode A. A. Baroni's Sun Cloister, a 65 to 100 favorite in the first, J. D. and H. A. Clouson's Cloudet, a 4 to 1 shot in the fourth, and Marchant and Guy Berger's Unknown Soldier, a 14 to 1 choice in the sixth. Sun Cloister and Indiantown were the only two favorites to win.

Walker Quits as Cubs' Head; Sells His Stock

Chicago, Oct. 23 (AP).—William Walker resigned as president of the Chicago Cubs tonight and sold all his stock in the team to Philip Wrigley, principal owner of the club, who will be elected to the presidency at a meeting Friday.

No reason was announced for Walker's sudden resignation after a year at the helm. He succeeded the late William L. Veeck as president last January.

Schiller Wins Golf Title.

Salisbury, Md., Oct. 23 (Spl.).—The Green Hill Golf and Country Club title was won by Joe Schiller, who took a 36-hole match from John Reane, 6 and 4.

Colonials Face Heavier Foe In Deacons

WAKE FOREST'S back field may not outgain the ball carriers of George Washington Friday night, but it will carry more weight than the Colonials' ball carriers by a comfortable margin—if that is any consolation.

Weights announced for the Deacon back field read something like the avoirdupois clinging to a wrestler's frame. Tex Edens, half back, tips the Fairbanks at an even 200 pounds; Lefty Holton, his running mate, eats well enough to maintain a 180-pound average; Tony Stern, the full back, is a mere stripling of 190 pounds, and Walter Kitchen, the quarter back, comes in at 175 pounds.

The back field is bigger than the line, though George Washington scouts admit the line is no prep school outfit, and all, things considered, is a good working knowledge of the reason back fields were tacked onto football teams.

Wake Forest has won three games and lost two this season, and naturally hopes to add to its prestige by upsetting the downtown school Friday night. It was reported yesterday that the G. W. freshmen, using Wake Forest plays, split the varsity wide open and romped through for more touchdowns than the varsity will score this season.

Joe Kaufman, a 165-pound half back from New York, led the yearlings in their assault on the varsity, and did so well the coaches were only mildly displeased with the older boys' work.

The varsity later tried out three new plays which will not be used Friday unless necessary, but which were designed expressly for the Vanderbilt game. Leemans, Benefield and Parrish did not get into action, but will be kept out of actual combat to facilitate their recovery from Tulsa-game injuries.

3 Men Out, Holy Cross Seeks Replacements

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 23 (AP).—Dr. Edward N. Anderson, head coach at Holy Cross, looked around today for players to replace the injured Capt. Buzz Harvey, Len Avery and Ed Britt. Dave Gavin, a sophomore, occupied Harvey's tackle position while Johnny O'Conner was at full back in place of Britt. Red Daughters and Tom Kelley alternated at end.

Hamilton, N. Y., Oct. 23 (AP).—Colgate's famous passing pair, Les Hart and John Orsi, now assistant coaches, joined up with the scrubs to test the regulars and completed several long tosses, one for 75 yards.

Movies Shown at Annapolis Show Terps Beaten Legally

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 23 (AP).—A close scrutiny of motion pictures showing the disputed Navy touchdown in their game with the University of Maryland today convinced some observers here that the play was legal.

The play, which came in the second quarter, was a forward pass from Buzz Borries to Bob Mandelkorn, Navy end. Mandelkorn, near the sidelines, took the pass and went over for a touchdown.

Since the game, which the Navy won, 16 to 13, it has been contended that motion pictures exhibited at College Park showed that Mandelkorn stepped outside as he took the pass.

The pictures shown here today were taken from the Naval Academy Armory. The play was run off on the screen and then the camera was slowed down to show each step made by Mandelkorn, stopping completely when his feet struck the ground.

When the Navy player is about to take the pass his left foot is raised, and from an angle it appears as if he is about to step outside. But the slow motion revealed that when the foot struck the ground it was just inside the sideline. His next steps took him farther into the playing field and over the goal line.

Gridiron Field Goal Stages Big Comeback

THE field goal, long a lost football scoring art, has staged so marked a comeback this season that five nationally known teams took to this footpath for their winning margins last week, the Associated Press reported.

On the Pacific Coast, the University of California won from the University of California at Los Angeles by this slender edge. Stanford booted across the same slim advantage over San Francisco University. Both scores came in the dying minutes of tight contests.

In the Midwest, Ohio State whipped Colgate by a goal from the field, while Centenary College of Louisiana won from Texas University with a late kick. Georgetown University turned back William and Mary College of Virginia in a contest here that was literally a game of field goals.

Four times Georgetown drove down within William and Mary's 20-yard zone only to have its running attack stemmed. As many times Full Back Joseph Meglin dropped back and tried for field goals from placement.

Meglin's first boot was his only successful one but it kept clear Georgetown's record of no defeats. Nor have the Hoyas been scored upon this year. The Butte, Mont., boy's second attempt fell just inches short of the cross bar, while another was wide and the last partially blocked.

It is improbable that as many field goal tries will be made in any other game this campaign and that any kicker will try for two field goals in the same period as did Meglin.

The removal of the goal posts 10 yards behind the final stripe and the opening up of the offensive through forward and lateral passes and end sweeps have brought about higher scoring totals and most quarter backs have elected to gamble for the touchdown and its double value rather than the field goal.

Johnnies Hope To Take A. U. In Stride

Point for Johns Hopkins and Hampden-Sydney Games Later.

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 23 (AP).—The St. John's College football squad, pointing for the Johns Hopkins and Hampden-Sidney games, hopes to win the clash with the American University of Washington, here Saturday, without undue trouble.

Head Coach M. Talbot (Tody) Riggs is trying to time his offensive plays better, and to speed up the interference, which at times has blocked the ball carriers.

"They do not tuck it away," he said. "In the Swarthmore game, Bossert was carrying the pigskin under the wrong arm most of the time. Both are good backs, but carelessness with the ball leads to fumbling when hit hard by tacklers."

Although not making any especial preparations for American University, Riggs is not taking the Washington team lightly.

Ross Fight Report Denied.

Chicago, Oct. 23 (AP).—Reports that Barney Ross would defend his lightweight championship in New York's Madison Square Garden in December were denied today by the champion's managers, Sam Pian and Art Winch.

Mrs. Lowry Upsets Miss Hollins, 1 Up, in 19 Holes in Women's Western Tourney

Illinois Star Wins Uphill Struggle

First Round Otherwise Drab, With Choices Scoring Easily.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23 (AP).—Playing in the first Women's Western championship of her career, Mrs. Tim G. Lowry, Highland Park, Ill., shunted a former National titleholder, Miss Marian Hollins, out of the thirty-second annual tournament today over the Los Angeles Country Club's rolling fairways.

MISS ROBINSON

The Middle-Westerner, who barely qualified in the playoff for thirty-second place yesterday, won 1 up on the nineteenth after an uphill struggle with her veteran Santa Cruz, Calif., opponent who captured the country's crown 13 years ago.

It was the only important upset of an otherwise drab first-round of match play. Paced by Miss Lucile Robinson, Des Moines, Iowa, the defender, the rest of the favorites enjoyed easy sailing. Miss Robinson took a 7 and 6 victory from Miss Grace Douglas, Los Angeles, after leading 4 up at the turn. It was the most one-sided score of the day.

Mrs. Cheney Winner.

Mrs. L. D. Cheney, San Gabriel, Calif., reigning California champion and twice winner of the Western title, eliminated Mrs. Milton Bernard, Oakland, 6 and 5, while Miss Dorothy Traung, San Francisco, who recently went to the finals of the Women's National Championship, annexed an easy win from Miss Marian Leachman, Berkeley, Calif., 5 and 4. She shot a 40 on the outgoing nine and had pars from that point to the end of the match.

The other outstanding entrant, Mrs. Philip Atwood, Chicago, encountered more difficulty than the rest before she won, 2 up, from Miss Barbara Thompson, San Francisco.

Outscores Her Rival.

Another mild upset was recorded earlier in the day when Miss Jane Douglas, Los Angeles City champion, went down to defeat before Mrs. C. J. Woerner, Los Angeles, 6 and 5. The best nine-hole score of the day was recorded by Mrs. George Lifur, Los Angeles, who shot a 39, one over par out, to build up a 6-up lead over Mrs. John Wittig, Culver City, Calif. Mrs. Lifur, a former State champion, went on to win, 6 and 5.

The pairings promised little in the way of fireworks tomorrow. Miss Robinson is scheduled to meet Mrs. Woerner; Mrs. Cheney and Mrs. C. C. Carey, Culver City, Calif., for an opponent; Miss Traung was matched with Mrs. E. T. Nicholas, Los Angeles, and Mrs. Atwood drew Miss Barbara Ransom, Stockton, Calif.

The results of first-round match play:

Mrs. C. C. Carey, Hollywood, defeated Miss Betty Boterill, Salt Lake City, 4 and 3.

Mrs. C. J. Woerner, Los Angeles, defeated Miss Jane Douglas, San Gabriel, Calif., 6 and 5.

Mrs. W. E. Shepherd, Los Angeles, defeated Miss Edna Johnson, Los Angeles, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Kenneth Carter, San Gabriel, Calif., defeated Mrs. E. C. Kaw, Culver City, Calif., 4 and 3.

Mrs. E. T. Nicholas, Los Angeles, defeated Miss Barbara Basthein, Los Angeles, 4 and 3.

Mrs. Greer Lifur, Los Angeles, defeated Mrs. John Wittig, Culver City, Calif., 6 and 5.

Mrs. Mark Steele, San Gabriel, Calif., defeated Mrs. A. O. St. Clair, San Francisco, 3 and 2.

Fame Fleets

Bogan, Tech Game Hero, Finds Self Stranded.

GEORGE BOGAN, one of the heroes of Tech's 45-to-0 win over Central yesterday, found himself stranded in his football uniform miles from his own school after the game.

Bogan intercepted two passes to lead up to two touchdowns and scored one himself on a brilliant 46-yard run in the third period. He received his share of congratulations, et cetera, after the game, but missed out on transportation back to Tech in the confusion.

Bogan also was a member of Tech's great mile relay team of last spring.

Navy Game Mistakes Keep Columbia Busy

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—The faults that cropped up in the Navy game provided the material for Columbia's practice. The Lions spent most of their time on the defense in a scrimmage with the second team and specialized in passes on the attack. Al Erhardt, injured end, got his first taste of contact work.

Bobbit's Dawn Win First in Field Meet

Carolina Entries Capture Honors at Blacksburg.

Bobbit's Dawn, owned and handled by Louis M. Bobbit, of Winston-Salem, won first place in the members' Derby for pointers and setters whelped after January 1, 1933. Jake Seavier Joe, owned and handled by Dr. W. S. Spicer, of Winston-Salem, was second, and Noria's Rose, owned and handled by W. P. Few, of Roanoke, was third.

Running of the open stake, carrying a purse of $210, was started this morning. Four high class dogs have found, and handled birds perfectly. Winners will be named tomorrow.

Episcopal Due Hard Game Saturday

St. Christopher's Eleven Invades Alexandria; Other Sports News.

ALEXANDRIA, Oct. 23 (Spl.).—Episcopal High's gridmen were given a stiff workout today in preparation for its game Saturday with the highly-touted St. Christopher team, of Richmond.

Most of the drill was spent in defense work, especially against end-sweeps. The practice was closed with a forward passing session with Hoxton doing most of the throwing.

There has been some misunderstanding as to starting time of Episcopal's home games. The Saturday game and all those following will be started at 3:15 p. m.

The Pirates, local 135-pound champions, will attempt to make it two straight in the 150-pound division Sunday, when they travel to Lorton to meet the eleven representing that institution. Coach Owens has called several important drills for his proteges during the remainder of the week.

The St. Rita's will meet the Circle Athletic Club, of Washington, Sunday, on Hunton Field. This will be the inaugural for the locals. Coach Kelley had all players out tonight for a signal drill. Another important drill will be held Thursday night on George Mason Field.

The Alexandria Fraters will meet the Coca Cola Athletic Club, of Annapolis, in Sunday's headliner, at Baggett's Stadium. The Coca Cola Athletic Club was formerly the Arundel Athletic Club, and local fans will remember the thrilling tie game of last year.

Coach McMillin, Ill, But Sticks to Squad

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 23 (AP).—Suffering from nervous indigestion, Coach Bo McMillin today sat in an armchair on the sidelines directing the practice of his Indiana football squad. With an open date Saturday, McMillin plans to devote considerable time to developing reserve material. Roy Eads, sophomore back, returned to practice after being out with injuries.

New Deal Seen For Davis Cup Forces

Allison and Three Youths Are Included on List of Candidates.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (AP).—The prospects of a New Deal, concentrated on rugged youth, for the 1935 United States Davis Cup squad loomed as a definite possibility today when Walter Merrill Hall, president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, named eight likely candidates for the next international team.

The list is headed by Wilmer Allison, the Texan who was rejected for the 1934 team and then almost won the National Championship, besides the four members of the 1934 team, George M. Lott, jr., Sidney B. Wood, jr., Frank X. Shields, Lester Stoefen, and three youngsters, Gene Mako and Donald Budge of the Pacific Coast and Frankie Parker, Lawrenceville, N. J., schoolboy.

Virtually Sure Bets.

Barring off-season injuries, they're virtually sure bets to be invited to the team's training site in Haverford, Pa., late next spring when America's international force will be organized and a team selected.

"It makes one of the first times in international play in this country that youngsters like Mako, Budge and Parker have been given cup consideration so early in their careers. It also means that the man given the responsibility of guiding the team will have a considerably larger squad to select the four-man troupe from than R. Norris Williams had this year.

"Following our custom," Hall declared, "we will arrange practice and some competition for our candidates during the winter months.

Especial Attention.

"In the case of Budge, Mako and Parker they'll be given especial attention. Those youngsters are coming along fast and are good prospects for the future if they're not ready now."

Hall indicated that he would not be surprised if Williams declined to accept the nonplaying captaincy again.

"Handling the Davis Cup team requires a great deal of time and carries with it a lot of responsibilities and worries," Hall said.

Hall wouldn't venture to suggest a succeesor to Williams, but he spiked grapevine reports that a playing captain might be named, such as Allison.

Eastman and Little in Line For Medal

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (AP).—The most highly prized of all amateur athletic awards, the James E. Sullivan Memorial Medal for outstanding achievement and character, is likely to go to the Far West this year, with Benjamin Bangs Eastman and William Lawson Little, jr., ranking well on top of the field of candidates so far put forward in a Nation-wide poll.

Competition for the medal, which is awarded annually by the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States on a voting basis, has been reopened to include representatives in all American amateur sports for 1934. Last year, when Glenn Cunningham nosed out his mile-running rival, Bill Bonthron, by a single vote candidates were limited to the branches of athletics controlled by the A. A. U.

May Follow Jones.

Now, however, with the contest wide open again, Little has a chance to gain the same distinction that went to Bob Jones, who was voted the Sullivan medal in 1930 after completing his "grand slam" in golf. The Californian registered only a "little slam" this year, by capturing both the British and American amateur golf championships, but his achievement ranks among the greatest for 1934 in any branch of amateur competition.

Another of Stanford University's athletic sons, Eastman, appears to have romped into an early lead in the preliminary test of opinion.

Nominations do not close until November 15.

"Blazin' Ben" has a strong weight of evidence in his support. His footracing comeback this year was so startlingly effective, both at home and abroad, that he wound up by having five world records officially credited to him, ranging from his 440-yard mark of 46.4 made in 1932 to his amazing 880 in 1:48.4 made at Princeton last June. He qualifies strongly, too, under the requirements for "character, manliness and leadership," which carry as much importance as ability in the Sullivan medal contest.

Achievements Stood Out.

Eastman's achievements stood out in a campaign that included some amazing track and field feats by such super-stars as Cunningham and Bonthron, Jack Torrance and Glen Hardin, the Louisiana State record-breakers. Cunningham's heat in setting a new mile record unodubtedly will mean a substantial vote for the great Kansas runner again, but it would be contrary to precedent and the main idea to "reelect" him.

Other names put forward, from which a list of ten will be selected for the final voting, include Jack Medica, of Seattle, holder of three men's National swimming titles; Virginia Van Wie, three times American women's golf champion; Lenore Kight, of Pittsburgh, women's swimming star; Helen Jacobs, three-time National women's tennis champion; Winston Guest, Eastern polo ace, and Clarence DeMar, the daddy of American marathon runners.

Tricks Ahead

Violet to Use Deception Against Georgetown.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (Spl.).—New York University will endeavor to offset Georgetown's weight advantage of at least 10 pounds per man by speed and deception when the two elevens clash here next Saturday. This was indicated today when Coach Mal Stevens spent most of a long practice session perfecting an offensive bulwarked with fast, deceptive plays.

Coach Stevens also analyzed for his players Georgetown's formations brought back by Assistant Coach Arthur H. Roberts, who scouted the Hoyas last Saturday against William and Mary, using Georgetown plays. The second team then was sent against the varsity in a scrimmage session.

Special attention paid to Carl Blanke, substitute full back, in the drill gave credence to the report that Ed Smith, stellar Violet full back, may not be used against Georgetown because of a knee injury he aggravated against Lafayette last Saturday.

30 Are Entered In Rock Creek Title Golf

Turkey Tourney to Open on Nov. 5; Altrock Defends Crown.

MORE than 30 golfers already have entered the last important municipal tournament of the year—the Turkey championship of the year—the Turkey championship scheduled to open at Rock Creek on November 5.

Nick Altrock, Washington baseball coach-comedian, who won last year's tournament in a walk, entered yesterday. Because of his duties with the ball club Altrock had to forego all public links events this year.

Although they have not entered as yet, John Connelly, District municipal champion; Claude Rippy, runner-up, winner of the Rock Creek Spring and Uptown tournament; Harold Bowers, Anacostia champion; Bradley Burrows, Ralph Bennie, Harlan Will and Andy Oliveri are expected to be among the 100-odd participants.

Two Days Match Play.

Two days will be devoted to match play, November 5 and 6. The players will be bracketed in flights and all matches must be completed by November 23. Turkeys will be awarded the winners and runners-up in each flight. A special flight of eight women will be a feature of this year's tournament. Mrs. Nick Altrock, wife of the champion, is entered.

The following already have entered:

Joe Rogers, Girard Rogers, Don Sullivan, Tom Cook, Bob Youst, S. C. Wimsatt, Bob Marks, Ed Dudley, Bob Sibley, Betty Keeler, A. A. Bourwine, Bill Leapley, Buddy Sharkey, Mrs. William Huber, Everett Garlem, Mrs. Wilda Martin, Miss Ethel Wright, Nick Altrock, Earl Jamison, Herman Allen, Pat Axtell, J. R. Small, S. W. Chase, J. C. McGrew, Neill Turner, Mrs. Nick Altrock, Mrs. Helena Abel, B. Harry Graham, George Marlowe, Ed Burns and C. L. Wolford.

Only one match was played in the Siamese Cup tournament at Chevy Chase yesterday. I. A. D. Wilson-Young, 10 handicap player, eliminated Dr. H. G. Moulton, 12 handicap player, 2 up. Three days have been allotted for each match, and first-round matches will be competed today.

Meanwhile, at Kenwood, the golfers continued to turn in scores for the Hirosi Saito Trophy donated by the Japanese Ambassador, himself an ardent golfer. Sunday is the last day. It is a 72-hole tournament. Charlie Cole added a 77 to his subpar 70 of Sunday. Bernie Dennell, wtih 72—75—75, is entrenched in a strong position, while Charlie Avant is next with 74—73. Toby Tyler has 74—76.

Al Houghton, Kenwood pro, returned from Virginia Beach, Va., yesterday. He shot the Cavalier course in 68. The Cavalier course will be the scene of an important money tournament next March.

In a round at Kenwood in the afternoon Houghton scored a 71 while playing with Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase pro. Barnett did a 74. Houghton startled his comrades by reaching the 531-yard thirteenth hole in two blows. It was the third time he ever had done this. He scored a birdie 4.

The Optimists Club will hold a tournament Friday at Indian Springs course.

Over at Anacostia a number of flight finals will be played tomorrow. Carl Jost meets Les Madison in the third; Ray Tawney engages J. R. Smith in the fourth and L. Spenneberg opposes R. M. Carr in the seventh. Harold Bowers won the top flight last week by defeating Herman Allen, 1 up.

Three-Hour Workout Is Held at Princeton

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 23 (AP).—The Princeton squad went back to fundamentals during a three-hour workout today while the scrubs practiced Cornell plays they will use later to test the varsity defense.

Garry Levan, recovered from his knee injury, was in the lineup and probably will start Saturday.

Deans Finding Last Week Hardest

Dizzy and Daffy to Make Themselves Scarce After Fling on Stage.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 23 (AP).—Tired of "fiddling around the country playing night games and taking chances," baseball's Dean brothers—"me and Paul"—finished their post-world series barnstorming jaunt today with great sighs of relief.

Only one more week, to be spent in vaudeville along Broadway, and the star hurling duo who gave the St. Louis Cardinals a world baseball championship will head for home, and you can take it from "Dizzy," the elder, "We're gonna make ourselves scarce."

Paul, the 21-year-old marvel who with his brother piled up 49 National League victories this year, took occasion to spike reports his pitching wing was in bad shape from working in the exhibition tour which they closed today in a game against stars of the National Professional Negro League.

Says Arm Is Good.

"Nothing to it," said Paul. "I did get a few pains from pitching night baseball, but listen—I know that our living depends on our arms and neither of us is going to take any long chances. I'm fine again and I want to stay that way."

Brother "Dizzy" broke in to say: "It's a great relief to get this thing over with. We have too much at stake, me and Paul. We've had a good time, though."

"Your Pirates certainly did part my hair for me all season. I reckon you know I didn't win a game from them."

Remember Hoyt's Feat.

He recalled the calssic two hitter turned in by Waite Hoyt, of the Pirates, against the Cardinals in the closing days of the race and with a glint in his eye said he would "get square with him and a few others who were bringing their punches from the floor in that next to the last game in St. Louis."

Stocks Drift Lower Again In Dull Session

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Financial markets continued to amble along dull and somewhat irregular pathways today as fresh speculative incentives failed to make their appearance.

Most stock traders hugged the safety sidelines, and the so-called pivotal issues barely got out of a fractional range.

Wall Street seemed to be waiting for "something" to happen that might stir the trading pulse. Hopes were expressed that this stimulus would come from Washington tomorrow when President Roosevelt addresses the American Bankers Association convention.

Turnover Still Light.

The listlessness of trading in stocks was exemplified by a total turnover of 543,230 shares, which was about 30,000 under yesterday's unimpressive aggregate. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected issues registered a decline of two-tenths of a point at 71.4.

The foreign exchange markets were again highly erratic, with the British pound registering further substantial gains in terms of the dollar, while the European gold currencies pointed downward. Continental fears for the gold standard, although not particularly disturbing to banking quarters here, were said to be causing transfers of capital abroad.

In line with the sagging tendencies displayed by the gold exchanges, the heaviness of gold mining stocks was an unsettling factor in today's share transactions. Noranda Mines, McIntyre and Dome dropped about 2 points each in relatively active dealings. U. S. Smelting, Howe Sound and American Smelting were only slightly lower.

Some Stock Gainers.

There were a few outstanding stock gainers. Among these was the preferred issue of McCrory Stores, which spurted 7¼ points to a new 1934 high at 47. American Can, Continental Can and Eastman Kodak drew followings for gains of around a point each. Standard Oil of New Jersey was a bit firmer despite the implications of the current gasoline price war. Case, American Telephone, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Consolidated Gas and many others were about unchanged to slightly higher.

Owens-Illinois Glass jumped 3 points, but Hazel-Atlas Glass lost as much. Most of the rails, including Santa Fe and Union Pacific, were down fractionally to around a point as carloadings and earnings were not conducive to any great optimism for this category. Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck eased and there was some selling in the aircraft issues.

The fact that today was the fifth anniversary of the 1929 stock market holocaust served to stir only regretful memories in the minds of those operators who saw large fortunes vanish in the space of a few hours.

Rubber Consumption Gains.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Well-informed spot rubber brokers estimate domestic consumption during the current year at around 450,000 tons, compared with 405,687 consumed in the preceding year and close to the 1929 consumption of 472,000 tons.

Goods Markets.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Cotton goods in the finished state moved fairly well today and considerable forward delivery business has been placed on ginghams, denims, worksuit and workshirt materials, and lines of packaged goods for holiday distribution. Wool goods sales were better, especially in men's wear lines. Sales of 150 and 300 denier viscose rayon yarns have been large, weavers requiring them for acetate warp dress materials. Silk goods and burlaps were quiet.

Reduction in Price of Crude Oil by Small Buyers Seen as Symptom of Breakdown in Production Control.

(Special Correspondence to The Post.)

New York, Oct. 23.—Reduction in the price of crude oil from a top of $1 a barrel to 60 cents, posted by three small buyers in east Texas yesterday, is an ominous symptom of an impending breakdown in the whole elaborate machinery of production control.

Large oil companies indicated today that they do not intend to follow suit for at least a week. During that time, they plan to abide by the gentlemen's agreement they have with the Administration of maintaining the dollar per barrel buying price on high grade crude, while the Government bends every effort toward checking the flow of "hot oil," produced in excess of allowable, from the extremely prolific east Texas field. "Hot oil" output is estimated today by leading companies at 125,000 barrels daily, far above the 55,000-barrel estimate made by the Texas Railroad Commission.

The basic difficulty in the petroleum situation is the fact that the east Texas field, the most extensive yet discovered, enjoys so low a production cost that it is profitable for operators there to flood the markets of the country with low-priced crude, "hot oil" from this field, offered at 30 to 50 cents a barrel. This oil goes into important markets and is sold as gasoline in competition with the product of $1 crude, produced within allowables and determined by estimated demand. The crude produced in excess of the Federal allotment, or "hot oil," obviously represents output in excess of such estimated demand. Independent gasoline dealers who sell gasoline made from this cheap "hot oil" must cut prices, therefore, in order to move their product.

Such Price-Cutting Causes Shift in Sales Volume.

Such price-cutting causes a shift in sales volume from the major companies to the independents. The former have now launched price wars in many localities in order to recapture the "gallonage" they have thus lost. Exclusive of taxes, gasoline prices have been cut 25 to more than 50 per cent in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, northern New Jersey and elsewhere.

Almost hourly, new reports of gasoline price slashes arrive from various points where car owners are enabled to fill their gasoline tanks at the lowest cost in quite a long time.

With high-grade crude selling at the fields at $1 a barrel, since September of last year, and with gasoline prices being slashed right and left in a series of price wars rapidly becoming Nation-wide in scope, it seems only a matter of days before the crude oil price structure must give way too. The cuts by the three small east Texas buyers yesterday may thus prove the opening wedge for a general reduction.

But the Federal Administration remains committed in production control in the petroleum industry, even though it is withdrawing support from such an economic policy elsewhere. In the interests of the conservation of a vital and limited natural resource, in point of fact, a better case can probably be made for regulating petroleum output to current demand than for doing so for any other product.

Federal control of petroleum output under the code of fair competition, buttressed by special provisions of the NIRA, has thus far failed to have the desired effect, some oil men blame this on insufficient State cooperation, because of jealousy over Federal infiltration into this field. Others blame the courts, which have given insufficient support to the efforts of Federal agencies to enjoin production or shipment in interstate commerce of crude oil allegedly produced in excess of allotments in east Texas.

Federal Efforts to Curb Hot Oil Cargo Landings.

Much of the gasoline produced from "hot oil" goes by tanker to Atlantic and Pacific Coast points, and the Federal Government has attempted in vain to get the courts to enjoin landing of such cargoes.

A number of oil company executives felt earlier this month when the gasoline price structure began to crumble in various places that they were at the end of the rope. They were ready to cut crude oil prices, in order to maintain their refiners' margin. Administrator Ickes convinced them to postpone action until he could launch a new drive to enforce Federal proration orders in east Texas, while trying at the same time to perfect cooperation with State authorities. Accordingly, Department of the Interior, Internal Revenue and Department of Justice agents have been mobilized in east Texas, and new machinery set up without a willingness by the courts to grant injunctions freely. However, oil men doubt seriously that this new drive can can be materially more successful.

Meanwhile, many executives in the industry assert privately that a short period of unrestricted production and unlimited price cutting alone can bring home to State authorities and individual operators the need for a more effective and fundamental remedy for the ills of the industry.

Few have such confidence in such devices as the short-lived "pool-buying plan," whereby major companies bought distress gasoline, much of it produced from or in competition with "hot oil," from small refiners. This merely stimulated "hot oil" output by assuring a market for its product. Current proposals to shut down Texas oil fields entirely for a period, as former Gov. Murray once did in Oklahoma, also would be a temporary and futile palliative only.

Carriers and Utilitiers Still Toward High; Sales, 10,884,000.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—The bond market held steadily around recently established levels today with prime railroad and utility issues moving higher. Direct United States Government loans recorded modest advances.

Transfers aggregated $10,884,000, par value, compared with $10,911,000 on Monday. The turnover in Governments totaled around $3,170,000 against $4,670,000.

Carriers And Utilities.

Gilt-edged carrier and utility bonds continued to move slowly toward their 1934 highs. American Telephone debenture 5½s were ⅝ higher, at 112¾; Brooklyn Edison 5s advanced ⅛ to 109¾, and Detroit Edison 5s improved ⅛ to 109. Similar gains were made by some obligations of Chesapeake & Ohio, New England Telephone, Public Service Gas & Electric, Pennsylvania, Reading, Northern States Power and Union Pacific.

Cleveland & Pittsburgh 3½s showed an extreme gain of 10½ points to 101½ on a few transactions.

Gains of around a point were scattered among lower priced issues. Canadian Pacific debenture 4s were 1½ higher at 82, Florida East Coast 4½s advanced 2¼ to 60 and Colorado & Southern 4½s improved 1¾ at 73. Higher prices also were paid for obligations of Pere Marquette, Rio Grande Western, Southern Railway, Utah Light & Traction, Gotham Silk Hosiery, Albany Paper Works, International Paper, McCrory Stores, New York Railways, Crown Zellerbach and North American Edison.

Home Loan Offering.

The syndicate handling the new $50,000,000 issue of Home Owners Loan 3s announced that around $35,000,000 of these bonds had been distributed up to noon today and that the books were expected to be closed in another 24 hours.

The Government bond list made minor gains in all groups except the Home Owners Loan and Federal Farm Mortgage issues, all of which yielded one thirty-second to three thirty-seconds of a point. Most of the new HOLC 3s were sold at around 97 twenty thirty-seconds, although as high as 98 was paid in the initial transactions Monday.

Curb's Prices Turn Weak Under Selling

Oils, Utilities Are Narrow as Sales Increase to 152,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 23 (AP).—Metals and some specialties were inclined to heaviness on the Curb Exhange today. Other groups, including oils and utilities, were comparatively narrow. Trading volume increased rather substantially.

Prices were slightly mixed at the start of the session. Light offerings appeared near the end of the first hour. Selling soon subsided, but was renewed in the late trading.

Lake Shore dipped nearly 3 points, while Newmont Mining receded 1⅜. Hiram Walker lost 1½, but other alcohol shares were quiet. Fajardo Sugar dropped 4 points, while Aluminum Co. of America yielded half as much. Pioneer Gold and Wright Hargreaves sold slightly lower.

American Cyanamid B, Electric Bond & Share, Creole Petroleum, Sherwin-Williams, Swift & Co., Swift Internacionale, Teck-Hughes and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams all finished steady. American Gas & Electric, Charis Corporation and Glen Alden Coal were moderately higher.

Commodity Markets Register First Upturn in Three Weeks

New York, Oct. 23.—With grains, cotton and silver leading, the general trend in commodity markets turned upward in the week just ended, aided by the revival of inflation rumors, a favorable crop report and the improvement in the statistical position of many commodities.

Advances in the latest period exceeded declines for the first time in three weeks, according to the summary of wholesale prices, as compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. Advances numbered 28, as against only 20 last week and 5 in the same week a year ago. Declines totaled 19, compared with 36 in the previous week and 62 in the corresponding week of last year.

The advance in cash markets also was reflected in the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Commodity Index, which rose from 114.81 on October 8 to 116.24 on October 15, an increase of 1.2 per cent. At this position the current index shows a gain of 21.8 per cent over the 95.46 level of a year ago.

Gains Outnumber Falls.

In marked contrast to the recent weakness, foodstuffs displayed especial strength, with the group as a whole, showing more advances than declines for the first time in three weeks. In the actual coffee market, fairly good buying was noted, with prices closing unchanged and firm.

In addition to the 850,000 bags recently withdrawn from Brazilian port stocks for destruction, an additional 500,000 bags of pledged coffee also is reported due for destruction, depending on instruction from bankers.

World visible supply of coffee, including restricted stocks in Brazil, amounted to 21,827,957 bags on October 1, a drop of 983,005 bag from the September 1 total and the smallest October 1 figures since 1929.

Trading in the butter market broadened and supplies in wholesale channels cleared well. Prices declined early in the week, but top grades recovered later, bringing the quotation for 92 score extra to 26½ cents, a gain of 1½ cents over its previous position.

Fresh mixed-colored eggs showed an irregular trend, with closing prices about ¼c per dozen higher, while refrigerators declined, owing to lack of demand. Fancy white eggs advanced 1c per dozen, with supplies very small.

Grain Market Rise.

Sharp advances were noted in the domestic grain markets, erasing some of the recent losses. Visible supplies continued to decrease, and the latest Government crop report confirmed the exceptionally favorable statistical position of the leading grains.

Farm reserves of wheat, corn and oats on October 1 also were reported substantially smaller than a year ago. All cash grains were quoted higher than a week earlier. Corn showed the largest advance, with a gain of 3¾c, followed by a rise of 3c for oats, 2¾ for barley, 2¾ for wheat, and 2¼ for rye. The improvement in wheat prices stimulated demand for flour and closing prices showed an advance of 15c to 20c per barrel over a week ago.

Receipts of live stock in leading markets, especially those of hogs and sheep, increased in the latest period. Hogs ruled lower, despite Government purchasing, while cattle remained unchanged in price, with trade more active at the close.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

(Associated Press.)

The position of the Treasury October 20 was: Receipts, $11,109,386.75; expenditures, $26,410,063.65; balance, $71,209,808.81; customs receipts for the month, $21,212,127.32.

Wheat Values Gain Slightly Under Buying

Weaker Prices of Corn Affect Trends of Other Grains in Market.

Chicago, Oct. 23 (AP).—Wheat prices gained fractions today on buying stimulated by bullish foreign news, but corn showed weakness and acted as a drag on the market.

Gains of as much as 1¼ cents in wheat were whittled down in the closing hour as holders let some of their recent purchases slip in sympathy with falling corn values. Liquidation pressure in the corn pit was in evidence throughout the session.

The early spurt of wheat buying followed a sharp recovery of the Liverpool market in which price losses were erased and replaced by closing gains of 1 to 1¼ cents. Firmness at Buenos Aires and Winnipeg also encouraged local buying that continued until profit taking appeared near the close.

Corn Prices Lose.

The day's advances in wheat ranged from ¼ to ¾ cent a bushel, with May closing at 97¾-⅞ cents after touching a high of 98⅝. Corn showed a net ⅛ to ⅞ cent loss, May going to 76¾-⅞. Other grains were about steady.

At times the wheat market disclosed a distinct lack of selling pressure. Much attention was given to weather and crop news from Argentina where good rains were reported.

In some quarters there was comment that a period of dry weather might now be beneficial to the Argentine crop. One observer said the wet, warm weather prevailing there is not the type which formerly produced large crops.

Private reports of the appearance of red rust in some Argentine sections, while attracting bulls, were largely discounted by authorities who expressed no apprehension.

Basis for Futures.

Some supply of all important cereals was cited as a basis for futures purchases. A Canadian source asserted feeding of wheat to livestock in Dominion drought areas was in evidence.

The belief that the corn market was over bought caused longs to trim their holdings. Some quarters pointed out that mild fall weather apparently has reduced corn consumption and word from the Southwest indicated the new winter wheat crop is being pastured.

Nat C. Murray, a crop authority, estimated that if Argentina's entire surplus of corn and oats was brought into the United States it would only raise the total domestic supply from 53 per cent to less than 55 per cent of average.

Provisions were dull and about steady, little attention being paid a report that Germany had lowered the import duty on lard.

Dairy Industry Gains Soundest Basis In Years

Advance of Prices Aids all Branches; Output Is Reduced.

New York, Oct. 23.—While the adverse effects of the severest drought in a century may have wrought havoc with some branches of commercial endeavor, these developments proved fortuitous for the dairy industry, which has been enabled to gain the soundest footing in several years.

The resulting decreased production, with the accompanying price advances has benfited all divisions of the industry, even though higher costs of operation have tended to reduce net income of some of the distributors.

The leading creameries are being operated on the most economical basis ever achieved, due to the new equipment being installed, and unfair competitive methods have been reduced greatly since the adoption of the codes.

Milk Consumption Gains.

Gains in consumption of milk and the various dairy products generally are indicated in all parts of the country, and sales, as a whole, have risen to dollar totals from 10 to 25 per cent higher than those of a year ago, with unit sales also higher.

The large inventory write-offs made necessary at the end of 1933, because of the low prices, give evidence of being replaced at the close of the current year by moderate profits, in view of the more favorable statistical position of the industry.

Although extensive fall rains have revived pasturage and helped the late forage crops, the production of milk is expected to decline rather abruptly during the late winter months, because of the reduced rations which will be made necessary in most districts.

Amount of Feed Required.

As the combined number of live stock and poultry on farms is estimated at 119,449,000 grain-consuming units, 63,678,000 tons of feed grain and commercial feed will be required to carry this number of animals even on reduced rations until the new crops will have become available.

As the estimated total of feed-grain and mill-fed supply for feeding purposes on September 1 was estimated at only 60,600,000 tons, this leaves an indicated shortage of about 3,000,000 tons of feed grains, which must be met either by further adjustments in feeding or by importation, according to a survey of the dairy industry, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

The Federal Diar

L. W. (Chip) Robert, jr., center, seated, conferring with other members of the committee in charge of Community Chest campaign for the Treasury Department. With him are, left to right, H. R. Sheppard, assistant to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury W. C. Cram, jr., special assistant to Mr. Robert, and F. A. Birgfeld, chief clerk.

UNDER direction of the L. W. (Chip) Robert, jr., Assistant Secretary, the Treasury Department expects to be the first major Federal unit to reach its quota in the 1935 Community Chest drive. Mr. Robert, on completion of organization of his workers, announces the following assistants:

BAKER.

W. C. Cram, jr. special assistant to the unit vice chairman, and H. R. Sheppard, assistant to the unit vice chairman.

Assistant Vice Chairmen F. A. Birgfeld, chief clerk, Treasury; James E. Harper, chief, Appointment Division; W. H. Moran, chief, United States Secret Service; L. C. Spangler, chief, Division of Supply; William S. Broughton, Commissioner of Public Debt; D. W. Bell, Commissioner of Accounts and Deposits; J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency; William Alexander Julian, Treasurer of the United States; James H. Moyle, Commissioner of Customs; Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint; H. J. Anslinger, Commissioner of Narcotics; Alvin W. Hall, director, Bureau of Engraving and Printing; Hugh S. Cumming, Surgeon General, Public Health Service; Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, commandant, Coast Guard, and Rear Admiral C. J. Peoples, director, Procurement Division.

Some conception of the size of this undertaking may be gained from the fact that Treasury employes, both permanent and temporary, now number nearly 17,000 with a total pay roll of approximately $30,400,000.

Within a remarkbly short time Mr. Robert has prevailed upon the heads of the bureau and offices to serve as assistant vice chairmen, who, in turn, have designated 85 alert employes to act as division chairmen. Under these division chairmen some 420 additional hand-picked employes will serve as keymen. On this basis no keyman will be required to solicit more than 40 employes.

Mr. Robert has arranged a mass meeting to be held November 7 in the Commerce Department auditorium, which will be addressed by Secretary Morgenthau.

Both Mr. Robert and Mr. Cram have been active in the Atlanta Community Chest campaigns. He is most enthusiastic in supporting the chest here, regarding it as essential to the welfare of the poor and less fortunate.

Harold Durkin (*), Identification Unit, Justice, is receiving congratulations upon his recent marriage to Miss Estelle Holt. Mr. Durkin was selected as the typical young man of New York State in the Federal Diary's parade of the States last summer.

J. S. Wade Is Author.

J. S. Wade, associate entomologist, Division of Cereal and Forage Insects, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, is the author of a 100-page book, "An Annotated Bibliography of the Hessian Fly, Phytophaga, Destructor (Say)," just issued at Agriculture.

It presents results of some 18 years of collection by the compiler in a number of the larger public libraries. Mr. Wade, who has been connected with the Bureau since 1913, is a recognized authority in entomological bibliography. He is a member of several scientific societies and for the past two years has held the position of corresponding secretary of the Biological Society of Washington.

IN the appointment of F. F. Hill as deputy governor of Farm Credit Administration, it is recalled that he was brought to Washington when the FCA was first organized to assist in the statistical work. He was made assistant deputy governor last July.

A native of Kansas, Mr. Hill spent 12 years in western Canada on a wheat farm. In 1924 he came East to Cornell University to take graduate work. In 1927 he joined the staff of the Federal Land Bank of Springfield, Mass., as statistician in land utilization and land classification in New York State. In his new capacity he will have charge of the Division of Finance and Research.

Employes of Interstate Commerce Commission have scheduled their annual "Harvest Moon Ball" November 13 to coincide with the National convention of railroad and utilities commissioners, which will be held in Washington the week of November 12.

On the Air Today

By George M. Adams, Jr.

IT has been demonstrated frequently that Washington is a veritable hive of radio talent. All that it needs to flower is a chance, such as that offered by WJSV starting Saturday at 7 p. m. with a new half-hour commercial spot devoted to anything that can be heard over the air.

Come one, come all. Men, women and youngsters are invited to appear at WJSV's studios Friday nights for auditions, from which will be selected the six best acts for presentation the following night. The judges will be Lee Everett, program director; Courtland Ferguson, and local radio editors.

Whether you've been heard on networks or not, doesn't matter . . . so long as you've got a good lusty voice or some sort of act adaptable to radio. Your ability will be examined by Mr. Everett, who is putting the show together.

Listeners are invited to pick a winner each week from Saturday's show and at the end of 13 weeks, the duration of the contest, prizes will be awarded by the sponsors, George's Radio Company.

* * * *

JACK BENNY'S subtle voice inflections and suave wit currently lending themselves to lampooning of things official and political at the National further prove that he's a smart comedian . . . is so regarded on the air . . . even though surrounded by such fantastic frolicking as observed by this writer in "Bring On the Girls."

After he ends a week among the political nabobs, Benny will be ready to discuss authoritatively goings-on in the Nation's Capital when he returns to N. B. C. networks Sunday at 7 p. m. with Mary Livingstone, Frank Parker, Don Wilson and Don Bestor's Orchestra.

"STRICK" GILLILAN, news interpreter who recently started his commentations on WOL at 7:45 p. m., is being held in abeyance by A. B. S. to allow Harry Hershfield, humorist, a chance at story-telling for a while.

This doesn't mean Strick is off WOL. He is under contract, we understand. But Hershfield, who is widely known for his toastmastering, will merely deliver his opinions and comments on politics, economics, love, art, music and cooking until A. B. S. sees what he knows.

STRONG stuff is being warmed up by Ronald Dawson and his Northern Dramatic Company Players with a four-week version of Ibsen's "The Master Builder," starting tomorrow on WOL at 6:45 p. m.

Dawson has gone to some trouble in preparing the adaptation and he's assembled a smart group of players. Leading them will be a newcomer, Ruth Perrott, heard so effectively last week in "The Actress." She will be supported by Charles C. Gilman, Yerby Pannill, Mr. Dawson, Harold Rose, Clare Sargent and Lamport Hill. Miss Sargent and Mr. Hill will do the narrations with impersonations of Kay Francis and Leslie Howard.

Lawrence Tibbett (protesting against "musical snobs")—"I honestly feel that the popular music being composed by Americans is incomparably the best in the world today."

Rosa Ponselle (Metropolitan opera star)—"There are good songs so much above the understanding of some people that to sing them means to create boredom."

Annette Hanshaw (soloist)—"I have never been able to understand why songs of lament are called 'blue' songs."

Will Rogers (with C. B. S. Sundays)—"Talking once on the radio, where there's no big audience, is harder than doing ten performances of a stage play or making a whole moving picture."

Strange as it seems, the three propellers that carried the famous round-the-world Southern Cross on its noted flight were made of ordinary cotton cloth. Yet in many respects they were the best possible propellers available for conditions met in the trip.

The material for the propellers was made of layers of ordinary cotton canvas, impregnated with certain chemical compounds and then pressed to the hardness and strength of steel. They were better than steel, however, because they resisted the corrosive effect of salt sprays encountered during ocean flights.

Twenty-two centuries ago Euclid of Alexandria, a mathematician interested in geometric investigations, wrote his Elements of Geometry in 13 (perhaps 15) volumes—and even today this monumental work is still studied in schools throughout the world. Six of the volumes written by Euclid are generally incorporated into modern texts on the subject. Euclid, whose name has become synonymous with geometry, is known as the "father of geometry."

HOLLYWOOD HIGHLIGHTS BY Betty Crocker
TUNE IN WRC 10:45 WED. A.M.

Oh, look! See the little bride. What is the little bride doing? She is baking a cake, a lovely Lady Baltimore cake with gorgeous icing all covered with cherries and nice things.

But won't her cake be terrible, and won't her husband pay the janitor to haul it away?

Of course not. It will be a very good cake, and her husband will eat three slices. He will boast about her cooking and he will invite the Boss out to dinner some evening. Then he will get a raise (maybe).

You see, this little bride is a constant reader of Dorothea Duncan's column on cookery in The Washington Post each morning. So she knows all about cookery now. Her cakes never fall and her biscuits are better than those mother used to make. Oh, much better.

For Dorothea Duncan is not only a good cook; she's also an excellent teacher, and it's her job to teach the young brides (and older housewives, too) how to make strawberry shortcakes, and beef stews, and candied sweet potatoes, and lamb roasts. Each day she discusses new phases of the culinary arts, and when a bride reads her column and follows her advice, that bride is perfectly at home on the range.

Because of Dorothea Duncan, indigestion is now a thing of the past in many Washington households, and Junior (thank goodness) has been tempted into eating his spinach. Her practical menus make the meals brighter, and actually lessen the labor of preparing them. Too, you'll find she knows all about the newest kitchenware and appliances.

Miss Duncan's excellent advice on cookery is found each day on the Household Pages of The Washington Post. Why not turn to her column right now?

Walt Mason, Himself

Long Stories.

They're printing long, long stories now, great volumes of a modern birth; the author overworks his brow to give us all our money's worth, Five hundred pages, often six, the reader has to struggle through, and follow all the author's tricks before the finish is in view. Three generations, sometimes four, live out their lives in such a tome; the author's apt to be a bore before he brings the bacon home. I've tried a dozen times to read fat volumes of this useful kind, and halfway through I would proceed, and then give up the beastly grind. There's seldom action in such books, they drone along their quiet way, describing dowagers and cooks and fashions of a bygone day. The characters cut little grass, they watch their lives go drifting by; their balmy afternoons they pass in conversation trite and dry. Such books are published now and then, and often get the critic's praise; they are a boon to thoughtful men, they are a credit to these days. Each one is called a masterpiece, and it is sold by scores and scores, booksellers have to call police, to handle crowds around their doors. But soon the boomlet fizzles out, the bookman's looking rather sick; and once again the buying scout demands "The Life of Deadwood Dick." We have been trained to shorter books, we have been trained to brisker stuff; when reading in our inglenooks, three hundred pages are enough.

JENNIFER HALE

By Bob Eden

Suspected of the murder of David Corey, Jennifer Hale changes her name to Mary Dixon and flees to Seattle because, though innocent, she can not face the notoriety involved. Parker Ives, friend of the murdered man, knows her whereabouts; he sends her $1,000 and urges her to go still further away. She meets Kent Severn, who gives her a job in his father's lumber company and falls in love with her. Through one of the girls in the office, Nita, she meets Andy Young and is alarmed to discover he is a detective.

AT midnight, Andy got a little sentimental. The change came so suddenly that Mary wasn't prepared for it.

"You must think I'm a queer bird, Mary. Maybe I am. Talking like this about myself all evening, for hours. Honestly, I didn't mean to. I meant to tell you right off that I liked you and wanted to see more of you. It's hard for me to talk like this, because I never have before—girls never meant much to me before, but I knew the minute I saw you that I liked you. If you have a little time for me once in a while I'll appreciate it—more than you'll ever know. I guess I never realized before that I was lonely, always had so much to do that I couldn't think about that. Well, what do you say? Will you go out with me when you feel like it?"

"I will, Andy." She didn't want to offend him because he was too important in her life and she wasn't afraid of him so much after what he had said. For she had discovered that, although Andy Young might be very, very clever, he hadn't been clever enough yet to discover that Mary Dixon was Jennifer Hale. His impulse to meet her had been a sincere one, she was sure. He really liked her and wanted to know her better.

The dark blue leather purse was in the top left-hand drawer of Mary's desk. There was nothing unusual about that, for that was the place where she always kept it. The contents this afternoon, however, were unusual, so unusual that the girl opened the drawer every little while to see whether the bag was still there.

In the street car this morning she had hugged it to her body closely. In the locker room when she was taking off her hat, her wrist was through the strap at the back. At lunch, she had sat on it, so that she could be sure it was safe.

Tonight she would have to make some other arrangements for the $1,000 Parker Ives had sent her, but today, she could do nothing but to carry it around with her.

She realized the danger, of course, for if she mislaid the purse, and someone found it, she might have to explain the package of bills. A simple stenographer didn't carry $1,000 around with her. Mary had never had so much money before at one time, had never seen so much money, and the responsibility of it was terrible.

The package seemed so innocent when Mrs. Bennett met her in the hall, as she came in from work last evening. "Mailman brought a package for you, but it was too big to get into your box so I said I'd give it to you."

He Is Worried.

Mary had taken the package, which was the size of a small cigar box, and thanked Mrs. Bennett. She thought of Parker as soon as she saw the Los Angeles post mark, but his handwriting wasn't on the plain brown paper wrapping. Her name and address were typewritten. There was no sender's name. In her room, she opened the package, and when the wrapping was off, she found a cigar box. Inside this was a note, and under the note bills, smelling mildly of tobacco. The bills were not new—they were old, and their denominations were all the same—tens. One hundred of them in the box.

The note was in Parker's handwriting. "Dear Mary. I am worrying about you—for fear something may happen and you may have to leave Seattle in a hurry, and won't have enough money to get away. You'll find $1,000 in this box—and I was careful to get old bills for you so if you have to use them, they won't look suspicious. All the bills are tens. Don't put the money in a bank, hide it somewhere in your flat, or carry it around with you so that at any time you need it you'll have it. It's a stake in case anything happens. I feel D. would do the same for you if he were in my place. As it is I'm only trying to put myself in his place. Don't write, whatever you do. I've got a feeling the police are watching my mail on the hunch that you might try to communicate with me. They're thoroughly familiar with your handwriting. If you need more money, wire me, and sign your wire L. O. Maynard."

Key in Her Purse.

Mary burned the note as soon as she read it, but she couldn't burn the bills. Comforting to know she did have a stake—decent of Parker to send the money, but what would she do with it? Where would she hide it?

There was the chance that Mrs. Bennett might come into the apartment when she was gone, even if she had no right to enter. Today she would surely come in with the telephone men who were going to install a private phone in 318. Mrs. Bennett wouldn't miss a chance like that, but Mary was prepared for her today. The closet which held the bed and her clothes was locked—if that meant security—and the key reposed in her purse against the brown paper package that held the bills.

Where could she hide them when she got home? Under the rug? Sew them into a curtain? A few bills would be easy to manage, but this packet wasn't a small one, for the bills were old and didn't pack neatly. Her purse, which was not small, bulged with them.

Some place in the apartment was a hiding place—a safe hiding place, if she could only think of it. The little cannister that held her flour? Of course.

She could take out the flour, put the package at the bottom of the cannister, replace the flour, and the bills would be fairly safe. Delighted with her discovery, she didn't notice a tall middle aged woman sweep into the office, and go up to one of the girls near the door. She didn't even look up when the woman walked briskly across the room, and up to her desk.

"You're Miss Dixon, I'm told——"

"Relatives Coming."

"I'm Kent's mother, Miss Dixon," Mrs. Severn smiled, a brittle smile with very little warmth in it. The girl rose.

"I was in the building so I thought I'd come to see you instead of phoning this evening. I'm having a little house party this weekend at Bainbridge for the boys and I want you to come." The smile remained set on her lips, on her face even when she was talking. "Kent doesn't know about it yet—I'm on my way in to tell him. Then I can count on you?"

"This week-end? I—I'm sorry, but I've some relatives coming in, Mrs. Severn, and I'm afraid——"

"Oh, Miss Dixon, surely you can plan to come! It won't be anything elaborate—just a few couples. We don't close up the Bainbridge house, you know, during the fall and winter, but we don't have any big parties there. Of course you can come. Your relatives will understand perfectly." Mrs. Severn wasn't used to have her invitations turned down — especially by stenographers. Besides, it was important that Miss Dixon come to the house party. It was part of the scheme she had evolved last evening—the only way she could see to bring Kent to his senses. Mrs. Severn was proud of her plan, for it contained not a little strategy. With her younger son, frank disapproval would have no success. Pretended approval, until she found out something about the girl, was the only way.

"Of course you can come, Miss Dixon. I won't take no for an answer. Both Mr. Severn and myself want to know you—we're always interested in the girls Kent likes, and he's talked a good deal about you." The girl would tell Kent this, Mrs. Severn thought, and that would be all the better. Both of them would think she highly approved of their friendship. She held out her hand to Mary again, and once more the girl felt the smooth, suede-gloved fingers in hers.

Mrs. Severn's next errand was into her son's office, where she told him about the house party.

Kent was taken in entirely. "You're a brick, mother. Nicest thing you ever did for me!" he exclaimed.

"I want you to be happy, son, and I'd like to know Miss Dixon better."

"You'll like her, I know——"

"I'm sure I shall."

Clara Severn's third errand was up to the eleventh floor where she saw her husband. He was a little doubtful about the practicability of the house party, but he was so used to leaving social affairs to his wife that he decided after a few moments that she must be right. Kent couldn't be driven. He was stubborn. The best way to do was what Clara suggested, pretend to accept this Miss Dixon, and while they were pretending, try to find out something about her.

Detective Agency.

"And I'm going to do this thing properly, Henry," Mrs. Severn said firmly. "She's too pretty a girl to fuss around with long, and Kent is half in love with her now. I saw that when I told him about the house party. The quicker I get busy, the better. What's the name of that firm of detectives you sometimes use?"

Henry Severn didn't know right off, but he sent for his secretary, and she furnished the name. Young and Maddigan, Metropolitan Building. Mrs. Severn wrote it down carefully in her little gold memorandum book which her purse was never without.
